I-90 project opposed by 2

by JILL BETTNER

Opposition to the proposed I-90 interchange at Blesterfield Road, Elk Grove Village, surfaced Wednesday night at a meeting conducted by Illinois Dept. of Transportation officials.

The session was the first in a series of meetings scheduled by the department on plans for the interchange that still is several years away.

Although the majority of comments offered by members of the audience of about 30 was favorable, two Elk Grove Village residents voiced concerns that the interchange may create some new traffic problems as well as solving old ones.

DR. THOMAS McNamara, 1000 Cheltenham Rd., countered arguments that the interchange is needed to reduce the traveling time of emergency vehicles to Alexian Brothers Medical Center.

Hospital officials headed a campaign for the interchange last year, citing the fact that an interchange at Blesterfield Road would cut travel time of ambulances coming from the north and west by about five minutes.

"With the presence of paramedics in most communities in this area, I seriously doubt that a few minutes less getting to the hospital will make any difference," McNamara said. "This interchange would bring major traffic through the very heart of Elk Grove Village, creating noise pollution, air pollution and a tremendous safety hazard."

ANOTHER WOMAN, who did not want to be identified, said she thought that Elk Grove Village officials support the interchange because it will accommodate the 2 million to 3 million persons per year expected to visit the winter sports development under construction in the Ned Brown Forest Preserve.

"The thing that really annoys me is that there has been no discussion on behalf of residents on what opening this interchange is going to do to traffic on Blesterfield Road," she said. "I'm concerned about our children. Traffic on Blesterfield is bad enough now."

Joseph Zgonina, Schaumburg village engineer, said Schaumburg officials support construction of the interchange, but think Blesterfield Road should be extended at the same time to Wise Road.

Planners weigh incentives for upgraded landscaping

The Elk Grove Village Plan Commission is considering a proposal giving builders the right to put more buildings on an acre in exchange for better landscaping and recreation facilities around the buildings.

The commission Wednesday reviewed an amendment to the R-4 district planned development ordinance that would permit increased density per acre if builders applied various environmental incentives.

The number of dwelling units per acre could be increased to eight units per acre instead of the six units ordinances call for now. A combination of housing types could be used.

Several of the environmental incentives are:

- Dedication of large public park sites exceeding the established 10 per cent dedication as required under present policy.

- Good building grouping and site location that would include clustering of buildings to allow larger open areas.

- Provisions for courtyards, gardens, patios, riding, hiking and bicycling paths and landscaped buffer strips on all peripheral lot lines.

- Mature landscaping and interior screen planting and fencing.

In addition to traditional recreational facilities such as a community center building, builders are urged to include tennis courts, lakes, playground equipment, pools sculpture, fountains and reflecting pools.

The amendment also suggests that 50 per cent of parking lots be underground or in garages, and that parking lots be designed with landscaped islands and screening.

The commission has been reviewing an amendment to its present planned development ordinance for several months and it is expected the amendment will apply to Contex Homes Corp.'s plans for development of acreage west of Rte. 53. The builder is petitioning the commission for approval of a 665-acre tract west of Meacham Road. The development is planned as a housing mix of single-family and multi-story buildings.

Court rules against Des Plaines

Plea to block funds for plant fails

U.S. District Court Judge Thomas R. McMillen denied a motion by Des Plaines Wednesday to block the use of $136.5 million in federal funds for construction of the O'Hare Water Reclamation Plant.

City Corporation Counsel Robert DiLeonardi argued that the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency and the Metropolitan Sanitary District should be prevented from using any of the grant authorized Monday for the plant until after another suit brought by Des Plaines is settled.

"I don't want to see anything done that cannot be recalled by the court later," DiLeonardi said.

HOWEVER, ATTORNEYS for the EPA and MSD argued that the grant authorization and a meeting planned for today by the MSD to accept the grant offer did not constitute any immediate action.

"The government won't be disbursing any funds, and the district will only be acting to advertise for bids for the project," said James B. Murray, an attorney for the MSD.

McMillen denied the injunction request and indicated he did not see a need for immediate action.

The judge also indicated he did not want to do anything that might cause the district to lose the federal funds which represent 75 per cent of the cost of the $182 million plant and a related series of deep tunnels.

THE MSD HAD until June 30 to obtain final approval from the EPA for the project or face the possibility of losing the federal funding for the project this year.

The MSD got the approval, but Des Plaines officials argue the EPA ignored a number of details regarding the environmental impact the plant will have on nearby residential areas in an effort to meet the deadline.

The plant, which will be built on a 104-acre tract at the southeast corner of Oakton Street and Elmhurst Road, will serve Des Plaines, Mount Prospect, Elk Grove Village, Arlington Heights, Wheeling, Buffalo Grove and Rolling Meadows.

Village Atty. Edward Hofert of Elk Grove Village has indicated his community will join with the MSD to prevent any additional delays in construction.

MSD OFFICIALS say the facility will take about 3½ years to construct. The city also expanded its suit against the MSD and the EPA to ask that McMillen review the final environmental impact statement prepared by the EPA on the project.

The new complaint charges the EPA omitted more than 30 separate facts from the final environmental impact statement and that these facts have a bearing on the final approval of the facility.

Included in the complaint is a recommendation by an EPA study team to move the plant to another site. The recommendation was suppressed by EPA officials who later said the recommendation represented only a preliminary view. However, the recommendation was prepared only a week before the agency began preparing the environmental impact statement.

OTHER OMISSIONS from the report include testimony by several city officials, State Sen. David Regner, R-Mount Prospect, and U.S. Rep. Philip M. Crane, R-12th.

McMillen also indicated he will prepare to rule next month on several motions filed with the original suit.

The city contends the MSD must follow its health ordinance for construction and operation of a sewage-treatment plant as a condition for receiving federal funds for the project.

MSD and EPA attorneys have asked the suit be dismissed, contending the court does not have jurisdiction over the plant.

Dems, GOP join to kill plan for Congress remap

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (UPI) — Republicans and Independent Democrats combined Wednesday to kill a regular Democratic plan which would have redrawn the boundaries of the state's 24 Congressional districts.

The vote was 84-82. The two deciding votes were cast at the last minute by followers of Rep. Clyde Chaste, D-Anna, who was defeated in a bid for the speakership last January when his party leaders deserted him.

The vote came on a parliamentary technicality — a motion to "strike the enacting clause" of the bill which would have drawn the new map. Such a motion requires only a majority of those voting on the question for passage — the least stringent requirement for killing a bill.

The only remaining way the new map could be revived apparently would be by grafting it onto another bill already in the legislative pipeline.

THE MAP'S major changes would have been in the boundaries of the 12 Chicago-area districts. Critics charged, among other things, that it would have forced Democratic Congressman Abner Mikva of Evanston to move to a new district or face the likelihood of losing his seat.

Congressmen from both parties testified against the plan in the House Executive Committee.

The motion to strike the enacting clause was filed by Reps. William Walsh, R-LaGrange Park, and W. Timothy Simms, R-Rockford.

Walsh, arguing in favor of the unusual procedure, said it represented "the only way we can beat the bill. And the bill richly deserves to be beaten."

Walsh said the bill's sponsor, House Democratic Leader Gerald Shea of Riverdale, had lined up more than enough votes to adopt one amendment he favored, to beat other attempts at amendment and to pass the bill.

The roll call dragged out for more than an hour as dozens of members explained their votes and the presence of those voting was verified.

AFTER VERIFICATION, the roll stood at 82-82, which would have resulted in defeat of the motion. However, Reps. Richard Hart, D-Benton, and Bruce Richmond, D-Murphysboro, then dramatically changed their votes from "present" to "yes," passing the motion.

Hart and Richmond both were part of the small bloc which voted for Chaste for speaker through 93 roll calls this January, even after Shea and other followers of Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley abandoned Chaste's candidacy. Chaste himself was not in the House Wednesday night and did not vote on the motion.

Several representatives usually found in Gov. Daniel Walker's corner on important issues voted for the new map despite the governor's repeated denunciation of it. One, Rep. James Houlihan, D-Chicago, voted "no" on the motion at a critical time in an apparent attempt to change others' votes.

Plea to block MSD plant fails

A federal judge Wednesday refused to issue an injunction against the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency and the Metropolitan Sanitary District prohibiting use of funds to build the controversial O'Hare Water Reclamation Plant in the city. Denial of the request by U.S. District Court judge Thomas R. McMillen means the plant is even closer to beginning construction and another loss for Des Plaines officials who for years have been fighting the project.

C&NW accident kills boy, 10

A 10-year-old Palatine boy was struck and killed by a Chicago and North Western Ry. passenger train Wednesday night. The boy was killed while apparently watching the train from a dirt path near Washington and Oak streets. Police identified the boy as Patrick McCarthy, son of John McCarthy, 301 N. Fremont St.

Tornado alert doesn't work

Chamber merger by year's end?

The four-year-old question of merger of the Schaumburg and Hoffman Estates chambers of commerce may be resolved by the end of the year. Members of both organizations are working toward merger of the two groups and the expected result would be a larger and more influential voice for businessmen in the area.

Link seen in busboy thefts

A holdup gang that preys on Mexican busboys in the suburbs may be responsible for the robbery of two Old Orchard Country Club busboys this week, police believe. Stories of such a gang — lead by a woman — have surfaced in the Northwest and West suburbs for some months. This time, three Mexicans, armed with a gun and two knives, robbed the two busboys near Old Orchard Country Club. Witnesses said the three got into a car which may have been driven by a woman.

Oil countries' price hike would be disruptive: Ford

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford said Wednesday an oil price increase of $2 to $4 per barrel this fall by the oil-producing nations would be "very disruptive and totally unacceptable."

The threatened increase by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries would hurt this country, hurt Europe and Japan, hurt the underdeveloped countries of the world — and ultimately hurt OPEC members themselves, Ford said at a news conference.

Ford left hanging his statement that an OPEC price hike this fall would be "unacceptable" and whether he meant that to be taken as a threat or some form of retaliation. Asked what he meant by "unacceptable," he said, "It means unacceptable in the sense that we as a nation — and we, in conjunction with our allies — are going to find some answers other than foreign oil" if the price is raised.

A pleased Ford met reporters in 91-degree weather on the White House lawn after he won his fourth veto fight with the Democratic 94th Congress on a middle-income home mortgage subsidy bill.

Ford also declared that an unemployment rate of 8 per cent next year — the rate predicted by his own advisers — is "unacceptable."

He said he might ask Congress to extend last March's tax cuts, which are scheduled to expire Dec. 31, through 1978 if the economy still is ailing. Congressional staff experts said such an extension would prevent

U.S. regulatory groups facing reform program

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford and congressional leaders moved Monday to cut through the expensive and time-consuming red tape requirements of federal regulatory agencies.

After the President and 24 senators and representatives met for two hours in the Cabinet room, they told reporters they had agreed on a reform program which will force the agencies — such as the ICC, CAB, FCC and FDA — to better serve the public.

Before Wednesday's meeting began, congressional Democrats said the regulatory system is flawed because the administration has consistently failed to appoint outstanding persons to serve on the panels.

"With rare exceptions, these posts have been parceled out as rewards for political service for president or party, as sinecures for inadequate officials ousted from key policy making roles, as booty prizes for political candidates rejected by the voters," the statement said.

Ford's deputy counsel Roderick W. Hills told reporters the meeting laid the groundwork for Ford to meet with agency chiefs in two weeks and propose the reform drive.

Rep. James Wright summed up the meeting saying regulation has become too expensive and too burdensome on the public.

Most of the so-called "alphabet agencies" were created in the 1930s and 1940s to protect consumers and small businessmen from being abused by services unaffected by the normal play of the marketplace — public utilities, the broadcast airwaves telephone, public transportation, airlines and such.

He said he hoped his advisers were wrong in projecting a high rate of joblessness through 1980.

As for his own political plans, Ford said he would make them without considering whether he will have primary opposition for the 1978 GOP presidential nomination. He said his formal announcement of candidacy will come very soon.

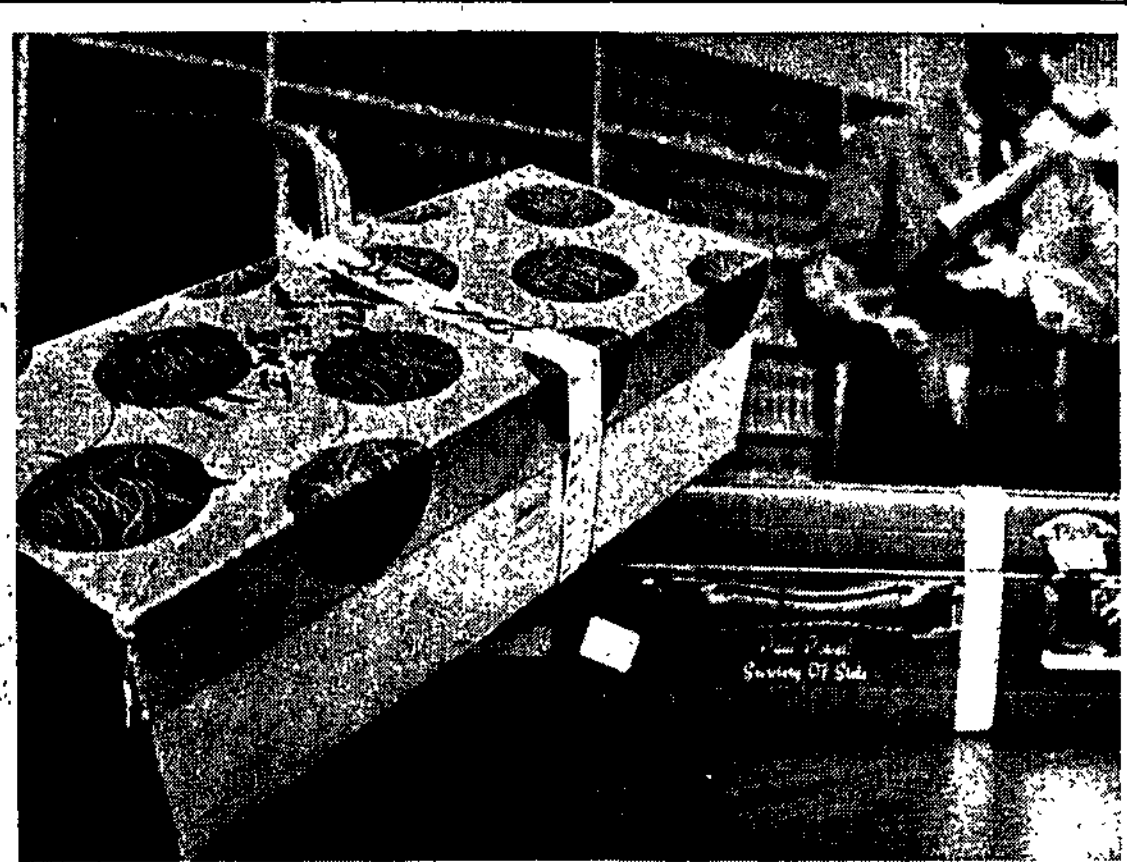

personal income taxes from going up at a rate of $10 billion starting Jan. 1.

But Ford expressed general satisfaction with the economy's performance. "We're licking inflation and we're working on unemployment," he said.

On other matters, Ford said:

- The United States has changed its policies regarding its refusal to be the first to use nuclear weapons in a conflict. He refused to discuss the new policy, except to say it provides for "maximum flexibility for the determination of what is in our own national interest." He refused to rule out the use of tactical nuclear weapons if another war breaks out between North and South Korea.
- There is "no basis" for the recent assertion by former Defense Secretary Melvin R. Laird that the Soviet Union has violated the strategic arms limitation agreement.
- Was pleased about polls showing his popularity climbing. He attributed that to "strong policies" against inflation, and his handling of the Mayaguez affair.

In his remarks on the economy, Ford appeared to stress inflation as a foremost concern.

Paul Powell's infamous shoebox

'Shoebox' returned to Powell estate

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (UPI) — Paul Powell's infamous shoebox was ordered returned to his estate Wednesday — empty, of course.

Sangamon County Circuit Court Judge George Contrakon signed the order giving the estate of the late Illinois secretary of state the shoebox and eight other cash containers which once held some $800,000 in cash.

The containers were found in the closet of Powell's room at the St. Nicholas Hotel in October, 1970, shortly after he died unexpectedly.

A county grand jury had taken possession of the containers as part of its investigation into Powell's wealth, where it came from, and why so much of it was stashed in the closet.

His estate as of last month was valued at $4.16 million and now includes a shoebox, two brown briefcases, a brown suitcase, a gray suitcase, two steel metal boxes, a brown box and one brown folder.

Mid-income housing veto sustained

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House gave President Ford a fourth big veto victory Wednesday, faling by 16 votes to overturn his rejection of a $1.35 billion middle-income housing bill.

The outcome was sure to boost Ford's political stock with conservatives and could further undermine House Speaker Carl Albert's standing with disenchanted Democratic freshmen although Albert labored to reverse a hopeless situation.

The vote was 268 to 157, 16 short of the required two-thirds majority. Thirty-five Democrats voted with Ford while only 19 Republicans broke party ranks — and that made the difference.

Ford, who vetoed the bill Tuesday claiming it was excessive, issued a statement saying the House vote "demonstrates a growing sense of fiscal responsibility in the Congress and the realization... that economic recovery need not be bought at the price of unwise legislation and costly inflation."

The measure would have provided families whose income did not exceed the average in their communities by 20 per cent, with either $1,000 in cash or subsidies to reduce the interest on mortgages on homes costing under $38,000.

The Democrats said it would spur construction of 400,000 homes, creating jobs for 800,000 workers. Without it, said AFL-CIO President George Meany, "the mortgage interest rates will stay high, the money will remain idle, houses won't be built, rents and prices will rise and no new jobs will be created."

Baby's death hikes crash toll to 110

NEW YORK (UPI) — The discovery that a 2-month-old infant not listed on the passenger manifest was aboard Eastern Air Lines' Flight 66 that crashed in a thunder squall near Kennedy Airport raised the death toll to 110 Wednesday.

The baby's body had not been found.

The 727 jetliner, on a nonstop flight from New Orleans, smashed to earth with a thunderous explosion late Tuesday afternoon, scattering bodies and debris across a marshy field and a heavily traveled highway just short of Runway 22-left.

Cause of the crash was still unknown.

Fourteen persons survived the crash. Ten were listed in critical condition.

The toll of 110 victims made the tragedy the second worst single plane crash in U.S. history — only one short of a 1971 crash in Alaska that killed 111.

The infant, Jason Wayne Jenkins, was carried on the flight from New Orleans by his parents, Charles and Glenda Jenkins of Opelousas, La. They were killed along with their other son, 3-year-old Charles Jr.

"The baby boy, Jason Wayne, was with Charles and his wife and the other son," said Jenkin's father, Rosman Jenkins of Opelousas. "All four were on the plane trip."

Recall GE microwave ovens

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Food and Drug Administration Wednesday expanded the first major recall of microwave ovens to include another 12,500 General Electric models that may be leaking heavy doses of radiation.

The units involved are GE and GE-Hotpoint ranges that include both microwave and conventional ovens. The FDA said consumers should cease using the microwave portion until GE can check and correct the defect, something that may not happen until September.

The problem, according to the FDA's Bureau of Radiological Health, is that a wire mesh fitted as a seal around the door is ineffective in keeping radiation in because some of the door frames are warped.

As a result, radiation levels as high as 10 times what the law allows have been detected, the agency said.

The units involved were manufactured from January of 1972 until June of 1973. The GE models are Nos. J996002; J996003; J856003 and J856004. The GE-Hotpoint models are Nos. RHV886002 and RHV886003.

The ovens were sold under the names "Versatronic" and "Cooking Center."

The FDA said GE would begin notifying dealers on July 2, asking for the names and addresses of owners.

Among the dead were veteran New York Nets basketball forward Wendell Landell and the Rt. Rev. Iveson No; land of New Orleans, bishop of the Episcopal Diocese of Louisiana.

The jetliner hurtled to earth in the driving rain and lightning of a summer squall sweeping in from the near by Atlantic.

Just minutes before, an airliner ahead of Flight 66 was diverted to Newark, N.J., airport because of low visibility, a member of the National Transportation Safety Board investigating the crash said Wednesday.

Launch crew begins Apollo tests

An eight-day dress rehearsal began Wednesday for the American launch crew that will send aloft three Apollo astronauts next month to rendezvous with their Russian counterparts. The crew's first major test will come Sunday when the fuel cell aboard the Apollo is activated for the first time. This is the device which will provide power for the spaceship while it is in orbit. Special punishment for gun crimes proposed Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield Wednesday proposed that judges jail and deny bail to persons using guns while committing a crime. He said those offenders should be "singled out for special punishment" and "deserve little leeway." Mansfield introduced legislation which would permit judges to rule such offenders a "threat to society" and keep them jailed pending trial and appeal.

Israeli soldiers, gunners clash

Israeli soldiers clashed with unidentified gunners Wednesday on the Lebanese freighter, the military command in Tel Aviv said. Demons, soaring gulls and flaming mountain ranges can all flow from the Hangman's brush onto cars.

The baddest man in town

Sumei art uses the brush to mix and blend colors.

The Hangman will give you the ride of your life and paint your wagon with the images of dreams.

Forget foxtails on the aerial or fuzzy dice from the rearview mirror. You're riding in style unmatched if you've got one of The Hangman's painted fantasies on your car.

For the next week or so, he is applying his art at Mark Motors in Arlington Heights.

Crouched next to a sensible Plymouth Duster is The Hangman ("The" to his friends, or the more formal "Thee" if you prefer) stroking and rolling a tapered short handle brush. A landscape of flaming mountains flows almost magically as his hand moves. Just one brush and as many as 28 colors emerge from it.

He gives you his business card that can give you a migraine headache as well. Even without the 3-D calling card with orange polkadots on a gold background, you aren't likely to forget The Hangman.

WHAT KIND of man paints that kind of stuff on the sides of cars?

"You expect to see some retarder with hair down to here in a '60 Volkswagen van. All kinds of dope, a pregnant wife with no bra and an old dog with an ear infection. Right?" he said.

The Hangman knows what people expect to see. What they get is Jim Ballagh, 43-year-old former school teacher now living in Centerville, Iowa. Neatly trimmed and thinning blond hair, comfy suede shoes (with white socks) and a clean white smock.

The Hangman looks more like a laboratory technician than the pinstriping perpetrator he is.

His art is painting fantasy on cars. "It is the next step above and beyond pinstriping. It is sumei art — the blending of several colors on one brush at once," he said.

He says there are only three people in the country doing sumei; himself and two others he taught.

SUMEI USES the brush instead of a palette for the mixing of the colors. By turning the brush, the colors are exposed and blended on the surface. Because the colors will bleed together, he can get only about 15 strokes before the brush must be remixed.

The Hangman's subjects range from panoramic mountain ranges to highly stylized flames, soaring gulls or freeform designs.

He is working at Mark Motors now because sales manager Rick Durgin saw him in action in Florida. Durgin liked what he saw and invited The Hangman to have a go at the cars in the Arlington Heights agency.

Although Mark Motors also sells Mercedes-Benzes, The Hangman acknowledges his artistry would not quite be what the customer wants on a $10,000 car.

THE WORK on the Dusters led to a custom job for the boyfriend of Durgin's sister. The boyfriend is bringing in more friends and even the 62-year-old woman bookkeeper wants an execution from The Hangman.

"A lot of people don't know exactly what they want. I don't know what's going to happen either. It just goes," he said.

Just letting it go is a lot of what The Hangman is and believes.

"I was the kid who was being kept after school for drawing in class. I was always in trouble for it. I can't see why they can't recognize a talent — whatever it is: drawing or music or whatever — and let it develop," he said.

Until three years ago he and his wife were employed by a public school system in California. She was the principal and he the teacher letting children learn through their interests. Skills and talents were used as tools to teach other subjects indirectly.

THEY WERE asked to leave and it opened the way for Ballagh to become The Hangman, a name taken from an old Randolph Scott movie.

Traveling the country, he paints cars, sneakers, walls or just about anything that stands still for a minute, and thoroughly enjoys himself.

"I'm a catalyst. I can bring people together and put them at ease. They can enjoy themselves. Take John, a mechanic here. He wanted something on his car but he didn't know what and I didn't either. Who'd ever thought it would be a bunch of fire ants crushing Coors beer cans."

The future may hold another school for he and his wife so some child won't fail because he wants to sing or draw. Jerry Lewis' Muscular Dystrophy telethon will get the proceeds from the auction sale of a van he is going to paint for 24 hours live on television.

The Hangman can realize your dreams in 28 colors from one brush. That's not too bad for a kid who was kept after school for drawing in class.

Teachers, leery of layoffs, becoming students again

by JUDY JOBBITT

Teachers have a new motive for going back to school — holding on to their jobs.

Declining enrollment and program changes are sending more teachers back to the classroom to pick up credits toward a new major.

The foreign-language teacher is going back to get credits for teaching European history; the math teacher is headed into computer sciences; the science teacher is entering health education.

While the trend is most noticeable for high school teachers, the number of elementary teachers moving into new subjects also is increasing. They're finding they are more valuable to their school if they can offer themselves as a reading specialist, special-education instructor or learning-center director as well as classroom teacher.

TWO MOTIVES are behind this education trend — the fear of staff cuts because of declining enrollment or finances and the desire to teach subjects recently added to the curriculum.

Teachers say developing new areas of expertise should make them more valuable to their district if cutbacks become a reality.

High school districts 207 and 214 see such cutbacks in the future as they face declining enrollments over the coming years. High School Dist. 211 administrators say declining enrollment is too far off for teachers to be concerned about losing their jobs because of it, but teachers there also are expanding their backgrounds professionally.

"We are seeing teachers coming back for job security," said Michael Thompson, graduate adviser at Northern Illinois University, DeKalb. "People are becoming edgy about their situation. Even though their own situation might not be in jeopardy, they are planning for the future."

HE SAID the trend has developed over the past two years. "At first I thought it was just me seeing things, but it kept up."

He says it is encouraging to see teachers expanding their background because "it makes them a much more interesting teacher."

Edith Gauger of National College of Education, Evanston, said she has received some inquiries from teachers who are looking at the trends in their district and seeing where the opportunities will be in terms of dealing with cutbacks.

She said the major areas elementary teachers are going into are individualized instruction, special education, reading instruction and learning resource center backgrounds.

Northeastern Illinois University, Chicago, also is finding more elementary education teachers are entering fields related to their classroom instruction. Vincent Malek, dean of Northeastern's graduate college, said guidance counseling is another field more teachers are entering. He said teachers can use that knowledge in the classroom now as well as use it in the future if they need to find another teaching job.

TEACHERS ATTENDING DePaul University are looking into business-related courses more than before, said Bernetta Goldsberry, administrative assistant to the liberal arts college dean. "Teachers are going back for degrees in business areas even if they are currently employed as teachers," she said.

When districts cut back, "frills" like music and foreign language, go first, she said. These teachers have limited skills to offer employers outside of teaching so many are preparing themselves in advance to enter the business world in case of staff cuts.

A sampling of teachers who are switching from their original field substantiate the findings of universities.

Norm Horler, a biology teacher at Forest View High School, said he is taking health-education courses to expand his background in biology.

"Since I am teaching biology I have to teach nine weeks of health," he said, referring to the state requirement on health education. "It's an area I've always been interested in. Now that there is a mandate I want to make myself as well qualified as possible."

HE SAID although he doesn't have to worry about staff cuts because of his seniority on staff, he "hopes this will make me more valuable to the district."

Ed Swick, a German and Russian teacher at Prospect High School, has expanded his background in three directions. He has credits to teach English, Russian studies or European history.

"I saw other foreign languages going down and decided to take precautions," he said. "To keep all possibilities open I decided to be prepared to go into the English program." He also expanded his background in Soviet studies and European history.

Norma Schultz of Rolling Meadows High School decided to get credentials to teach business English, which will allow students to receive English credit for the course. Her major is business education. She has taught business English for several years although students couldn't receive English credit for the course. "One reason I went back is because I now will have two strengths to offer the district."

STEVE HERRING of Maine West High School is getting a stronger background in computer science to add to his mathematics major.

Declining enrollment had little to do with his decision to expand his background. "I've always had an interest in computer science," he said. He went back to specialize because new programs were being started in his field. This year, he offered Maine West students a semester course on computer science in addition to the data-processing course that has been offered the past two years.

But while these teachers say their primary reason for changing majors was an interest in another field or an expanded program, all admit they hope their diverse backgrounds will make them more valuable in case the day of teacher cutbacks comes.

Village board wrapup

Patriotic fire hydrants nixed for Bicentennial

Elk Grove Village officials Tuesday voted thumbs down to Trustee Nanci Vanderweel's suggestion residents be allowed to paint fire hydrants as Bicentennial characters.

Her request to allow a "Paint a Plug for America" movement in the village was hooted at by several members of the board who called the idea, sponsored by the American Revolution Bicentennial Administration "ridiculous."

Mrs. Vanderweel, who heads the village's Horizons '76 Committee coordinating the village's joint 20th birthday celebration and the nation's Bicentennial observance, defended the program.

She said it has been well received in several states. Trustee Edward Kenna said the painted patriots from the American Revolution "look ridiculous."

Trustee Theodore Staddler said "the end result 'is not good looking at all,' and a few other trustees seemed amused.

Trustee Ronald Chernick supported her suggestion but it was turned down after a representative of the fire department said he preferred the village colors.

The village paints hydrants red, green and orange depending on the size of the water main.

New village appointments

Village Pres. Charles Zetek made the following appointments to various boards and commissions.

They are: Allen Shapiro, police and fire commission; William Kohnke and Paul Retburg, community services board; David Farley, police pension board; William Wesley, William Shannon and Richard McGrenera, plan commission; Anton Inzerello and Curtis McKim zoning board of appeals.

Holiday alters pickup date

Residents whose regular scavenger service pickup date is Friday are asked to place refuse at curbside on July 5 instead of Friday which falls on the Independence Day holiday.

Lions have spirits July 4

The Lions Club has been granted a permit to sell beer and wine at its July 2-5 Independence Day celebration. A fireworks display and carnival permit were also approved with the club supplying the village with proof of insurance coverage.

THE JOBS ARE there, say government agencies and local employment offices, but this sign at H. S. Swanson Tool Co., Elk Grove Village, contradicts statistics that say the unemployment rate is declining.

Funds bill for new road clears House

Elk Grove Village residents near the Ned Brown Forest Preserve are awaiting Gov. Daniel Walker's signature on a bill appropriating $250,000 for a road to keep their neighborhoods clear of traffic bound for new recreation areas.

The bill providing state financing for the road, parallel to Blisner Road, was sent the Illinois House Monday and was cleared by the governor. The legislation was sponsored by State Sen. David J. Regner, R-Mount Prospect, and State Rep. Virginia B. Macdonald, R-Arlington Heights.

The bill was introduced on behalf of area residents who objected to the County Forest Preserve District's plans to build the main entrance to a large winter sports development at Blisner and Cosman roads.

Forest Preserve officials said the development would generate a large volume of traffic, but said they did not have funds to pay for a new road.

Police see link in armed robberies reported in area

Mount Prospect police say they believe two Old Orchard Country Club busboys were robbed this week by the same gang responsible for similar stickups in the Northwest suburbs during the last six weeks.

Three robbers, armed with a gun and two knives, robbed two busboys late Monday in the busboys' residence, at 700 W. Rand Rd. Witnesses said the three fled in a car which may have been driven by a woman.

THE HOLDUP gang of one woman and three men has struck in Elk Grove Village, Palatine, Elmhurst and Wood Dale. It is reportedly headed by the woman, and robs busboys in their homes. Immigration documents and money usually are among the stolen items.

Police said $900 cash, clothing and a $100 tape recorder were taken in the Monday night robbery. The victims were Lorenzo Alva, 19, and Avel Alva, 18.

The three male robbers entered the Alvas' first-floor bedroom about 10 p.m. The robber with the gun ordered the brothers to the floor and demanded money. The robbers spoke only Spanish, police said.

One witness told police he saw three men, matching the robbers' description, with a woman in the Old Orchard Country Club restaurant about four hours before the robbery.

About a month ago, Elk Grove Village Det. Sgt. Ronald Iden said his department learned through interceptors of rumors of other, unreported holdups. The rumors had been circulating through the Mexican community.

Youth, 14, nabbed in vandalism spree

A 14-year-old Elk Grove Village boy was apprehended by Elk Grove Village police for allegedly painting obscenities and defacing several cars in a series of vandalism incidents reported this week.

The youth has been blamed for eight incidents of spray-paint damage to cars parked on Keswick and Lancaster streets.

He is in the custody of his parents, who have offered to pay for the damage. The incident is being handled by the juvenile youth investigative department.

Community service board meets Monday

The Community Service Board of Directors will view a public affairs film at 8 p.m. Monday at the municipal building, 901 Wellington Ave., Elk Grove Village.

The film, "Tell Me Where to Turn," describes information and referral services.

The board's programs for the coming months will be reviewed and an ad hoc committee to represent the board in its dealings with village officials will be appointed.

Mini-golf course gets planners' OK

Robert Swiglo received a favorable recommendation to build a miniature golf course on a 1.2-acre site on the north side of Devon Ave., east of Ridge Street, Elk Grove Village, from the village plan commission.

The commission unanimously approved Swiglo's petition for annexation and zoning request and will make its recommendation to the village board. The board is expected to vote on the petition at 8 p.m. Tuesday.

The environment

Joint effort may save Johnson County's 'Little Black Slough'

by LEA TONKIN

Illinois' largest unprotected wilderness, known as Little Black Slough, may be preserved through a cooperative venture of state government, private industry and an environmental organization.

Public participation in the land-acquisition project is urgently needed, said representatives of the Nature Conservancy. The Evanston-based conservation group seeks $400,000 in donations.

The funds will be used to purchase a 2,518-acre parcel in Johnson County, southwest of Vienna. The area is adjacent to the Heron Pond-Wildcat Bluff Nature Preserve.

sity of plants and animals, including cypress, herons, common egret, the endangered Indiana bat, deer, beaver and otter.

The Wesvaco Co., owner of the slough area, will sell the land valued at $1.8 million to the Nature Conservancy for $1.4 million. The Nature Conservancy will sell the land to the Illinois Dept. of Conservation for $900,000, and will raise an added $400,000 through public donations. The state will pay its share for the land from the Dept. of Conservation budget and the Land and Water Conservation fund.

Contributors can be sent to: The Nature Conservancy, 708 Church, Evanston, Ill. 60201.

Ecology tours offered

An introduction to Cook County ecology will be offered by Mary Chagnon during a series of guided tours presented by the Chicago Academy of Sciences, Chicago. The ecology walks will start at 1:30 p.m. each Wednesday in July. For reservations information call 549-6008.

Sanitary district cited

The Metropolitan Sanitary District recently received a civic award from the Illinois chapter of the Izaak Walton League. The award was presented in recognition of the utilization of treated sanitary and industrial wastes for land reclamation in Fulton County, Ill.

Conservationists win one

Conservation groups recently won a court appeal that will have a significant impact on strip mining operations in the North Central Plains States. The U.S. District Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia ruled that a major federal coal and power development is planned in Montana, Wyoming, North Dakota and South Dakota. As a result, the court said, nine federal agencies must consider preparation of a comprehensive environmental impact study for the program. The decision sent back to U.S. District Court a suit brought by the National Wildlife Federation and the Sierra Club charging that federal plans for coal development were proceeding in violation of the National Environmental Policy Act.

"We are not against the wise and proper development of the energy resources in the North Central states," said Thomas Kimball, NWF executive vice president. "But we are dead set against turning our last great open spaces into a ravaged wasteland because the government didn't take the time to plan ahead and safeguard the environment."

Pollution hearing June 30

The Illinois Pollution Control Board will conduct a hearing at 10 a.m. June 30 on proposed sulfur-dioxide amendments. The hearing will be held at University of Illinois Circle Campus, 750 S. Halsted St., Chicago.

Senate OKs 33.3% tax assessments

The Illinois Senate approved Wednesday a plan to set real estate assessments statewide at 33.3 per cent of market value, avoiding a court order to raise assessments to 50 per cent.

The measure, which goes to Gov. Daniel Walker for approval, will bail out the state Dept. of Local Government Affairs, which has been told by the Illinois Supreme Court to raise county multipliers to attain 50 per cent assessments by next year.

The new law, passed 50 to 6 by the Senate, gives counties three years to adjust their assessment to the 33.3 per cent level. School aid and other state grants will be held at their current levels while tax rates are adjusted.

Dennis Dunne, spokesman for County Assessor Thomas M. Tully, said the action generally will freeze the county multiplier for three years. "We're told we're 33.3 per cent now," he said.

Dunne said the action means the multiplier, which was expected to drop slightly for Cook County next year, will remain the same. The multiplier dropped from 1.50 to 1.48 a year ago, and dropped to 1.44 this year, Dunne said.

The multiplier is applied to local tax rates to bring them to equal levels throughout the state. Cook County, for example, taxed homes at 22 per cent before the multiplier was applied.

What are diglycerides?

Dear Dr. Lamb — I read your column answering the lady who has hyperglycemia, and you stated triglycerides are fat. I have been eating lots of ice cream and found my blood pressure up much higher. I read the ingredients on the ice cream box, which said it had diglycerides. The dictionary gives two definitions for the prefix di, double or two and di meaning to separate or remove.

I knew glycerin was a refined animal fat. If it says diglycerides is it safe to go on eating? I did gain some weight eating ice cream.

Dear Reader — The common form of fat in food and in our fat deposits is triglyceride. This is a compound of glycerol (glycerin) and fatty acids.

Now glycerol is not a refined fat. Chemically it is an alcohol, and that is what the ending "ol" means. Methanol or wood alcohol is made with one carbon atom. Ethanol or the alcohol used in beverages contains two carbon atoms and glycerol has three carbon atoms.

When only one carbon atom of glycerol is attached to one fatty acid it is a monoglyceride. If two carbon atoms are attached to fatty acids it is a diglyceride. When three fatty acids are attached, one to each of the three carbon atoms of glycerol, it is a triglyceride.

The important point is the characteristics of the fatty acid. The fatty acid chain of carbon atoms may be long, short, saturated, monounsaturated or polyunsaturated.

There is no advantage to using monoglycerides or diglycerides over triglycerides. If all the fatty acids in monoglycerides or diglycerides are saturated fatty acids, you are still consuming a lot of saturated fat.

Unless you are using a dietetic ice cream, you will be consuming a lot of calories. I am not surprised that you gained weight. Any weight gain in a person with a tendency to high blood pressure is often accompanied by a rise in pressure. Many individuals with moderate elevations of blood pressure will have normal readings if they are obese or overweight and succeed in correcting the situation.

The triglycerides are the main fat in the bloodstream. Many doctors measure them as well as the cholesterol to determine a person's likelihood of developing vascular or heart disease. The cholesterol is another alcohol but contains so many carbon atoms that it is a waxy solid and not a liquid.

The triglycerides and cholesterol are combined with normal blood proteins. The combination is called a lipoprotein. The fat is not normally soluble in water or blood. The combination with blood proteins makes them soluble so they can be carried in the blood.

The ratio of cholesterol to triglycerides and the actual size of the lipoprotein combination is important in detailed evaluation of a person's tendency to develop heart and vascular disease.

Wheeling-Buffalo Grove Dist. 21

A taco luncheon recently was served to Mary Stearn's sixth-grade class at Longfellow School, Buffalo Grove. The class went to Kerry Hoogkirk's home for the luncheon.

Three fourth-grade records were broken. In the girls' events, Cathy Piccolo topped the basketball and softball throw. Ricky Stonerook broke the boys' softball-throw record.

Apples, celery and carrots were the makings for a "crunch lunch" enjoyed by Char Hallmann's first-grade class at Hawthorne School, Wheeling.

The children, who have been studying foods and their effect on health, supplied the snacks. A dental hygienist also visited the class to explain dental health.

Down's Syndrome victim holds steady job

'Something special about Danny'

by LINDA PUNCH
Everybody at Hamilton Mint Co. likes Dan Shields.

Co-workers treat him like a kid brother. His bosses consider him one of their most reliable employees. His counselors at Clearbrook Center for the Handicapped say he is exceptional. He is an example of what Clearbrook Center officials wish all of their students could be — a contributing member of society.

Shields, 21, of Arlington Heights, was born with Down's Syndrome, a severe form of retardation. He could have remained in an institutional setting, isolated from the mainstream of life. But his determination and hard work and Hamilton Mint's willingness to hire the handicapped opened new opportunities.

"There is something about Danny. He is handicapped in several ways but he's way above everybody else in other ways," said Horst Genger, vice president of Hamilton Mint Inc. of Arlington Heights.

SHIELDS TAKES his duties seriously, whether it's counting and stacking cards of silver coins or shredding confidential papers, Genger said.

"Danny has never missed a day's work in the year he's been with us. He was even here on the morning of the big snowstorm," he said.

The Clearbrook staff is equally complimentary of Shields, saying he is one of the few people with Down's Syndrome able to hold a job in the community.

"People with Down's Syndrome generally are pretty limited in what they can do — they need a lot of supervision," Nancy Zanbon, a Clearbrook counselor, said.

CLEARBROOK Center has placed some 60 students with more than 25 local businesses since the mid-1960s. Mrs. Zanbon said there are many more students at Clearbrook Center who "have the potential for placement."

"It depends a lot on the kind of job. Two years ago, people thought we would never place Danny but a job opened up that he could handle," she said.

Mrs. Zanbon said it isn't easy for any handicapped person to hold a job.

"They usually don't make enough to support themselves and they have to rely on someone else for transportation. And there's always the risk that someone will make fun of them," she said.

"Danny is just such an emotionally stable person — I think that's what helped him keep his job," she said.

HANDICAPPED people also have to overcome prejudices of would-be employers and co-workers, Mrs. Zanbon said.

"People have a lot of stereotypes about retarded people — I've almost stopped using the label because they envision the worst," she said, adding that "we place our people because the employer is already open."

"A lot of people picture the retarded as being infantile, but within their abilities they have a great deal of maturity. Danny is a good example. He takes the gifts he has and uses them to the hilt," she said.

Mrs. Zanbon said handicapped people need the chance to "feel good about themselves."

"I think Danny really shows it. When he's working well he really beams all over the place," she said.

Teacher's 'best friend' may be forced out of class

Aides subject of school-union controversy

by KATHERINE BOYCE

The volunteer aide used to be the teacher's best friend.

She was a godsend to the harried teacher trying to cope with nearly 30 children in her classroom. The volunteer took over some of the routine work of education, freeing the teacher to give more attention to her pupils.

But in recent months the volunteer aide has been the subject of controversy among local school administrators, Illinois Office of Education officials and teacher unions. The volunteer has suddenly emerged as the foe of the teacher unions who fear some school districts may use them to replace teachers and cut costs.

The controversy hinges on a state requirement for school volunteers which was overlooked by almost everyone until last year.

Since 1967 the state has required paid teacher aides to have at least 30 hours of college credit or complete a state-approved training program. Last fall, local school administrators were told the rule also applied to unpaid aides. School officials criticized the change, saying it caused needless red tape and made it difficult for schools to use volunteer help.

THE TEACHER unions took a different viewpoint. They contended that the requirement places outside control on the use of volunteers in local schools and helps ensure that quality personnel are assisting in the instruction of children.

State Rep. Eugenia Chapman, D-Arlington Heights, heeded the cries of school administrators and introduced a bill that would have given local school districts the power to set qualifications for volunteer aides.

The two most powerful teacher unions in the state, the Illinois Education Assn., and the Illinois Federation of Teachers, blocked the bill in testimony before the House Education Committee. The bill, which also was opposed by the Illinois Office of Education, died in committee.

In private conversations Mrs. Chapman said union officials told her they feared school districts would use volunteers to increase the number of students assigned per teacher and therefore cut back on the number of teachers hired by the districts.

JAMES HALL, principal of Ridge School in Arlington Heights, was one local school official who testified in favor of Mrs. Chapman's bill. The 30-hour requirement is "ridiculous," said Hall, who believes that the unions opposed the bill because the oversupply of teachers and the declining enrollments in many school districts are making some teachers fear for their jobs.

But Hall thinks the teachers' fears are unfounded. A volunteer can never effectively replace a teacher, he said. The volunteer's job is to reinforce what the teacher does. Volunteers are usually used to supervise a reading group, give drill exercises in math or stand by while children are writing in their workbooks. Hall doesn't believe that kind of job requires college credits.

"It's ridiculous to require a mother who is willing to come in two or three days a week to help out in a reading class to go to Harper or another college and get 30 hours of credit," he said.

"If administrators have the qualifications to evaluate their staff, I think it's pretty clear they have the qualifications to evaluate volunteers. They don't need another form from Springfield," he said.

THE TEACHER unions feel intervention from Springfield is healthy. "Theoretically under Mrs. Chapman's bill a school system could have a school with an assistant principal and the rest volunteers," said Kenneth Bruce, assistant executive secretary in charge of legislation and political education for the Illinois Education Assn.

"It's not our position to remove any volunteer assistance for teachers," said Bruce, but the association feels there should be some criteria. He admits that the 30 hours is not the best rule but "there doesn't seem to be any other kind of criteria," he said.

The Illinois Office of Education, caught in the middle of the dispute, has reaffirmed its stand to keep the 30-hour requirement although officials are now attempting to set up training programs across the state for volunteers as an alternative to college credit.

Several school officials say they've been told by state officials that the rule will not be strictly enforced so they need not be concerned. Administrators are not satisfied with that response. They feel if the rule is on the books, it can be used to reprimand them.

THE PEOPLE who are ultimately affected by the controversy are the school children and the volunteers, volunteers like Diane Briggs who donates 15 hours a week to the children of Ridge School in Arlington Heights.

Mrs. Briggs, 34, has volunteered at Ridge for three years and this year she assisted the first grade teacher. She is a housewife with 28 hours of college credit.

"I enjoy working with kids," said

Mrs. Briggs, but she insists that she is donating her time for selfish reasons. "I just moved in three years ago and it was a way of meeting other adults and the kids my children play with." She said she could just as easily go shopping, play bridge or trek around the golf course like other suburban women but she prefers volunteering in the schools. "This is just my place," she said.

There are 29 students in the first grade class where Mrs. Briggs spends her afternoons. She drills students on math, goes through a workbook with them or listens as they read aloud while the teacher works with another group of students.

Mrs. Briggs feels the 30-hour requirement is unnecessary. "You don't need a degree to teach a first grader to add 12 and two," she said. "They've already gotten their initial lesson from the teacher and I'm just reemphasizing what she has done." The volunteer "just frees the teacher to work with the kids she knows need extra help," she said.

Mrs. Briggs said she has "no desire to go back for two more hours" of credit, even though it would qualify her for a paid position as a teacher's aide. "I would not do things any differently if I was paid. One and one is going to make two whether you're paid to teach it or not."

Mrs. Briggs said volunteers "have got to have real empathy with the youngsters. If you're qualified, you're qualified. The 30 hours makes no difference — it won't give you empa-

Angry taxpayers threaten county's home rule

JACK M. SIEGEL

by BOB LAHEY
Political Editor

The Cook County Board of Commissioners may have gulped more than it can swallow by voting a tax on alcoholic beverages under its home rule powers.

While they have not decided to go ahead with it, liquor dealers in Cook County are contemplating a drive for a referendum to strip the county of its home rule powers if the court upholds the tax in a current lawsuit.

Opinion appears evenly divided among lawyers whether the removal of the county's home rule powers would mean an end to the taxes created under that power.

Talk to 10 lawyers on the subject, and you are apt to get five opinions on either side of the question — a certain indication that the matter would be subject to be decided by the courts if such a referendum were held, and succeeded.

Two attorneys with educated opinions on the subject gave us opposite opinions on the topic. They are Jack Siegel of Arlington Heights, who represents Arlington Heights and other home rule communities, and who has been involved in some of the early litigation seeking to define the limits of home rule; and John C. Parkhurst of Peoria, who chaired the Local Government Committee of the 1970 Constitutional Convention.

Both concede that there is a degree of logic in the opposing viewpoint, and therefore predict that the question would have to be settled by the courts.

Siegel's first impression was that any tax instituted under home rule would be terminated when the constitutional authority behind it ceased to exist. Parkhurst, however, feels that a tax lawfully enacted would remain on the books until repealed.

Although the delegates to the Constitutional Convention wrote into the constitution the provision by which voters can throw out home rule, they apparently never contemplated what would happen to actions already taken under that new power. (What home rule does, by the way, is give certain communities and counties powers to pass some laws which previously they could only do with the specific permission of the state legislature.)

There are those who scoff at the idea of a referendum to do away with Cook County's home rule, because it's a valuable tool to the Cook County Board, and therefore to the Democratic machine.

That argument overlooks the fact that there are more than 9,000 retail liquor outlets in Cook County. The numbers alone make it a simple feat to gather the 140,000 signatures to petition the issue onto the ballot.

In 10 days, a limited number of liquor dealers gathered 300,000 signatures on petitions protesting the liquor tax to the county board. A spokesman for the Illinois Liquor Stores Assn. said confidently, "We could easily have gotten a million if we had more time."

Getting those same million people to go to the polls might be a little more difficult — but a million votes is enough to win just about any election in Cook County.

Throwing out home rule in Cook County could be like the business of the baby and the bath water, since needed revenue through recent taxes could be lost. As County Commissioner Carl Hansen of Elk Grove Village points out, the county could then revert to having only the real estate tax as an alternative for new revenue.

But even such advocates of home rule such as Siegel agree that the chances of passage of a referendum to end home rule are great. It would, simply, give the people a chance to strike back at government, of which they are mightily tired.

Herald opinion

Villages should work together

It shouldn't be necessary for residents of one village to go to another village to get redress for their grievances. After all, that's why we have local municipal government.

The case in point is the trouble between the people who live in Mill Creek, which is in Buffalo Grove, and the developer of Frenchmen's Cove, which is in Arlington Heights but adjacent to the Mill Creek neighborhood.

The people of Mill Creek are tired of the water, litter and soil erosion apparently coming from Frenchmen's Cove property. So those residents of Buffalo Grove came to the village of Arlington Heights to get some government action on their behalf.

That's fine, but we think a better solution would have been for the village manager of Buffalo Grove to pick up the phone, talk to the village manager of Arlington Heights and the two of them get the thing solved to the mutual benefit of both towns.

The case here could become a familiar one in suburbs where boundaries are going to be closer than buffers of farmland. Directly next to each other are two places where people have chosen to live. Each is in a different town, each group of residents must adhere to slightly different rules.

But in this case, Frenchmen's Cove is causing some problems for its neighbor. The municipal boundary between them should not place greater burdens on the people who live near the boundary; it is exactly for those kind of conditions that rapport between local governments is necessary.

The people of Mill Creek have a right to be represented in the Arlington Heights Village Hall by experts from their own village government. Their taxes are paid to support advocates from their village to protect their property from incursions from adjacent property.

If, as in this case, some of the facts seem to indicate that the owner of Frenchmen's Cove is not completely at fault, it should not be necessary for Mill Creek residents to troop over to their own village hall for help. It is up to the professional departments in both communities to expend their time and energy to help the people, not the other way around.

Hits Walker budget cut

The Herald is to be commended for its editorial against Governor Dan Walker's across-the-board budget reduction of six per cent. Such a cut in the mental health agencies' budgets in the Northwest suburbs would have serious impact on our programs.

As you know, much of our work is preventative. We see close to 1,000 clients and families in the course of a year, often the stress is temporary and can be relieved in relatively few visits. We also endeavor to keep persons out of the hospital and productive in the community. We provide therapy and medication for many ex-hospital patients who are capable of living at home with such help instead of being hospitalized. Hospitalization

Resident questions paramedic expenses

I was quite taken by your headlines in the June 10 Hoffman Herald, "Ambulance Service Cost $176 per Run." I was wondering what type of accounting our Hoffman Estates village trustees used. Did they take the entire cost of salaries, medical supplies, paramedic training, fuel, insurance, vehicle cost and maintenance of the ambulance staff, add them together and divide by 1,000 runs? This form of accounting is ludicrous at best since if only one run is made, that run costs $176,000, and, conversely, if 2,000 runs are made, the cost is only $88 per run. I suggest that this is a plan by our trustees to raise the fee proposal from $30 to maybe even $150 or more.

But first, let's look at the costs involved. Salaries, paramedic training, insurance, vehicle cost and maintenance are fixed costs. Whether any run or 1,000 runs are made, these costs will always be constant. The only variables are medical supplies and fuel. I can't believe it costs $176 to send out an ambulance, even counting the small fraction of time that could be charged off to salaries, et al. Perhaps The Hoffman Herald can gain the true facts about the costs by obtaining an accounting ledger listing the various amounts paid for the above expenditures of $176. You would do the community and especially the trustees a great service.

Marc-Louis Blackwell
Hoffman Estates

Fence post

letters to the editor

In the state system costs a minimum of $25,000 per year. Obviously, outpatient care is only a small percentage of that amount.

Program planning in any organization is essential. Mental health centers across the state were to have received their allocation letters this week for the coming fiscal year. These have been temporarily held up awaiting legislative decision. At best, these allocations are not consistent from year-to-year and often show no relationship to increased services or new programs. The eventual chaos in all programs facing uncertain budgets compounded by impending cuts does not need further explanation.

The Northwest Mental Health Center budget for 1974 was $252,331, a 10 per cent increase over the previous year. We had an average case load of 350 persons per month — a total of 5,776 interviews and 1,580 consultation hours to such agencies as The Bridge, Northwest Opportunities Center, Special Education, School Dist. 21. This reflects an 18 per cent increase in service for a 10 per cent increase in budget.

The people served by our agency live in Wheeling, Buffalo Grove, Arlington Heights, Palatine, Mount Prospect, Prospect Heights, Rolling Meadows and Inverness, and the unincorporated areas of Wheeling and Palatine townships in addition to portions of Hoffman Estates, Barrington and Schaumburg. We urge all citizens in this area to write to their legislators in behalf of relatives and neighbors who may need mental health services in time of stress during the coming months.

Fence post

He has stadium 'option'

It appears that the major uncertainty surrounding the building of the new stadium is the question of the initial costs and also of payment of the bonds used to finance the project. My solution is that Madison Square Garden Corporation can guarantee the payments by using the race track as collateral in order to insure the payment of these bonds.

In this manner, Arlington Heights would not have a problem paying the financial obligation and MSGC would assume a portion of the risk for repayment of the loan. In any event, the private citizens of Arlington Heights would not be stuck in event of default, and if the stadium financially is such a good deal, MSGC should be happy to pledge the race track as collateral.

Court ruling hit

I applaud the decision of the Arlington Heights Village Board to appeal the recent U.S. Court of Appeals ruling regarding the 15 acres of land adjacent to St. Viator High School.

Once again, a court has transuded the legislative processes of a local government unit and has usurped the right of citizens to be governed by their elected representatives. If the ruling is permitted to stand, people who neither live in a community nor understand its character may have effective veto power over its zoning decisions.

To the collectivist mentality, equality is the greatest good for the greatest number, whether it be the racial composition of a community, the income level of people or the "quality" of lives they lead. But the egalitarian societies of this world spend considerable time and money enforcing equality through confiscatory tax policies, extensive invasions of privacy and "re-education" centers for deviant thinkers. They have precious little toleration of individual freedom.

The Appeals Court decision is disturbing because it smacks of this collectivist syndrome by denying freedom in the name of equality.

The almanac

Today is Thursday, June 26, the 177th day of 1975 with 188 to follow. The moon is between its full phase and last quarter.

The morning stars are Mercury, Mars and Jupiter.

The evening stars are Venus and Saturn.

Those born on this date are under the sign of Cancer.

American novelist Pearl Buck was born June 26, 1892.

On this day in history:

• In 1900, Dr. Walter Reed led a medical team formed to wipe out yellow fever in the Panama Canal Zone.

• In 1917, first troops of the American Expeditionary Force reached France for action in World War I.

• In 1944, Cherbourg, the third largest port in France, was liberated from Nazi occupation in World War II.

• In 1948, the United States began operation of the "Berlin Airlift," to bypass a Soviet road and rail blockade of the divided German city.

A thought for the day: Author Pearl Buck said, "... If there is no other life, then this one has been enough to make it worth being born, myself a human being."

DEBRIS AND swamp-like conditions fill the back yards of Mill Creek residents where the Buffalo Grove subdivision meets Frenchmen's Cove in Arlington Heights.

Backs 'yes' vote

I sincerely urge an affirmative vote in the June 28 Palatine Library District referendum.

In 1924 the first duly-elected board of trustees of the Palatine Public Library took action which "extended the privilege of making use of the library to the farmers although they are not part of the library district."

The successful referendum would eliminate the non-resident fee, reluctantly adopted in 1956 which has escalated with the rise in operating costs. For nearly four years prior to the referendum establishing the library district with tax-levying power, the Boy Scout "Good Deed" library was supported by public donations at a time when the village census totaled approximately 2,000 people. Generous community support continued to keep the library going in those years of low bonding power and poor tax returns; and lightened the burden on the trustees who sometimes found it "hard sledding" to meet the demands of a growing community.

But the schools of Palatine and the library have managed to send out into the world responsible citizens, and can continue their enviable record if you help with your "yes" vote Saturday.

We have a unique opportunity to write that page in Palatine history again by extending "the privilege of making use of the library" to those who live where those farmers once did — outside the district.

Liberal arts grads adopting new careers

Whenever someone wants to promote vocational education, one of the points that usually comes up is a question — "What do you do with a degree in English besides teach?"

That question has some variations, and one of them is to substitute "history" for English in the question. For obvious reasons, English and history seem to most people to be more clearly "impractical" than degrees in math, economics or other liberal arts fields.

The implication of the question is clear. Some fields of study just don't prepare anyone to do any useful work, except in education. And we all know there are already too many English teachers.

Those who make that argument usually are advocating more direct "career" training, which is designed to prepare people for certain jobs. The training could be in technical areas, or in general, but practical, areas like business or accounting.

A RECENT survey conducted for Southern Illinois University to find out where liberal arts graduates from the class of 1972 are working throws some interesting light on this whole area.

Of 25 history majors surveyed, one was teaching. Others were working as salesmen, business executives with titles like branch manager, operations manager, purchasing supervisor and senior assistant manager. One was an advertising account executive, one owned his own masonry firm, and there was also an electrician, laboratory technician and medical assistant, all jobs for which there are specific "technical" training programs in various schools.

For the 24 English majors in the survey, the variety of jobs was just as great. Eight were listed as teachers, mostly English teachers. Others listed their jobs with titles like assistant personnel director, hotel manager, systems analyst, or office technician. One was a stewardess for Delta Air Lines (whose income was, incidentally, higher than those of the majority of her fellow graduates.) One English major owns a record store. Another is a typesetter.

In both groups there were some graduates who seemed to have the kinds of jobs people go to college to avoid. One English major said he was a stockboy, while two others were secretaries. One history major was a file clerk, and another a railway clerk. All but one of the secretaries said the jobs were "stop-gap" measures not related to planned careers.

IN ADDITION to finding out what happened to English and history majors, the survey also included graduates of other major fields, such as psychology, sociology, political science and mathematics. In all fields, graduates held a wide range of jobs. There is a political science major who is a meat cutter, a Spanish major who is a real estate broker and a math major who is a restaurant manager.

The author of the survey, which was done on behalf of the college of liberal arts, made the point that most of the graduates did not end up in menial jobs. Obviously stung by criticism of the impracticality of liberal arts, the author at one point writes, "It would be only a slight exaggeration to say that, if news stories are to be believed, 50 per cent of liberal arts graduates would be unemployed and most of the other 50 per cent should be cab drivers, drug store clerks or cooks. The actual situation is quite different."

The other thing the survey showed, however, is less comforting for liberal arts proponents. Of those participating in the survey, 73.6 per cent said there was a need for more career preparation in the academic programs they graduated in. In addition, while only 5.1 per cent said training for a job was the major goal of education when they were in college, that number increased to 34.3 per cent after the students graduated.

There are many interpretations of those figures. Some may take them as a clear indication of disillusionment on the part of students and say schools should change their programs. Others will find encouragement in the fact that liberal arts graduates do get jobs — and may find some irony in the fact that many of the English and history graduates have jobs that other students are taking technical training to get.

Western site's tougher than Medinah: Trevino

OAK BROOK — Professional golfers usually seem at their personable best the day before the tournament. So it was Wednesday with a very relaxed Lee Trevino.

Prior to playing in the 13th annual Evans Scholars Foundation Pro-Amateur tourney here at Butler National Golf Club, Trevino sat among a group of his fans, making jokes in between talking seriously.

The 35-year-old Texan had reason to frown a few times after shooting 295 last week at the United States Open on Medinah's dreaded No. 3 course.

As he talked, he would flashback to Medinah and then forward to the 72nd Western Open, beginning today on equally dreaded Butler National.

"Thirteen, 18 and 11 — the three holes that killed me," he reflected. Lee was four-over-par on the 18th (including a triple bogey), three over on the 13th and two over on the 11th. "If I could have gotten those three out of my mind, I could have won the Open."

All three are very demanding dog-legs, accounting for all but two of the 11 strokes over par for this two-time winner of the Open.

"I do better on a long, straight away course," said Lee, "because I hit it straight."

Butler's more to his liking in that respect, but Trevino thinks this 7,002 yards of water, wind and worry "is tougher" than Medinah. "I don't know whether it's physically tougher, but there are more hazards and more penalties . . . This golf course has a helluva lot more problems."

Last year he wasn't what the galleries refer to as the "Merry Mexican" after playing four competitive rounds here. In finishing tied for 24th, Trevino had 299 shots, including a third-round 81.

He was heard to say as he left the course, "I'll be back at Butler . . . No course is gonna do that to me and get away with it."

Such statements of braggadocio were missing yesterday, possibly because of Lee's humbling experience at Medinah.

"I don't know how I won it (U.S. Open) twice," continued Lee, appearing very serious.

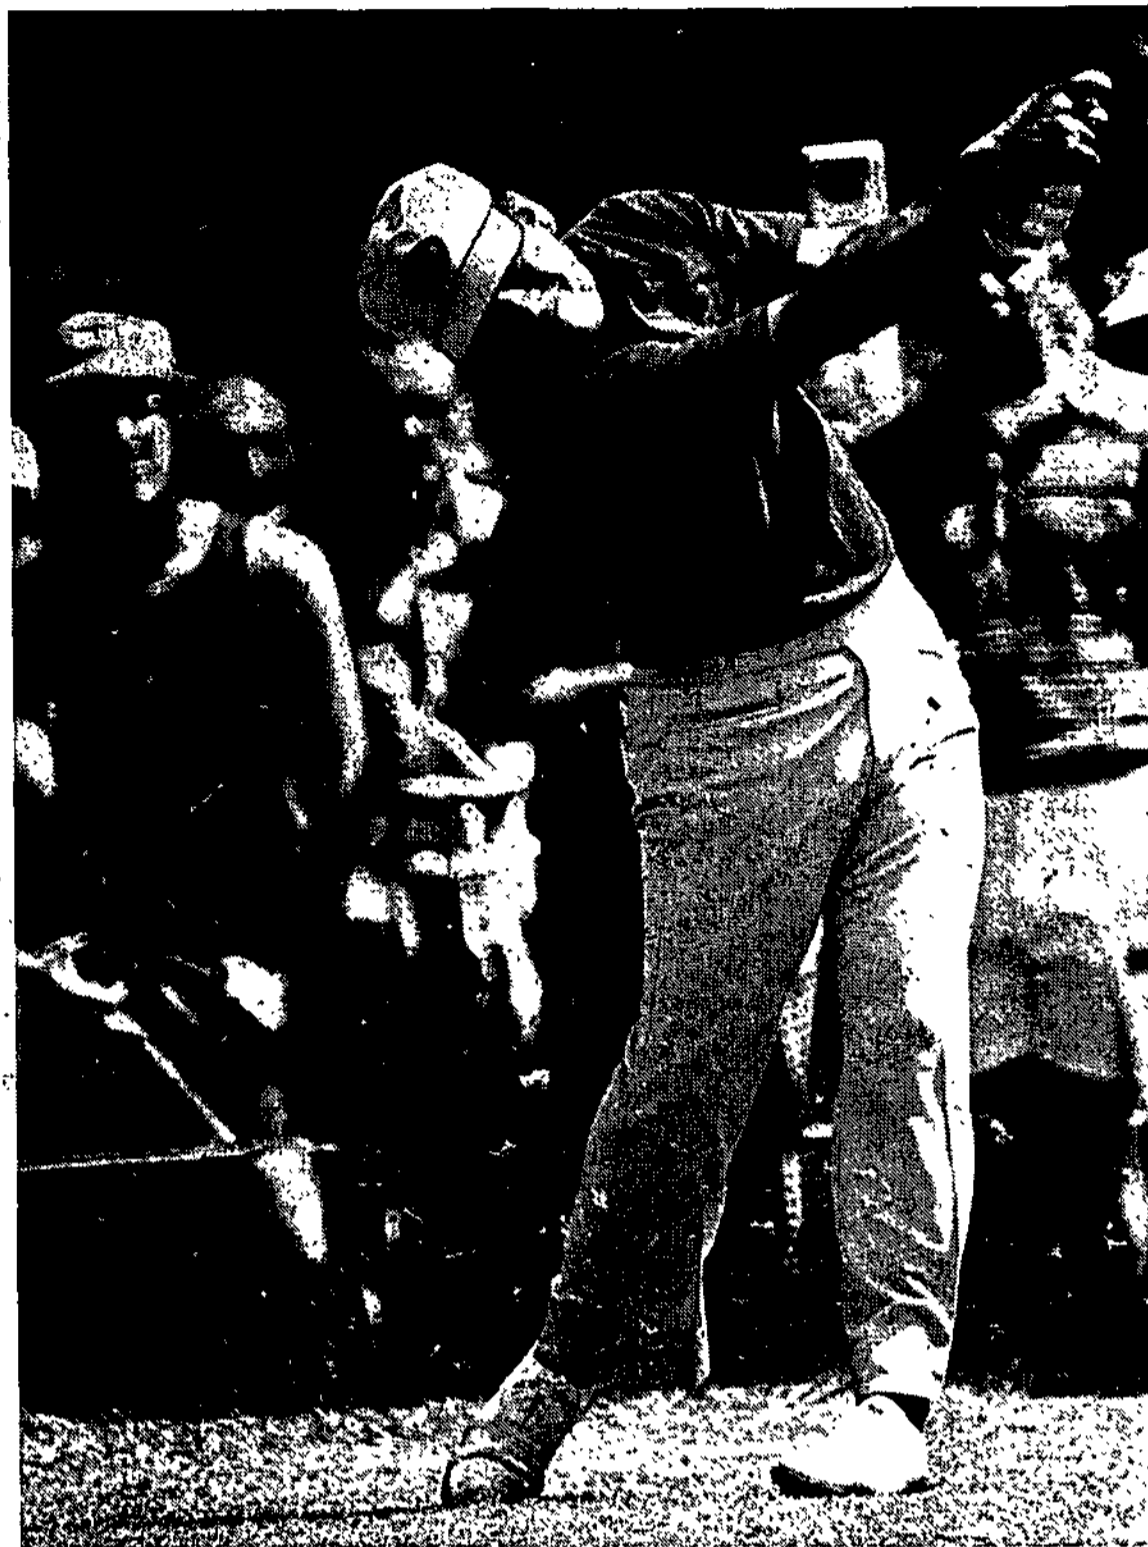

"It was a great golf course. It's tough," he said of Medinah. Then he referred to both tourney sites:

"You can't quit thinking for one second. We play a lot of golf courses where we can relax (on several holes) . . . When you lose a shot here, it may take you two days to get it back."

Lee chuckled a little, but his message came across to those in attendance — it was no fluke that last year's Western Open was won by a three-over-par 287.

Huskies win but Grens lose in Tuesday summer league

Hersey righthander Todd Walker struck out six and allowed just six singles as the Huskies stopped Maine West, 10-4, on Tuesday to register their third summer league baseball win against two losses.

A five-run sixth inning made the difference in a comfortable one. Hitting stars were Tom Barnard with two hits and three runs-batted-in, Joe Pusateri with two hits and Mark Knutzel and Chuck Veselits who each drove in two runs.

In other games, Elk Grove's shaky mitts put the Grenadiers in an early hole as they dropped a summer league contest to Maine South, 9-2.

The Hawks collected only six hits but scored a trio of runs in the first inning without hitting a ball past the Elk Grove infield.

The Grens' offensive production, which included only three hits, amounted to Kevin Stockwell's two-out double off the wall in the fourth.

Stockwell's smash drove in Bill Straybel, who had walked, plus Tom Curran, who reached on a base hit.

The HERALD Jim Kaat (11-4), Sox turn back Texas, 5-2

Jorge Orta ran his hitting streak to 10 games with a double and a triple Wednesday night, batting in two runs, to help the Chicago White Sox to a 5-2 victory over the Texas Rangers and extend their winning streak to four games.

Jim Kaat got the victory, his 11th, while rookie Mike Bacsik took the defeat in his first major league start, lasting 6 1-3 innings and giving up all the Sox runs before he gave way to Steve Foucault.

Orta's double in the fifth scored Brian Downing, who singled and reached third on an error by Len Randle on Pat Kelly's grounder. In the seventh, Bucky Dent singled, advanced on a sacrifice and scored on Kelly's double, while Orta tripled to score Kelly and came home himself on Deron Johnson's single.

Jim Fregosi doubled for the Rangers in the second, advanced on an infield out and scored on Randle's sacrifice fly, while in the eighth Jim Sundberg singled, advanced on Houston's single and scored on Tom Grieve's single.

Expos swamp Cubs, 12-6

Pepe Mangual hit a three-run homer and Mike Jorgensen and Jose Morales each drove in two runs as the Montreal Expos exploded for 10 runs in the seventh inning — the most productive inning in their history — to defeat the Chicago Cubs, 12-6, Wednesday night in Canada.

The Expos were trailing 4-2 when Larry Parrish got on base on Don Kessinger's throwing error in the seventh. Mangual, who also drove in another run earlier in the game, singled and Tim Lincecum was safe on another throwing error by Kessinger to load the bases and knock out starter Rick Reuschel.

Jorgensen then singled off reliever Darold Knowles to bring in two runs and tie the score 4-4 and Morales, who was pinch-hitting, tripled to bring in two more runs as Montreal went ahead 6-4.

Singles by Pete Mackanin and Gary Carter made the score 7-4 and Parrish added another single driving in another run. Pinch-hitter Pat Scanlon singled to score Parrish and Mangual's seventh homer of the season completed the 10-run inning.

Dennis Blair worked seven innings to earn the victory and make his record 5-8.

Manny Trillo drove in two of the Chicago runs and Bill Madlock collected his 100th hit of the season.

And in other sports news...

Fifth seeded Isle Nastase was eliminated by unheralded Sherwood Stewart of Goose Creek, Tex., in the 98th Wimbledon tennis championships. The score was 6-6, 6-8, 6-2, 1-6, 6-3. Jimmy Connors, who is Nastase's buddy, advanced . . .

The California Athletic Commission has fined former featherweight champion Bobby Chacon $2,500 and suspended him indefinitely for failing to properly condition himself for last Friday's unsuccessful title defense against Ruben Olivares. The fight was stopped in the second round . . .

Easy way to reach Western Open golf tourney

As the map indicates, all major highways lead to the 72nd Western Open golf tournament at Butler National Golf Club in Oak Brook.

Those Herald area golfing fans who are planning to see the professionals up close this week can take the Tri-State Tollway (I-294) south, exiting at Cermak Road. (The exit comes just after a toll booth.)

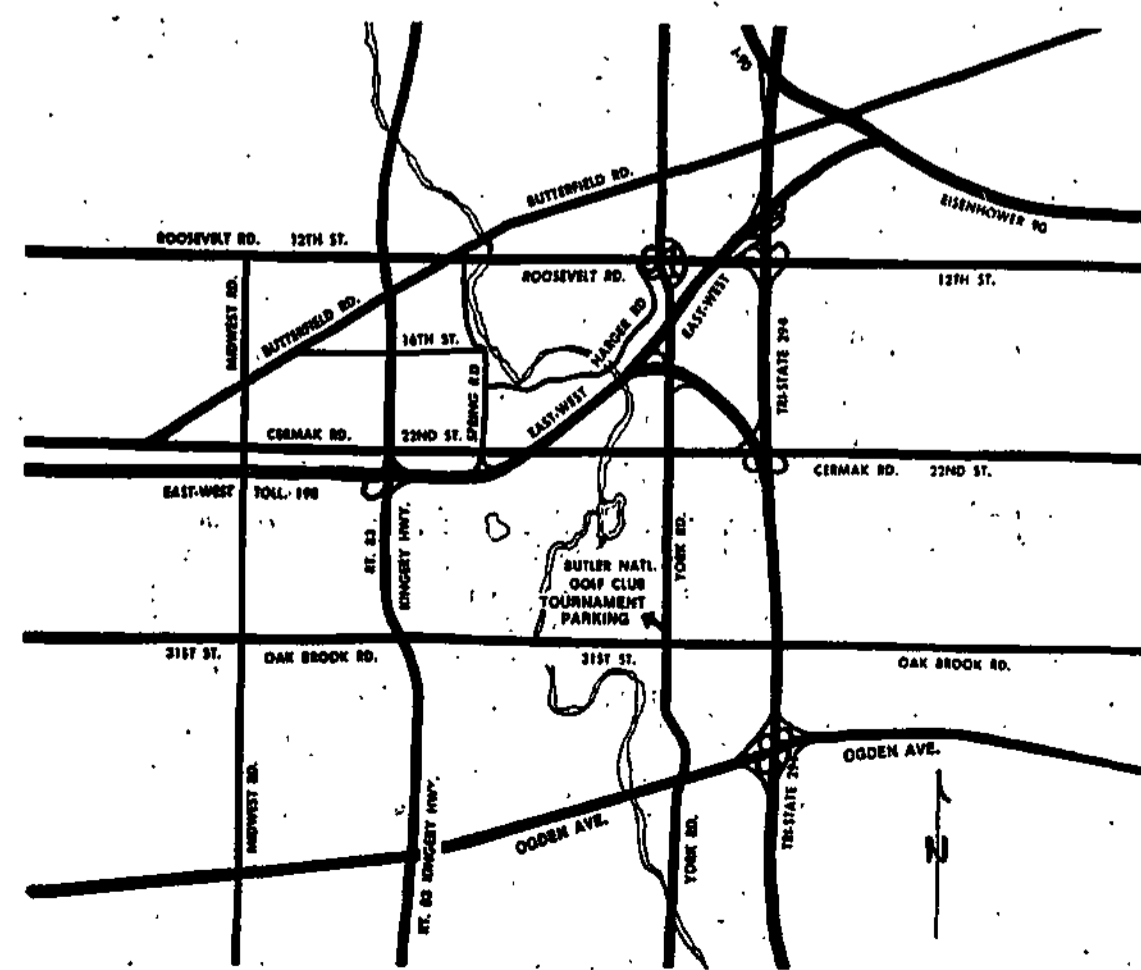

Head west on Cermak, turning south on York Road to the public parking.

Because of the heavy rains the past week, the usual parking south of Butler National has been closed. Until this grassy area again becomes solid, parking will be handled at the areas marked along York Road. Just follow the signs. A shuttle service will deliver you to the main entrance.

The daily ticket price is the same as in 74 despite inflation — $7 during the two weekdays and $8 on the weekends. Children under 14 years of age will be admitted at half price when accompanied by an adult.

In last year's Western, Chicagoans broke attendance records six straight days, starting with Tuesday's practice round. A total of 104,000 visited these grounds, earning thousands of dollars for the Evans Scholarship fund.

Western officials are hoping this week's tourney will assist the college education of many more caddies.

Union Camp now 3-0 in Des Plaines loop

There was only one night of play in the Des Plaines AA League as rain postponed the Tuesday games. In the games on Friday, Union Camp collected 6 runs on 6 hits in the 4th inning and went on to defeat The Office 10-1. Bob Willenberg homered for Union Camp, currently undefeated in 16-inch league play.

Beacon Tap found themselves with an 11-4 lead over O'Brien Florist after 4 innings, but O'Briens came back to win an exciting extra-inning game by a score of 15-14. The winning hit was a double by Mark Ackermann after Mickey Drews had singled. Frank Mitchell had a fifth inning home run for O'Briens.

In the final game of the evening Rebel Trophies defeated Little Villa Pizza, 6-3. Defense was highlighted in this game as each team collected only six hits. Mike Albrecht had a home run for Rebels in the 6th inning.

Standings — Union Camp 3-0; Dean's Concrete 3-1; O'Brien Florist 2-2; Rebel Trophies 2-3; The Office 1-2; Beacon Tap 1-3; Little Villa Pizza 1-3.

Rains cancel 2 legion games

To nobody's surprise, rain washed out the Arlington Heights-Park Ridge and Wheeling-Logan Square American Legion baseball games Tuesday evening.

Arlington led, 3-0, and pitcher Scott Green had two outs in the visitors' second when rainstorms struck Recreation Park. The game will be restarted as part of a doubleheader on Sunday, also at Recreation.

Wheeling's Mitch Guilett and Logan Square's Keith Mallian were locked in a scoreless pitching duel in the home fourth when rain besieged St. Viator's diamond. No make-up date has been set.

Binzel ties Nowack

Binzel Industries surged ahead to reclaim a share of first place along with Nowack Sales as action in the Arlington Heights Twilight Golf League approaches the halfway point in the season. Grimm Welding and Control Equipment are making their bids to keep the race tight.

Paul Witkowski of Binzel led his team with a low net 27 and Gordon Ward of Grimm netted a 30 at Hilldale. L. Haines Sr., B. Hudec, A. Lindner, and H. Haralambous lead for individual honors. D. Shewczyk is top alternate.

Golfers set to play for kids

Marty Gannon of Des Plaines is one of more than 150 suburban and Chicago amateur golfers who have signed to play in the Children's Memorial Hospital Pro-Am Golf Championship.

The event is scheduled for June 30 at the Onwentsia Club in Lake Forest as top pros will play with the amateurs.

This will be the 15th annual meeting of the golfers as the amateurs make a contribution of $500 to the hospital in order to play in the tournament, a major fund-raiser for the hospital's Free Care Fund.

This year's tourney is again being sponsored by Marcor, Inc., as 156 amateurs and 50 pros are expected to compete for a total purse of $20,000.

Last year's tourney produced more than $104,000 for the Free Care Fund, which now provides over two million dollars in free care a year.

Gallery tickets, $10 for adults and $5 for children are available from Mrs. Jay Parry Monge, ticket chairman of the benefit, or at the gate.

Bud's takes lead in T-Bird Twilight golf

Bud's Installations moved into the lead of the Thunderbird Twilight Golf League by taking eight points from Mount Prospect Vacations, who held the top spot the week before.

Bud's held a half point lead over second place Heights Cleaners.

The low gross for the day went to Marty Gilmore with a 39. Gilmore is also the No. 1 bracket leader.

Kre-Ken holds first half lead

Kre-Ken Patterns closed out the first half of the YMCA Twilight Golf League season where they've been all season, on top of the standings.

Kre-Ken's 33½ points gave them a slim lead over Allen's Men's Store at 30 and the Bank & Trust of Arlington Heights at 29½.

Max Femoller carded a sizzling 38 to earn low gross honors while Bob Busch, Ed Nixon and Milt Koehler were all knotted at 43.

Pemoller also took the low net with a 31.

Birdies were chalked by Jack Barry on No. 13, Rog Lietzau on No. 11 and No. 13 and Dick Hoyt on No. 7.

Members of the first half champs are Milt Koehler, captain, Dick DeWar, Harold Peterson, Howard Rover and Harold Schlichting.

Foul play

Bailey Howell got to be very pushy in the 1964-65 National Basketball Association season. During that time the Baltimore player set the league record of 345 personal fouls in one season.

Local men 2nd in CDTA doubles

Bob Breckenridge, the head pro at the Arlington Indoor tennis club and a resident of Arlington Heights, and Rick Whittington, the pro at the Right Club in Schaumburg, reached the doubles championship of the Berkley Square Chicago District Racquet Club Men's Open last weekend.

The championship of the singles phase of the tournament, between Ray Cahnman and Dale Fritz, will be held Sunday, June 29 at 8:30 p.m. The public is invited.

Breckenridge and Whittington reached the finals by setting down Laddie Birge of Elk Grove and Rick Armbrust of Arlington Heights in the quarterfinals 6-4, 6-2.

Then, in the semi-finals, they knocked off a pair of Chicago players, Josef Solc and George Hahn 6-3, 6-4.

The doubles championship matched the local pair with Brad Holland, from the University of Michigan, and Mike Barr, who is a freshman at the University of Wisconsin.

"The championship round matched youth and experience," said Gary Coulter, the head pro at Berkley Square. "In both the first and second sets the victory went to the team that could break service first."

Holland and Barr matched Breckenridge and Whittington through the first 10 games of the first set, both teams holding serve to leave the score tied at 5-5.

The youngsters then broke Breckenridge's serve and held their own to win the first set 7-5.

The same pattern held through the second set, with both teams holding until Breckenridge and Whittington broke Barr and held their own for a 7-5 second set win.

In the deciding third set Holland and Barr broke service early and took a commanding 4-1 lead. Breckenridge and Whittington broke service themselves and climbed back into contention by tying the score at 4-4.

Breckenridge was broken at 5-5 and Holland was broken the game after to tie the set at 6-6 and send it into a tiebreaker.

Holland and Barr took a 3-1 lead then split and held on for a 6-2 victory that gave them the set and match, 7-6.

Success is: Meeting America's Defense Needs Without The Draft ...

Your Army recruiters in the Chicago area will go over the top on the 30th of June. That's the completion date for the second full year of the all-volunteer Army.

Sure, nationally we met the manpower goals set by Congress and The Pentagon. But our local pride is showing right now. We did our share . . . thanks to the support of good, old Chicagoland, in general; and about 8,000 of your finest young people, in particular.

These soldiers believe it makes sense to serve your country while you serve yourself in an Army made up entirely of volunteers.

June is a big month for us for another reason, too. Your Army was 200 years old on the 14th.

So, thanks, Chicagoland!

And Young America: Let us tell you what it can mean, personally, when you "Join The People Who've Joined The Army."

Materials, labor continue to soar

Housing sales up—but so are prices

by LEA TONKIN

Housing starts and sales are increasing in the suburbs, a good sign for potential buyers and developers.

The only catch is the higher prices for new homes coming on the market, said Charles Matthies, president of Charles G. Matthies Inc. Matthies said he is optimistic about the company's ability to hold the line on construction costs, "but he who hesitates is going to pay more," he said.

"At our Arlington Heights project, which is Surrey Park, we're putting in four more foundations which represents 32 units. It looks like right now it's going to cost us 8½ per cent more than it did a year ago for the same identical product," Matthies said. The River Forest company is building "octominiums," or condominium apartments in units of eight, on New Wilke Road.

AN INCREASE in the cost of materials and labor offset the declines in construction financing costs, Matthies said. "Perhaps the only thing that has not gone up is lumber cost," he said. Homebuyers may find that housing costs will increase 10 per cent during the coming year, he predicted. Matthies reports steady sales of the octominium units priced at an average of $40,000.

Builders face the challenge of producing affordable housing, Matthies said. The elimination of expensive extras such as clubhouses may enable builders to hold the line on price, he said. "Other than cheap housing in the boonies, the average young couple is not buying single-family housing because they can't afford it, with one exception: if they can get help from their parents."

"People have some insecurity, and worry about their job," Matthies said. "But I look for things to pick up. I'm starting now in preparation for 1976." The federal government generally helps the housing industry in election years, he said. Matthies said the federal homebuyers' rebate program has had little impact on his company, however.

Matthies' optimism about increased new housing starts in the area is seconded in the most recent Bell Federal Savings and Loan Assn. survey of new building. The Chicago association checks new home permits in the six-county Chicago metropolitan area.

THE BELL SURVEY indicates suburban single-family house permits increased 18 per cent during May from 907 units to 1,050 units, compared with May 1974 figures. Multi-family or apartment permits rose from 32 to 133 units in unincorporated areas. The figures are included in a report for all types of housing, showing an 18 per cent decline in permits for May compared with year-earlier figures.

The faster pace of area home development mirrors national trends recently reported by the U.S. Commerce Dept. Housing starts in the U.S. reached an annual rate of 1,126,000 units during May, the highest rate since September, 1974. An indicator of future housing construction, building permits rose to a 909,000 annual rate in May compared with an 837,000-unit rate in April.

A 25 per cent jump in new-home sales during April was reported by the Commerce Dept. The seasonally adjusted rate of 560,000 home sales followed a 490,000-unit rate in March. The department said the inventory of an adjusted 386,000 unsold homes at the end of April was equal to a seven-month supply of housing, compared with a nine-month supply in March. The new federal tax credit played a significant role in recent new home sales, said J.S. Norman, president of the National Assn. of Home Builders.

"There has been a definite increase in new-home sales," said Edward Zale, an executive of Zale Construction Co. in Arlington Heights and President of the Home Builders Assn. of Chicagoland (HBAC). "We traditionally go into a slow period from about the middle of June to about the middle of August but there seems to be more activity this year," Zale said.

HOME BUYERS will likely encounter a 5 to 8 per cent hike in housing costs within the next several months, Zale predicts. New labor contracts,

$5,000 above 1974 figures

Sales of existing houses are increasing in the Northwest suburbs, said Kenneth Ruud of Kenneth A. Ruud Inc., Arlington Heights. Ruud is president of the MAP Multiple Listing Service.

Members of the Northwest suburban listing service reported 788 home sales with an average selling price of $47,648 in May, Ruud said. The figures compare to May 1974 totals of 599 sales at an average price of $42,736.

The January-through-May sales totals also increased, the MAP executive said. There were 2,943 home sales at an average price of $44,365 for the five-month period ending May 1974 and 3,134 sales at an average selling price of $47,393 for the same period in 1975.

A decline in mortgage rates and the extension of the Illinois usury ceiling at 9.5 per cent are positive signs for the home sales business, Ruud said. He said an increasing number of young people look for homes as mortgage financing costs decrease.

Virgil Grand, president of the Northwest Suburban Board of Realtors, also noted an increase in home buying activity. "We hope it will get better right along as people gain confidence," he said. The average selling price for single-family homes in some Northwest suburban communities is $52,000 to $60,000, he said.

land, materials and other costs add to the new home price "and interest rates also contribute. All these things make it more difficult for the median-income family to buy the house they'd like," Zale said.

Increased housing density, the construction of living units from 1,100 to 1,500 square feet and the use of innovative materials enable builders to stabilize housing costs, Zale said. He is president of the Meadow Edge Co., developer of Meadow Edge townhome project in Rolling Meadows.

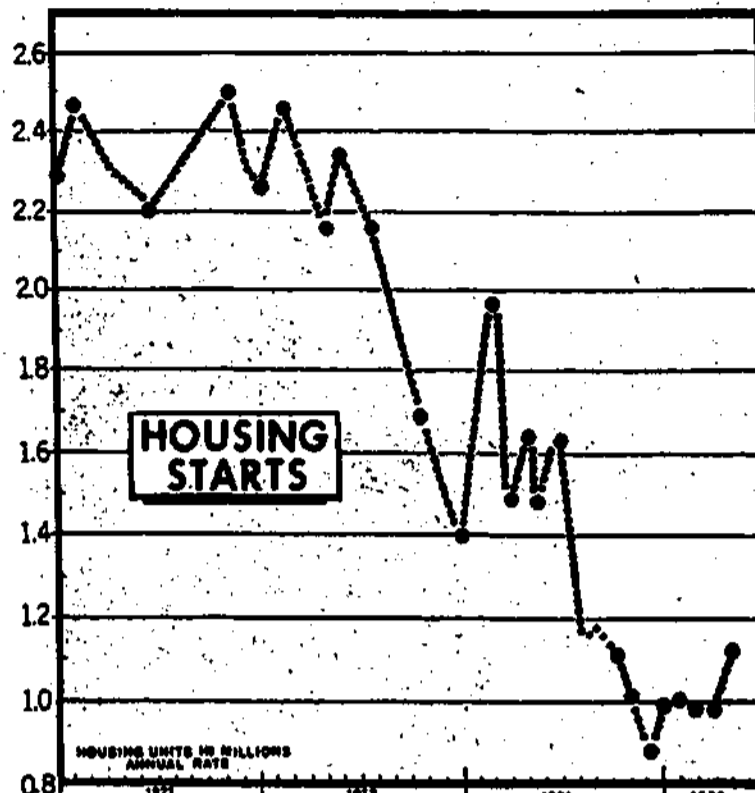

The firm is using a Fiberglass Bloc-Bond product from Owens-Corning Fiberglass Corp. instead of mortar on dry-stacked concrete block walls for the Meadow Edge clubhouse. The Bloc-Bond product is sprayed on the wall surfaces. It is less expensive to use and maintain than virtually any other wall type, Zale said.

"IT'S BACK TO basics to try to build a house rather than a palace," said Herschel Farr, HBAC executive vice president. "Builders are trying to reach some of the young people who have been almost excluded from buying a home."

MANY AREA builders are gearing up for increased construction activity following the settlement of area labor contracts and the extension of the state usury limit, Farr said. He estimates an average new housing unit in the Chicago area costs $42,500.

Building trades gained an average of 7 to 9 per cent increase in wages and fringe benefits in the recent round of Chicago area contract agreements, said Ted Doufexis, executive director of the Residential Construction Employers Council (RCEC). Doufexis said work rule changes adopted by area bricklayers, sheet metal workers and plumbers should lead to improved productivity. The work rule changes sought within the carpentry trades were not accepted.

HOUSING STARTS increased in May to a seasonally adjusted rate of 1,126,000 units from a revised 986,000 units in April, the Com-

The cost of new housing is increasing at a lower rate than in previous years, said John Coulter, director of economic research and statistics for the Chicago Assn. of Commerce and Industry. The total construction cost index is increasing 5 to 6 per cent in 1975, he said.

The rate compares with a steep 11 to 12 per cent increase in the association's consumer price index for homeowners. The rising consumer price index which includes finance and other costs may depress home sales, Coulter said.

The selling price for an average new home in the Chicago area is approximately $48,000, Coulter said. The rising cost of new housing will push an increased number of families into apartment units and condominium housing, he predicts.

Most area communities in flood-insurance plan

All eligible Northwest suburban communities except South Barrington are participating in the National Flood Insurance Program, said Ann Duker, coordinator of the Governor's Task Force on Flood Control.

Under provisions of the Flood Disaster Protection Act of 1973, a July 1 deadline will force a cutoff in home financing in some flood-prone areas that have not applied for participation.

Mrs. Duker said home buyers are required to purchase federally subsidized flood insurance as a condition for mortgage financing, if their new home is within a designated flooding area. The actual compliance dates are staggered according to approval of flood-prone maps by the U.S. Dept. of Housing and Urban Development and community enrollment in the insurance program.

Home sales have not been adversely affected by the flood insurance, Mrs. Duker said. Requests for approval of revised flood plain maps have been submitted by several agencies. Approval of a revised map of Palatine's flood-prone areas is expected in late 1975.

County hits tax-break plan for private housing

A majority of County Board members expressed opposition this week to a proposal that would give real estate tax breaks to privately owned subsidized housing.

At a meeting Monday of the board's finance committee, county commissioners predicted problems would result from a plan to tax subsidized low- and moderate-income housing at the same percentage of market value applied to single-family houses.

The measure was proposed by private industry.

BOARD MEMBERS seemed to favor a plan proposed by County Assessor Thomas M. Tully to one advocated by housing industry representatives. But no vote was taken by the committee at the conclusion of Monday's hearing.

The industry spokesmen advocated assessing large subsidized apartment buildings at the rate of 22 per cent of market value for tax purposes, instead of the 33 per cent normally used on apartment buildings of more than six units.

Tully's plan, explained by Chief Deputy Assessor Theodore Swain, would leave the assessment at 33 per cent but base the market value in the formula on the income from the buildings rather than on the cost of a similar building that was not subsidized.

Tully's plan is being developed as part of a study of subsidized housing under a Ford Foundation grant. The assessor is seeking grant funding from the U.S. Dept. of Housing and Urban Development to put the study findings into effect.

SWAIN SAID Tully's plan would reduce taxes on subsidized housing so that 15 to 20 per cent of the gross rental income would be paid in taxes.

Those who had testified in favor of dropping the assessment level to that of single-family houses said many projects now in receivership were put there by taxes that amounted to between 20 and 30 per cent of gross rental income.

Swain said Tully's opposition to the housing industry proposal was based on the fact that, "It's a sledgehammer approach in an area that needs a scalpel."

He said the broadness of the industry proposal could raise questions of the "fairness of the tax structure" and indicated the plan could even mean giving the subsidized housing an unfair advantage.

Bruce Sagan, chairman of the Illinois Housing Development Authority, was one of the chief backers of the industry plan.

A NEWSPAPER publisher who has invested $180,000 in one subsidized housing project, Sagan argued that county assessment procedures are in conflict with state and federal programs aimed at encouraging construction of low and moderate-income housing.

He told of a new 78-unit building on Chicago's South Side that is in foreclosure because taxes total 35 per cent of the gross rent income.

He predicted that without a tax break, no new subsidized apartments will be built and the county will lose existing buildings from the tax rolls as neighborhoods deteriorate.

Dunbar Lakes to host picnic celebration Sunday

There'll be hot air balloon rides, boat races, tennis tournaments, picnic lunches—and lots more—at the grand opening of the Dunbar Lakes Bath and Racquet Club. It will all be happening from 2:30 to 5:30 p.m., Sunday, June 29.

Residents of the condominium development are getting ready for a "Greening of Dunbar Lakes." To top off completion of the first landscaping phase on the development, residents will be provided with garden plots as well as seeds and starter plants.

A garden expert will be on hand to get the planting underway. He'll also be answering gardening questions from guests at the Dunbar Lakes picnic and garden party. The development's residents are planning to make a communal scarecrow on Sunday afternoon to guard their anticipated vegetable crop.

The opening of the Bath and Racquet Club will be commemorated with the planting of a 40-foot tree. The president of the Dunbar Corporation, Herbert M. Rosenthal, will officiate at the ceremony.

Guests will be able to take a ride in a hot air balloon which will be moored at the recreation center. There'll be a drawing every 30 minutes for rides in the balloon.

Those attending the Dunbar Lakes picnic will be able to tour 10 decorator model homes if they wish.

There will be dancing throughout the day with music and performances by the rock-saltire recording group, Wilderness Road.

Sailboats and canoes will be available for visitors' use most of the afternoon. At 4:30 p.m., residents will compete in boat races. An on-going tennis tournament in men's and women's singles and mixed doubles will go on throughout the weekend. Final matches will be played on Sunday afternoon.

A project of Dunbar Corporation of Chicago, Dunbar Lakes provides the major forms of condominium housing—townhouses and villas—in an environmentally-oriented setting.

Upon completion, the $61 million development will provide 1,716 condominium residences, serviced by a 60,000 square foot shopping center, and additional recreational facilities located throughout the condominium community.

There are four model villas, all two-bedroom, ranging in price from $31,490 to $32,990. The "Ashley" is a garden ranch villa with a private patio, and the "Dorset" is a penthouse ranch villa with a balcony. The "Barclay" and "Chelsea" villas are two-story condominium homes with a private patio. All villas feature a private front entry and direct garage access.

The six townhome models each include a full basement. The "Allison," "Beverly" and "Cynthia" are all two-bedroom homes ranging from $36,900 to $39,900. The three-bedroom models, "Deborah," "Evelyn," and "Francesca," range in price from $41,900 to $48,900.

Dunbar Lakes is located on Plum Grove Road one-half mile south of Higgins Road in Schaumburg. The 10 model homes and information center are open Sundays through Thursdays, 10 a.m. to 8 p.m., Fridays and Saturdays, 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.

DES PLAINES Chrysler-Plymouth president, Bill Haeger Jr. recently received the Chrysler Corporation's Distinguished Dealer award for 1974. On Haeger's right is Al Crawford, Chicago zone; assistant manager for parts and service, and on the right is Larry Koenig, Chicago zone parts manager, Chrysler Corporation.

The Distinguished Dealer Award is awarded to dealers who maintain the highest standards of business integrity. Included in the requirements for this award are outstanding achievements in the area of customer service, administration and sales performance, clean and well maintained facilities and community relations.

Quinlan & Tyson breaks record

Quinlan and Tyson, Inc., Realtors, has smashed another all-time company record for the third month in a row.

With a sales total of $19.1 million during May, the North Shore and northwest suburban area real estate firm recorded a new monthly sales high.

Q&T's monthly sales record has fallen in each of the last three months, as the company produced these residential sales totals: March: $17,100,000; April: $18,300,000; May: $19,100,000.

The firm's year-to-date sales now total $77 million, Martin said.

"In May, each of our 11 area sales offices sold more than $1 million for the first time in the history of the company," Martin stated.

"This spectacular effort places Quinlan and Tyson $11 million ahead of the same period last year and $7.5 million ahead of the pace set in our record year of 1973," said William B. Martin, senior vice president and general manager-residential sales.

Rich Port leads delegation

Realtor Rich Port, president of the American Chapter - International Real Estate Federation, recently led a delegation of 175 American Realtors to Paris, France and the 1975 International Real Estate Congress.

Rich Port

Port is Chairman of the Board of Rich Port, Realtor, a past president of the National Association of Realtors, the Illinois Association of Realtors and the La Grange Real Estate Board.

The Congress, held at the new Paris Convention Center, was attended by 1,500 real estate delegates, representing 31 countries from five continents.

The theme for the '75 International Real Estate Congress was, "The Real Estate Profession Facing World Development." Included in the program were outstanding speakers who spoke on professional training, financing, a host of other topics, work programs and lectures by highly qualified real estate specialists.

The Congress is held every year in one of the member countries. In 1976, the American Chapter will host the Congress in San Francisco. In 1977, it will be held in Amsterdam, Holland.

The idea of an international real estate organization was discussed by various countries as early as 1948, but it was not established until June, 1951, when rules were approved by the five founder countries: Austria, Belgium, the Federal Republic of Germany, France and the United States. Today, it has membership in 30 countries with 59 professional organizations in Europe, Africa, America, Asia and Australia represented by delegations or chapters of more than 600,000 real estate professionals. In addition, 22 corresponding countries maintain regular relations with the federation.

Profile of condo owners

"Profile of a condominium owner: Sophisticated, well-educated, urbane."

So observes Marshall C. Dennison, president and chief executive officer of Associated Mortgage Companies, Inc., Philadelphia-based national real estate financing and servicing organization.

"Condominium ownership is one of today's most popular life styles — a concept that is definitely here to stay."

What do typical owners look like? Why do they prefer this way of living to any other? Dennison lists a few of their characteristics:

Highly discriminating, they seek to preserve their personal identity and express their individual personalities.

Environmental comfort is an important factor in their lives.

They are usually classified among the more affluent groups.

They want freedom from burdensome maintenance chores that compete with weekend pursuits.

Usually keen business managers, they see the advantages of equity investment as opposed to rental expenditures.

They seek privacy and dignity — living among their peers.

The condominium spells out moving up in the world — a means of identifying themselves with success and achievement.

They have an above-average income and hold positions of authority in their business or career fields.

They drive to work — 30 per cent own second cars.

The majority are former apartment dwellers — ex-owners of single-family homes.

Age bracket? Both young and old alike — young marrieds, singles and the new breed of empty nesters.

It is not rare for them to own a second or vacation home.

Who buys condominiums?

"A better question is who doesn't want to buy a condo," Dennison concludes.

Real estate facts

President, Northwest Suburban Board of REALTORS®

Like the medical and legal professions, real estate has its own language. And just as the Latin terms used by doctors and lawyers can be confusing to the layman, so can the jargon used by Realtors and real estate brokers.

Knowing the language of real estate pays big benefits to both buyers and sellers. Familiarity with the terminology means avoiding the confusion encountered by the "uninitiated" during real estate transactions.

Here, then, are half the "A to Zs" of real estate jargon. One term is defined for each of the first 13 letters of the alphabet. In my next column, I'll define terms for "N" through "Z."

Amortized loan: A loan requiring periodic payments which are used to reduce the original amount of the loan so that it will be repaid in full by a predetermined date.

Blanket Mortgage: A mortgage having two or more properties pledged or conveyed as security for a debt, usually for subdividing and improvement purposes.

Conventional loan: A mortgage loan made by a financial institution without Federal Housing Administration (FHA) insurance or Veterans Administration (VA) guarantee. It is called a conventional loan because it conforms to accepted standards, modified within legal bounds by mutual consent of the borrower and lender.

Deed: A legal document which transfers property ownership.

Equity: The interest or value an owner has in a property over and above the amount owed on it.

Federal Housing Administration (FHA): A government agency operating to stabilize the home mortgage market. It makes no loans, but functions as an insuring agency on loans made by others under prescribed conditions.

Government National Mortgage Association (GNMA or "Ginnie Mae"): A government corporation that provides special assistance for certain FHA and VA loans, and guarantees securities backed by mortgage loans.

Habendum Clause: A clause in a real estate document which specifies the extent of the interest to be conveyed.

Improvements on Land: Structures such as buildings, fences, driveways and retaining walls which are erected on a site that is usually privately rather than publicly owned. Improvements on land are not to be confused with improvements to land. The latter refers to publicly owned structures such as curbs, sidewalks, street lighting systems and sewers which are constructed to enable the development of privately owned land.

Joint Tenancy: A tenancy shared equally by two or more parties with the right of survivorship.

K factor: One of the characteristics of house insulation — along with thickness and material it's made of — which engineers use to determine insulation quality and effectiveness.

Leverage: The investment of borrowed funds in a way which produces a return at a rate higher than that at which the money was borrowed. For example, if a person borrows money at eight per cent to buy property which yields a 10 per cent return, he has realized leverage.

Multiple Listing Service: A system adopted by the National Association of Realtors whereby a house listed with a Realtor may also be sold by other Realtors in a relatively large geographical area who participate in the service. Through MLS, Realtors can better serve the buying and selling public.

Xonics, Inc. leases space

A new, revolutionary X-ray system that will reduce radiation dosage, provide sharper, more revealing detail and cost less per print will be in production by November in a new 25,000 square foot facility under construction in Barrington Square Center for Industry, Hoffman Estates.

Nardi and Company, Inc. Industrial Realtors and developers, headquartered here, is the developer of Barrington Square Center for Industry and is handling the total "package" for the plant for Xonics, Inc. Xonics is a multi-million dollar Van Nuys, California company that has recently introduced the Xonics Electron Radiography System (XERG).

Groundbreaking ceremonies for the new structure were held May 28.

The facility will be constructed with truck-level loading & drive-in door. In addition, 2500 square feet will be devoted to office space and the plant will be serviced with heavy electrical power.

Xonics, which moved into an 11,000 square foot facility two years ago in the same Hoffman Estates area, has enjoyed such growth that additional space was almost immediately necessary.

totaling nearly $400,000, setting a new company record for individual sales in a single month.

Setting the pace in the firm's newest office located in Arlington Heights was Jack Becque whose sales totaled in excess of $300,000.

The top volume producer in Hoffman Estates was Laurnell Wegryn who is a life member of the MAP Million Dollar Sales Club.

April showers dampen sales

A slight decline in April sales, attributed in part to a month of wet weekends and an unseasonal 10-inch blizzard, was reported by Baird & Warner, Inc., a Chicago-area real estate company.

Sales production went to 423 units from 442 units a year ago. Dollar volume for the month was $24,504,877 compared to $25,542,957 last year.

Robert G. Walters, senior vice president and general manager of the residential sales division, pointed to the weather as a significant factor in the residential downturn.

"Weekends are extremely important to home sales. Heavy showers practically every weekend and a couple of storms can really dampen shopping plans," he said.

Residential sales participations for the month totaled 382 units valued at $20,693,315. In the year-ago month 388 sales produced $20,951,253.

Mace Cole, vice president of the commercial and industrial sales division, reported 59 sales for the period compared to 54 last year. Dollar volume for the current month was $3,811,562 against $4,581,704 last year.

Cumulative sales results for the year through April improved in both production and dollar volume. The company recorded 1,507 sales participations in the first four months of 1974 worth $87,042,599, compared with 1,474 sales and $86,327,741.

The company's Lake Shore office, 1625 N. Lincoln Plaza, surpassed the $2 million sale mark in April with $2,008,247 to lead a group of eight offices enjoying sales of $1 million or more.

The Barrington office just missed the $2 million mark with $1,909,460.

Others in the select circle for April were: Arlington Heights, $1,367,620; and Mount Prospect, $1,003,650.

75 participate in sales rally

Seventy-five real estate sales associates and managers of northwest suburban Century 21 offices recently participated in the first district Sales Rally held at a breakfast meeting at Old Orchard Country Club last week.

Herb Carl of Century 21 - Arlington Realty and Chuck Hartman, Century 21 - Countryside Real Estate, were co-chairman of the event and also acted as co-masters of ceremonies. Dave Yeats, Century 21 - Village Square, district vice president, opened the Sales Rally and introduced special guests, including Lowell Stahl, Century 21 regional director. There are currently 77 member offices in Northern Illinois and 21 offices in the northwest suburban area.

Highlight of the Rally was the presentation of engraved wall plaques to the district winners for April and May. Winners were as follows: April sales, Carol Grimm, Arlington Realty; and Robbie Leckie, Village Square; April listings, Millie Finis, Village Square, and Susan Van Der Bosch, Bell & Snell; April referrals, Jo Anne Geren, Lake Region Realty.

May sales awards went to Dorothy Jacobs, Arlington Realty, and John Elfa, Welter Realtors.

May listing winners were Barbara Noor, Village Square, and Bud Schiller, Grant & Associates. Plaque for most referrals in May went to Dean Yount, Village Square.

Home mortgage credit improved

Virtually every area of the nation has experienced improvement in the availability of home mortgage credit, accompanied by a reduction in mortgage interest rates in the past six months.

These are the findings of the spring, 1975, mortgage market survey just released by the National Association of Realtors Department of Economics and Research.

In addition, the survey found keen competition developing among lenders in many areas, with down payment requirements and interest rates being relaxed almost on a weekly basis.

However, despite favorable trends depicted by survey results, many survey participants expressed concern that the trends may not continue. The mortgage market has been plagued by wide cyclical swings in recent years, and many of those surveyed feel the market will tighten and rates climb again in the fall when the federal government enters capital markets to fund anticipated massive budgetary deficits.

Furthermore, not all areas have experienced the same pace of recovery. And in some — particularly those where local economies have been hard hit by recession — concern over mortgage supplies has been replaced by the problem of declining buyer interest.

Many respondents pointed out, too, that the current structure of mortgage rates still is well outside the affordable reach of most moderate income families.

Following are survey findings on availability of conventional mortgage money and changes in mortgage interest rates.

Mortgage credit availability for new homes or existing homes in good neighborhoods are greatly improved for each of the three types of conventional loans surveyed: uninsured, 90 per cent privately insured and 95 per cent privately insured.

Borrowers seeking uninsured conventional loan to finance a new home encountered ample or moderate supplies in 92 per cent of the nation's market areas — a marked reversal from the situation six months ago, when reports of ample or moderate supplies came from just 14 per cent of the nation.

Uninsured conventional loan supplies to finance the purchase of an existing home in a good neighborhood are deemed ample or moderate in nine out of 10 areas surveyed. In September, only 14 per cent reported an ample or moderate supply of funds.

Ninety per cent privately insured conventional mortgages for purchase of a new home were in ample supply in 41 per cent of the nation in mid-March. Supplies were described as moderate in 39 per cent of areas surveyed, and 20 per cent of the nation reported that funds for this type of home mortgage were tight or not available. While considerably below the levels recorded in spring, 1973, when nearly all markets were flush with funds, the situation showed improvement over the meager availability encountered last September.

Availability of 90 per cent privately insured conventional mortgages to finance an existing home in a good neighborhood was almost exactly the same as for a new house. Credit resources were deemed ample in 40 per cent of the areas surveyed, and moderate in 39 per cent. Reports of tight or virtually unavailable supplies came from the remaining 21 per cent of the country.

Recovery in availability of 95 per cent privately insured conventional loans lagged behind other types of mortgages and was well below levels reported in March, 1973. Whether a buyer sought to finance a new or existing home, this type of loan was almost unavailable in one-fourth of the nation, and funds were tight in an additional one-fourth of the areas surveyed.

Mortgage interest rates for all conventional loans has declined considerably from record highs established in 1974, the survey found, and it appeared that further declines were in the offing. However, most survey participants felt rates would not fall to levels typical before the credit squeeze. Several pointed to inflation as a factor which will prevent rates from declining below eight per cent, while others cited the high cost of funds to thrift institutions. And some states still impeded the orderly flow of mortgage funds by retaining low usury ceilings.

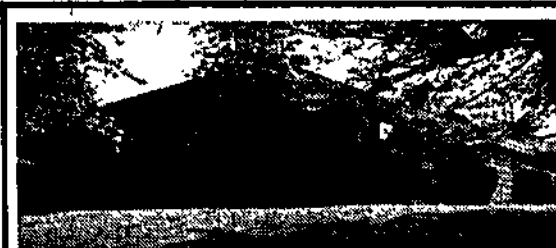

Interest rates for an uninsured conventional loan on a new home dipped well below the range typical just six months ago. A rate of nine per cent was common in 40 per cent of the areas surveyed, while rates of 8 1/2 per cent or 9 1/4 per cent prevailed in an additional 40 per cent of the country. But, although rates have declined measurably since September, 1974, charges are still well above March, 1973, levels. At that time, the vast majority of loans were transacted at rates below eight per cent.

Interest rates for an uninsured conventional loan on an existing home showed a similar pattern to that for newly constructed units.

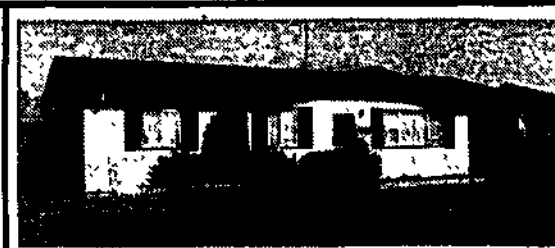

For a 90 per cent loan on new or existing homes, prevailing interest charges were typically .25 per cent above the rate for mortgages requiring larger downpayments. While few rates reached as high as 10 per cent, interest charges below nine per cent also were relatively scarce.

The most prevalent rate for the scarce 9 per cent uninsured conventional mortgage on a new house occurred in the range of nine per cent to 9 1/4 per cent, exclusive of mortgage insurance and premium. Eighty-five per cent of areas surveyed quoted interest charges in this range. Rates for a 95 per cent uninsured mortgage on an existing house in a good neighborhood mirrored the pattern for new construction.

Novel idea in housing: zero lot line approach

by PAT GERLACH

In an effort to pump vitality into the housing market, the relatively new, zero lot line concept appears to be capturing the attention of a growing number of experts in the home building industry.

Observing a definite trend back toward lower density, many Northwest suburban builders now envision placement of houses at the edge of a property line, eliminating one side yard and shifting the balance of open space to the other three sides.

The approach allows houses to be built on smaller than average size lots, resulting in lower development costs most builders say they will pass on to buyers. It also enables a builder to construct more units on a parcel than possible when using traditional lot sizes of approximately 75 by 125 feet as seen in most Northwest suburban communities.

"IT'S A METHOD offering people more house for the money," said Edward Zale, president of Zale Construction Co., Arlington Heights.

Zale currently has a zero lot line proposal before the Rolling Meadows plan commission which calls for 150 cluster homes on 37 acres of his Meadow Edge project, north of Old Plum Grove Road between Meacham and Quentin roads.

Inflation, Zale said, has caused housing costs to spiral beyond the income of the average home buyer, and has challenged builders to come up with acceptable alternatives.

Chicago attorney Joseph Ash agrees. He represents two Schaumburg builders planning to substitute zero lot line projects for earlier planned high-density projects.

"I definitely feel what is needed is a smaller single family lot so a developer has less improvement costs and, in turn, can sell a house for less," Ash said.

ASH CONTENDS it is nearly impossible in today's market for a builder to sell houses under $60,000.

With 20 per cent down and a $48,000 mortgage, Ash reasons, these families must have an income of between $35,000 and $40,000 a year. "There just aren't that many people who can afford that," he said, adding, "these buyers are then forced into lower cost townhomes or other modes of housing."

Ash said he favors a 40 by 125 foot zero lot where the front would be enhanced with "expensive landscaping" with the builder spending an average of $1,000 per unit in trees, shrubs and plantings. "This way, you make it appear an almost 80 foot lot and it's really very appealing."

HERSCHEL FARR, executive vice president of the Home Builders Association of Greater Chicago, considers the zero concept as "possibly the only way to reach the young buyer." Though the technique is not being used to a great extent in the area yet, Farr said he believes it will become popular "because of the tremendous increase in land cost."

Architect Jane Matheson, of Babbin and Associates, Rolling Meadows planners involved in many Northwest suburban projects, believes the Ero concept works well as long as the same style is not used all the way through a development.

She favors using clusters of 10 lots to form a rectangle and provide guest parking in a center court, cautioning the necessity for "small lots and small, but well designed units having an abundance of space for either indoor or outdoor recreation."

But there are disadvantages in a zero lot line plan.

Farr pointed out that most homebuyers are looking for a piece of land to work with. "It's just not here," he said.

JOSEPH KESSLER, Arlington Heights village planner, cited maintenance as a potential problem.

Kessler favors a written covenant with neighbors allowing an owner to "place a ladder" on adjacent property when painting or repair is needed, noting that most zero projects feature a blank or window-less wall abutting the neighboring lot.

But Kessler said he would not discourage any builder from considering the concept. "Side yards are worthless, and there is really no privacy anyway," he said.

Conversely, lack of privacy was mentioned by both Ash and Zale as a potential drawback in the cluster developments. "But those who strongly desire this privacy aren't going to buy these units anyway," Ash commented.

Those interviewed agree that the zero concept appears to have more going for it on the plus side.

"A BUILDER gets a higher density per acre than with traditional, it cuts down improvement costs and enables you to give the buyer something that better meets his expectations but is in no way detrimental to livability," said Zale.

Zale noted an over-all savings in space which allows a builder to designate a portion of the land as common areas which can be used by all residents of the development, in addition to their own yard space.

Several companies move to Le Ronde

Several companies have recently changed their address to the new Le Ronde Office Plaza, 950 Lee Street in downtown Des Plaines.

According to Ralph H. Martin, president of Wm. L. Kunkel & Co., Realtors, the new lessees include GTE (Automatic Electric, Inc.), Electro-Comp Sales, Inc. and Kelly Girl Services, Inc. Kunkel is the property manager and developer for the office complex which features an atrium.

GTE signed a three year lease for 2,650 square feet. The cooperating broker was George E. Yonan of Baird & Warner's commercial investment department. Electro-Comp Sales signed a three year lease for 900 square feet; while Kelly Girl Services signed a three year lease for 650 square feet.

The Le Ronde Office Plaza's unique design earned the Architectural Award of 1974 for outstanding achievement, presented by the Des Plaines Association of Commerce and Industry.

Suburbs are competing for residents

"Now for virtually the first time since their inception, suburbs are faced with the necessity of competing with other suburbs and with metropolitan centers to keep and attract new residents."

So declares Marshall C. Dennison, president and chief executive officer of Pennamco, Inc., a Philadelphia-based national real estate financing and servicing organization.

One of the nation's three largest mortgage banking firms with a portfolio exceeding $2 billion, Pennamco, formerly Associated Mortgage Companies, Inc., is an affiliate of First Pennsylvania Corporation.

"Gradual reductions in household size," Dennison observes, "has slowed the over-all population growth rate — people can now shop for the best living environment, not just an available one."

He reports that along with the shrinking household, suburbs are currently dealing with a rise in the number of singles and childless couples, many of whom list social amenities as first priority on their housing choice list.

"Suburban areas are striving to match the built-in cultural-entertainment opportunities already existing in most urban complexes," Dennison notes.

He adds that cities are once again providing high appeal for persons in the 25 to 39 age group — a phenomenon reinforced by nationwide interest in preserving traditional urban America.

"Small towns and the outlying metropolitan areas," Dennison points out, "are still capable, however, of meeting the urban challenge — first-rate school systems, extra-convenient shopping centers and multi-purpose arts pavilions are rapidly becoming a part of the non-city scene."

Ironically, the level of excellence in public services and public amenities cultivated by the suburbs is a contributing factor to inter-area rivalry, he notes — prospective residents are able to exercise greater degrees of selectivity than ever before, opting for that area which most closely meets their every need.

"New suburban residents," Dennison explains, "are now geared to a 'total life' concept — one which permits them to work, relax, live and shop within the community proper."

Cities, he reflects, will continue to draw certain segments of the population — individuals who respond best to the space-limited, highly concentrated dimensions of urban life.

"At the same time, suburbs must continue to cultivate their own special residential flavor — appealing to home-seekers eager to settle within a country setting complete with small town neighborhood spirit," Dennison concludes.

THE OPEN FLOOR plan of the Dartmoor, a 1,603 square foot home priced from $53,900, illustrates the bright, cheerful interiors of the homes at Meadow Edge. Architect for the development is The Berkus Group and the interior design was done by William A. Frosolone.

Levitt offers Lakeside homes

If you ever thought about living on a lake with a park-like atmosphere, Levitt Residential Communities, Inc. features four models in its Sheffield Towne subdivision of Schaumburg with lake side positions.

Sheffield Towne is a multi-phase planned unit development of town homes with various architectural stylings. It is located on Ill. Hwy. 58 (Evanston-Elgin Road) between Barrington and Roselle Roads.

"When we planned Sheffield Towne five years ago the model area was built on a peninsula into Sheffield Lake," Joseph Napolitan, regional sales manager, noted. "This, combined with an attractive landscaped area and nearness to the clubhouse, swimming pools and tennis courts makes it a desirable location for any homeowner."

Among the four models offered are a Tudor styled, two-bedroom Chatham; a Tudor styled, three-bedroom Fairmont; a Colonial styled, three-bedroom Fairmont; and Colonial styled, three-bedroom Granville. Townhomes are priced from $32,990 and the Colonial Fairmont is a decorated model.

One of the main reasons for the Chatham's popularity is its floor plan which offers different styles of livability. It features large rooms which can be converted into multiple uses.

Two of its features include a 22-foot family room with insulated glass sliding patio doors and a kitchen with breakfast bar which can be used for cocktails when company visits.

A division between formal entertaining and casual comfort are to be found in the Fairmont. A sheltered portico entry welcomes visitors into a foyer with guest closet and separate living room.

The rear of the townhome features a 19-foot family room with insulated glass sliding doors opening onto a rear patio, kitchen with pantry, laundry room and powder room.

Extra touches for the look of luxury set the Granville apart from most townhomes. Added to that is a certain popularity it has as an end unit.

Sweeping one end of the first floor and across the entire front of the townhome is a 19½-foot living room with pylon corner fireplace. A center hall foyer is not complete without a guest closet and powder room.

Completing the first floor is a 19-foot family room with insulated glass sliding doors opening onto a side patio. Adjoining this room is an L-shaped kitchen with an adjacent laundry room and rear entry.

Unlike its sister townhomes, the Granville has a full bathroom with shower off its master bedroom. There also is a family bathroom, linen closet and abundant storage closets for each bedroom. Included in the price of all three are central air conditioning, carpeting throughout, landscaping, fenced rear yards and underground utilities.

Optional equipment includes fireplaces, basements, built-in am/fm music intercom, deluxe kitchen appliances, built-in water softener and triple track storm windows.

Purchase of a townhome in Sheffield Towne carries with it automatic membership in the Sheffield Towne Homeowners Association which maintains the recreation facilities such as an L-shaped olympic size swimming pool, wading pool, three tennis courts, billiard room, game room, basketball court and clubhouse with sauna.

The Association also provides maintenance of common areas including sidewalks, parking areas and front lawns. This includes lawn mowing and snow removal.

To reach Sheffield Towne, take the Northwest Tollway (I-90) west to Barrington Road. Turn left, drive one mile to Ill. Hwy. 58, turn left, drive one mile to model area.

Stress country living at Lexington Green

Tudor, rustic and colonial-style condominium buildings, spacious coach house floor plans and airy tree-filled grounds add up to relaxed country living at Lexington Green in Schaumburg.

Located on 43 acres — more than half of which are devoted to open space — the $16.5 million community, being built by Lexington Development Corporation, will include 480 two- and three-bedroom homes, priced from $31,990 to $38,490; the Lexington Lodge and Swim Club with pool and fireside resident lounge; and, scattered throughout the development, picnic areas, tot lots, tether ball posts and a volleyball court and horseshoe playing area.

Building exteriors at Lexington Green are particularly striking with brick and stone accented by window shutters and rustic siding.

Interior designer Richard Honquest of Richard Honquest & Associates, Addison, recalled this country flavor as he furnished Coach House Model "D," one of the two-bedroom two-full-bath models at Lexington Green.

"The kitchen reflects, as well as any room, the tone I was trying to set," Honquest said. "The breakfast area itself imparts the feeling of a country store. It is a comfortable area — almost large enough to be termed a family room — where I see a husband relaxing with the newspaper after work as his wife finishes preparing the dinner."

The wall covering in the breakfast/kitchen area is a celery and white country print of grocery bags and baskets laden with food. The celery and white color combination is repeated in the checked cotton fabric used to drape the insulated sliding-glass doors to the home's spacious balcony/patio and for the cafe curtains on the breakfast area window. That fabric is used again to cover the wood-trimmed country-French wing-back chair which transforms a corner of the breakfast room into a cozy conversation area.

Other furnishings include a round butcher-block breakfast table with a metal base, metal chairs with upholstered seats and mock wicker backs, a rustic wall-mounted lamp and a country-style pine parsons table with turned legs.

Honquest sought a more formal look in the model's dining room. "Still, I tried to retain the warm country feel of the kitchen/breakfast room," he said. A three-piece breakfast, constructed of distressed oak and ash, lines the far wall and, according to Honquest, may be used either together as a single unit or apart, as shown in the model. "Here, we've placed the curio cabinets in opposite corners, flanking the glass-fronted central place," he said.

The stained-oak pedestal dining table is lighted by a crystal teardrop chandelier and accented with a dried and silk flower centerpiece. Traditional ladderback oak chairs are used around the dining table and are upholstered in a gold crushed-velvet fabric which complements the deep orange shag carpeting used here and throughout the home.

"The living room is understated and designed for pure comfort," Honquest said. The sofa is upholstered in an orange-toned fabric which, again, complements the carpet. White embroidered pillows are used as accents, and the sofa is flanked by a metal floor lamp with an emerald green shade and an end table with a straw-colored ceramic lamp with a spiral base. The coffee table is traditional in design with a metal base and a glass top.

Other furnishings used in the living room include a traditional easy chair, covered in orange wide wale corduroy, a yellow cylinder lamp and an antique "corner" chair with an embroidered seat cushion. The sliding-glass doors to the balcony are draped in a dramatic cotton print which picks up the blue, orange, green, yellow and gold used elsewhere in the room.

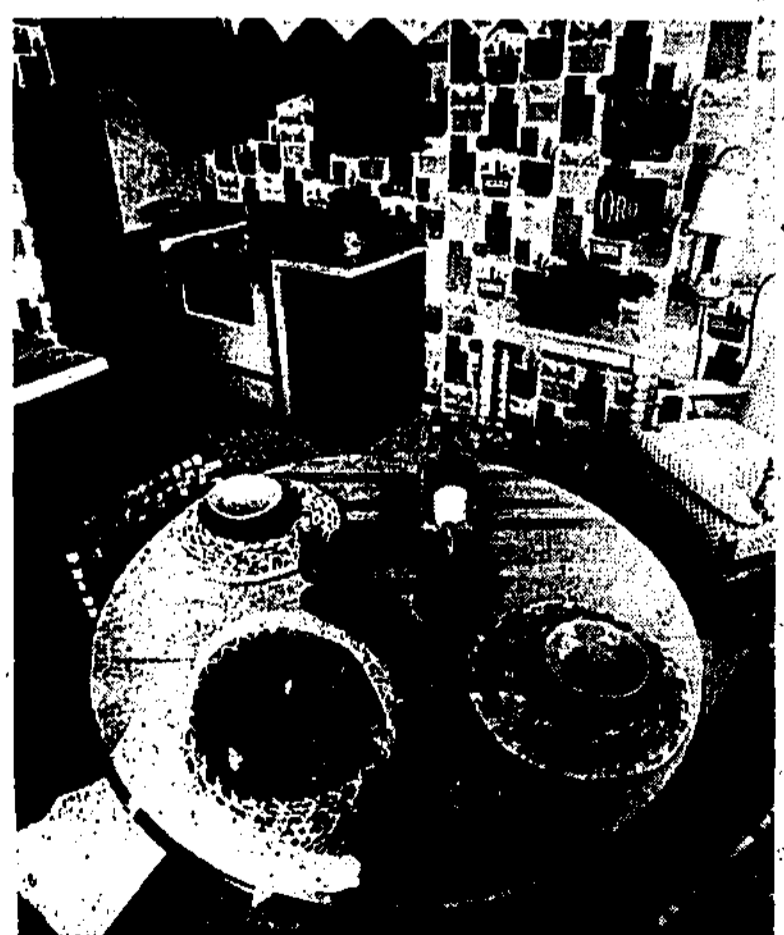

Master bedrooms in Lexington Green coach houses are all large and Honquest sought to stress this fact by creating a suite look in the Coach House "D." The brass bed is queen-sized and covered with a red, blue and yellow traditional patchwork quilt. This patchwork fabric is repeated in the covering of the room's upholstered easy chair and, again, to trim the royal blue cotton draperies. "A traditional Queen Anne-style desk with a candlestick lamp gives the room the versatility of a study," Honquest said.

Other furnishings used in the master bedroom include a Midwestern primitive antique walnut dresser with a marble top and brass hardware, an antique marble-topped "dry sink" used as a bedside table, a dried flower arrangement and a walnut pedestal table, topped by a ginger jar.

Honquest designed the model's second bedroom for a college student. "It would double as a guest room," he said. The double bed has a brown quilt cover, and the four-drawer chest has the look of rough-sawn cedar. The wallpaper is a brown and white documentary print which is complemented by the brown casement cloth draperies.

"I envisioned this home belonging to a mature couple with a college-aged son. It is a home designed for people who enjoy being together," Honquest said.

To visit Lexington Green, take the Kennedy Expressway and the Northwest Tollway to Interstate 90 south. Turn west Illinois 72 and south at Meacham Road to the development. The four coach house models are open from 11 a.m. until 7 p.m. weekdays and from 10 a.m. until 6 p.m. on Saturdays and Sundays.

COACH HOUSE "D" at the Lexington Green condominium development in Schaumburg offers a spacious kitchen, breakfast area and sliding doors, opening onto a balcony.

Cushman & Wakefield enters residential management market

Cushman & Wakefield, Inc., a wholly owned subsidiary of RCA Corp. and the largest commercial real estate organization in the country, has officially entered the residential management market in the Chicago area with its appointment as property manager and leasing agent for Barrington Lakes, announced Ira Norris, vice-president of Los Angeles-based Kaufman and Broad, Inc., developers of the 790-unit apartment community in Hoffman Estates.

Cushman & Wakefield has appointed Ray Wojcik as resident manager; Mrs. Diana Thal, assistant resident manager; and Ted Blech to the newly created position of recreation director.

Construction was begun on Barrington Lakes, a $20 million 45-acre development, in 1970 and, recently, the final phase of construction was completed. The community offers apartments ranging in size from studios to two-bedroom units with dens and monthly rentals from $185 to $425.

Today the development is comprised of 27 brick and natural wood buildings — three-story elevated and two-story walk-up buildings — surrounding a 10-acre lake and interspersed among ponds, creeks, walkways, picnic areas and landscaping.

All apartments are air conditioned and include wall-to-wall carpeting, draperies, built-in ovens and ranges, balconies or patios, grass cloth wall coverings, wood paneling and free outdoor parking. Heated indoor garage space is also available for a monthly fee. All apartments, except studios, feature fireplaces and dishwashers. In addition, several apartments even have wet bars.

At Barrington Lakes, there are washers and dryers on every floor, 24-hour maintenance service, lighted tennis courts, sun decks and a clubhouse which has an atrium, entry, resident lounge with fireplace and wet bar, private party facilities with complete kitchen, billiards room, oversized indoor/outdoor heated swimming pool, whirlpool spa and saunas, gymnasiums and locker rooms for men and women.

To visit the five furnished models, which are open from 9 a.m. until 6 p.m. seven days a week, take the Kennedy Expressway and the Northwest Tollway to the Barrington Road exit. Travel south on Barrington to the first intersection at Hassell Road and turn east. Barrington Lakes is on the left side of the road.

The townhomes everyone will be telling you about.

People will talk. And once they find out what's available at Willow Woods, you won't be able to escape the fact that ours are the most unusual townhomes in the area.

We call them "townhomes." Because that's what they look like. Homes. Not attached rows of cookie-cutter exteriors. Our townhomes come two to a building, with enough architectural variety to make sure you don't mistake someone else's for yours. Willow Woods Townhomes are also built entirely of that vanishing substance—brick. And they come with attached garages, a private fenced yard, complete sodded lawn and foundation plantings.

Once inside, you'll find they also include other vanishing amenities such as carpeting, drapery, individually controlled heat and air conditioning units, Westinghouse dishwasher, refrigerator and range, disposal, dark-tone wood kitchen cabinets, 1 1/2 baths with vinyl decorator walls, utility room, insulated windows with screens and sliding glass doors in the master bedroom.

That's about all we can tell you about our townhomes. Other features like the gently rolling landscape, the great Streamwood community spirit, the parks, pool and recreation center, the schools and the convenient shopping and transportation will speak for themselves.

Dow climbs to 872.73

Stock market clamps its 'Jaws' on 15-month high

NEW YORK (UPI) — Movie issues, buoyed by the box office success of "Jaws," helped lead the stock market Wednesday to its highest level in 15 months.

The Dow Jones Industrial average gained 3.67 points to 872.73, the highest since it closed at 883.68 on March 28, 1974. In the past five sessions, the closely watched average has gained 44.90 points.

Standard & Poor's 500-stock index rose 0.43 to 94.82, a new high for the year. The average price of an NYSE common share gained 15 cents. Advances topped declines, 847 to 571, among the 1,848 issues crossing the tape.

VOLUME TOTALED 21,810,000 shares, down from 26,620,000 traded Tuesday.

MCA Inc., owner of Universal Pictures, gained 3 1/2 points in active trading to pace the movie issues. MCA said "Jaws" grossed $7.1 million during the first three days of showings at 409 theaters throughout the country.

That news sparked interest in other entertainment issues, which have been enjoying a successful year also. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer was the third most active Big Board issue, up 1-5/8 to 18 1/4 on 179,300 shares. Columbia Pictures gained 7/8 and Twentieth Century-Fox 3/8.

Varian Associates, a 3 7/8-point gainer Tuesday, led the Big Board activities for the second consecutive session, gaining 2-3/8 to 17-5/8 on 514,600 shares, including an opening block of 155,000 at 16 1/4. Varian said it has developed a miniature solar cell, which produces 10 watts of electricity directly from sunlight.

SOUTHERN CO. WAS the second most active issue, off 1/4 to 13 1/4 on 184,000 shares. Southern recently made an 11.5 million-share offering. Other utilities were mixed.

Koppers was the biggest gainer of the day, climbing 5-3/8.

Prices closed higher in active trading on the American Stock Exchange. The average price of an Amex share increased nine cents. Volume totaled 3,644,000 shares, compared with 3,075,000 traded Tuesday.

Oil shortage contrived: Sen. Jackson

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Oil companies, with the administration's help, are hoarding oil supplies and creating an artificial shortage of gasoline, Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., said Wednesday.

In a Senate speech, Jackson said, "Despite record inventories of crude oil in storage at United States refineries, gasoline stocks have been drawn down to the point where we face shortages in some regions."

"There are strong indications that the shortage is artificial and that it is contrived. Oil is being hoarded to take advantage of higher prices if controls (on oil prices) are taken off Aug. 31."

He said the White House and big oil are in "an alliance" to end price controls and give oil firms "huge wind-fall profits."

Jackson said the administration should audit supplies more closely and require refineries to turn out more gasoline.

Gasoline inventories were 240 million barrels in February and have dropped steeply since, Jackson said, to approximately 199.8 million barrels. But crude-oil inventories are at all-time highs, about 284 million barrels, he said, and refineries are being used at only 80 to 85 per cent of capacity.

O'Hare Airport still the nation's busiest

It comes as no surprise that O'Hare Airport remained the busiest terminal in the nation for 1974.

Federal Aviation Administration statistics show 665,331 landings and takeoffs at O'Hare in 1974. The nearest commercial airport total was 484,562 operations at Atlanta International in Georgia.

Limited raise replaces force

Back in the 1930s a certain soap was advertised as 99.44 per cent pure. Ely Culbertson applied that and said some bids were 99.44 per cent forcing.

About that time the best players, including young Oswald Jacoby, started to play the jump raise to three as an absolute force.

It took 30 years to get the experts to change their minds. Today almost all experts use limit raises. The raise from one to two shows support for partner and not much of a hand. The jump raise to game says, "As far as I am concerned we want to be in game." The jump from one to three says, "I want to be in game unless your hand is a real horror."

South's hand is almost a minimum. Take away that jack of diamonds and many people would pass it. But with that jack of diamonds, South should bid the spade game, after North's strong, but limit, jump raise.

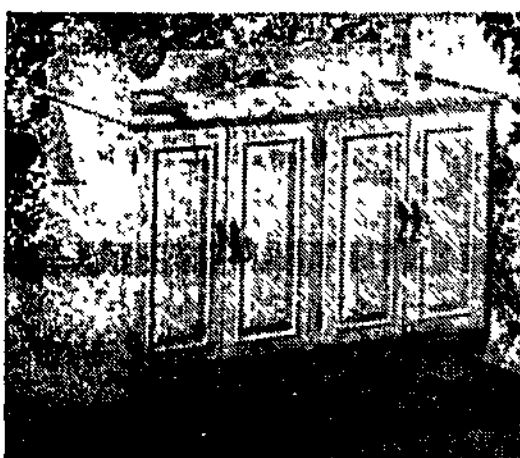

The game contract is not one for South to be proud of, but with the club finesse working and trumps breaking 3-2 it makes easily.

What are the tax-deductible items when real estate changes ownership? Property taxes, for one thing, are deductible for both buyer and seller in proportion to the fraction of the year that they had possession of the property. In the same manner, interest on the mortgage is pro-rated to the date of closing. "Points" charged as a premium for the use of money can be deductible but not when charged for services!

Not deductible for tax purposes are premiums paid on fire or mortgage insurance nor rental charges incurred for occupancy prior to closing.

For tax matters, you need a tax expert. When you need an expert on real estate, see us. We're here to "talk it over" with you... no obligation.

Concerned parents

by MONICA WILCH PERIN

Only the parents of a premature baby can know the agony of waiting to see if this tiny life will make it, and the tormenting fears over whether the child will be physically or mentally handicapped.

Only the parents of another "preemie" who did make it can truly understand that experience and provide meaningful encouragement to parents now going through it.

This is the basis for an organization called Concerned Parents. Affiliated with Lutheran General Hospital in Park Ridge, it is a group of parents whose premature or otherwise sick infants were given a chance in life by the high risk nursery, at that institution.

THE IDEA of the parent-support group was initiated by Dr. Henry Mangurton, head of the high risk nursery, and Mrs. Marcus Ramsey of Hoffman Estates, whose daughter was born at Lutheran General last year, 15 weeks premature.

"When a baby is admitted to the nursery with a problem and the parents express an interest in our help, they are referred to one of the parents in the group whose baby had a similar problem," explained Mrs. Ramsey.

"The support parents are given complete information on the child and may visit the parents or just talk to them on the phone. Or, they may wait for the baby's parents to call them — some prefer it that way.

"THE SUPPORT parents get daily reports on the baby from the hospital, and since we try to match problems as closely as possible, the support parents can reassure the referral couple when their baby is put on a respirator, or whatever.

"You can answer their questions as a parent; you can tell them how your baby is now and how he or she came through the same thing. You can tell them how certain problems are handled, so they will be better prepared for it."

"Many hospitals leave you so unprepared — they don't even tell you the baby's weight changes from day to day," Mrs. Ramsey said, adding that Lutheran General is not like that.

BUT STILL, few lay persons understand the highly technical terms tossed around in a place such as a high risk nursery. So Concerned Parents has just written a booklet that will be given to parents when their baby is admitted to the nursery.

The booklet explains the high risk nursery, tells about the equipment, gives a glossary of the medical terms parents are likely to hear, and tells about Concerned Parents, Mrs. Ramsey said.

According to the first mother who received support, "It was a tremendous help." Mrs. Thomas Swanson of Glen Ellyn was discouraged over the progress of her twin premature sons born last year, when Dr. Mangurton asked her if she would like to talk with Mrs. Ramsey.

"I USED TO LOOK at Angela Ramsey in the nursery because she was tiny like my boys, but she was getting ready to go home. She was my example."

Since Mrs. Thomas brought her sons home, she has counseled five other mothers. But the job is not always a happy one. Three of those five babies died. Nevertheless, Mrs. Swanson believes the encouragement she and the other support mothers give is important and not misleading.

"I believe there is always a place for hope. The parents get the facts from the hospital — they know how the child is doing, and it can be very depressing. My job is to encourage them and look at the positive side. I

A NURSE IN the high risk nursery at Lutheran General Hospital cares for premature infant. A group of parents whose babies are "alumni" of the nursery have organized to lend moral support and encouragement to parents going through this experience. The group works on a one-to-one relationship.

Disability thwarts about 24 million Americans from pursuing gardening.

But it needn't be so, if gardens are designed to suit their personal needs and characteristics.

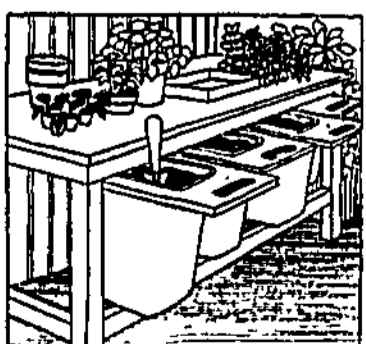

The Landscape Design Class of the Radcliffe Seminars in Landscape and Environmental Design studied the special needs of wheelchair users and created what they call the "Wheel-about Garden."

Here is what they included:

A garden accessible in all spots, with raised beds not wider than two feet, if against a wall; four feet if it can be worked from both sides.

Using rectangular box-type raised beds, garden tools can be hung on sides while working.

SHORT-HANDLED tools with rubber grips were found to be most practical. Students suggested the use of a handy back-pack for carrying tools,

Potting shed

by Mary B. Good

which can be attached to the back of the wheelchair with straps.

A compact potting shed and small scale bulk storage for soil, peat moss, etc. in small plastic garbage bins can be set in easily-accessible sliding panels.

Almost any plant can be grown in a pot or box for charming container gardening. Growing strawberries in a barrel was also suggested, as well as dwarf fruit trees.

Garden paths should be at least three feet wide and constructed of non-slippery material such as brushed concrete, asphalt or large patio bricks. Greenhouse, potting shed or tool shed should be easily accessible by the path or a ramp.

IF THE WHEELCHAIR gardener is also sightless, attention should be paid to the fragrance and feel of flowers for maximum enjoyment.

Peonies, lilies of the valley, lilacs, honeysuckle, dahlias, marigolds, moon flowers would be good choices outdoors; jasmine, gardenias, night-blooming cereus, and camellias are excellent in the greenhouse.

More scented selections which might be included are these: Mexican ageratum (delicate), sweet alyssum (delicate fragrance), calendula (pungent), scabiosa (dainty), mignonette (delightful), as well as evening primrose, flowering tobacco and night-scented stock, which develop their bouquet in the evening.

Fixin' furniture easy he says

by GENIE CAMPBELL

Just because one leg wobbles doesn't mean your living room couch is marked for the Salvation Army or headed for expensive repair either, according to Al Carrell, author of "Super Handyman's Fix and Finish Furniture Guide" (Prentice-Hall Inc., $7.95).

He tells how to get the most mileage out of present furniture and what steps to take to turn garage sale pickups into conversational pieces.

And in these times of strict economizing, who doesn't appreciate finding new ways to make something, anything, last?

Carrell specifically states that his book is written for the novice, the person who never before has attempted to fix or refinish a piece of furniture. But don't believe him.

EVEN IF YOU are good at following directions, and his are quite explicit, you undoubtedly won't have the lineup of drills, saws, clamps and bits necessary for many of the fix-up processes, and that goes double for apartment dwellers.

In that case you also won't have the space to completely strip and restore a piece of furniture either, not unless you have a good-sized patio.

But "Super Handyman" is good for instant first-aid and maintenance tips that could eliminate future reupholstering and major furniture repairs altogether.

Some wobbles and wiggles can be fixed with ordinary white glue, inexpensive and simple enough. Carrell gives a rundown of adhesives, indicating what kind should be used for which mending problem.

HE EVEN SUGGESTS certain tricks of the trade. Never glue in a cold room, for instance, and save that old pocket comb. It's a great adhesive spreader.

Household ammonia may sober an alcoholic spot right off a table while stale beer is a good solution to use for cleaning leather furniture. When you have gone over the entire surface, wipe clean with a damp cloth.

Carrell explains how to paint a plain bureau with a cornucopia of looks like a 100-year-old antique and lists what steps to take to kid-proof the furniture in an active child's room.

Wax sticks are readily available in hardware stores to match most shades of wood, but did you also know a crayon can hide a blemish just as well if the finish of the wood has not been penetrated? Or even several shades of shoe polish applied with a toothpick wrapped in rolled cotton will suffice.

FELT TIP MARKERS? Who doesn't harbor an assortment of colors? Carrell even suggests that nut meats rubbed on scratches will camouflage the flaw.

Is an ashtray covering an ugly ring left over from someone's perspiring glass? Rub carefully with the grain of wood, with a fine abrasive and follow that treatment up with a lubricant.

But don't make a special trip to the store. Table salt, scouring powder, even cigar ashes are good as fine abrasives and a lubricant doesn't have to be linseed oil. Mayonnaise, lard, cooking oil, even petroleum jelly are good agents.

If you're sure the white ring is from water, you can often lift the entire spot with a blotter and a warm iron. But remember to use a clean blotter and be sure the iron isn't hot.

He mentions how a bass drum that lost its boom was made into a real conversation piece of a coffee table and how his friend took an upright piano that no one played anymore, and turned it into a bar complete with shelves for glasses and bottles. And he still had room to insert an ice chest.

But in his introduction Carrell offers the most sensible advice of all.

If it's a valuable or sentimental antique you're thinking about tackling . . . "don't." Not unless you're merely going to fill in a scratch and even that might destroy part of its character. Better seek professional advice first.

Curtains need washing often

Dear Dorothy: It must be that air pollution is getting worse. Even though I wash my kitchen curtains with the same amount of detergent I use on other white things, they no longer come out white. Have any others had the same problem? — Glenda Snider

You bet! There's never been as much talk on this question as in recent months. The fact is that curtains have to be washed much more regularly than most people do. Whether it's worse now than before, I don't know, but we certainly live in an atmosphere filled with airborne oil, dust and high humidity. Not only do curtains need regular washing (or cleaning, as the case may be) but ever so carefully and never with other colors. It's smart to soak them in either a regular detergent solution or a per-oxygen bleach, then since and start all over again. Yes, most curtains today can be bleached in a mild solution unless the instructions state specifically not to use bleach.

Dear Dorothy: This little reminder might help those who store patent leather bags. I put my bag on a shelf with the brass handles resting on the patent. When I took it down, there was a ridge on the bag and a strange stain — the shape of the handle. Rubbed the bag with a cloth dipped in household ammonia. It came off after two tries. From now on, the handles are not going to rest on the body of the purse. — Jessie Handelman

Dear Dorothy: I have a simple solution for keeping cookies soft. Put them in a container, cover with a piece of aluminum foil on which you put a large slice of unpeeled apple. Then close the container. The moisture of the apple goes into the cookies in a couple of days and keeps them soft. After a week, renew the piece of dried-out apple. All dentures will be saved! — Li Altschuler.

Consumer complaint center opening here

The Governor's Consumer Advocate Office has announced it is opening a complaint center in the Elk Grove Village Public Library, 101 Kennedy Blvd.

Complaint forms and consumer information material will be available at the main desk. All complaints will still be handled by the Chicago office, however, according to Estelle Langendorf, a member of the Consumer Advocate's staff.

The Office of the Consumer Advocate was created by Gov. Walker in 1973 after the General Assembly killed a bill to create a Consumer Protection Agency.

The Consumer Advocate's Office has no authority to take legal action on behalf of consumers, but instead has focused on preparing and lobbying legislation to correct consumer abuses. It also acts as a bargaining and pressuring agent in settling consumer disputes.

Under the direction of Cella Maloney, Gov. Walker's appointee as Consumer Advocate, the office introduced a package of more than 20 consumer bills in Springfield this year. At least a dozen of the bills have passed one house and are still alive in the other.

CORRECTION: I relayed on May 29 a report from United Press International that the new government seal of approval on cans of tuna was sought by the tuna industry after Consumers Union had reported finding minute amounts of filth in 13 brands of tuna.

Birth notes

NORTHWEST COMMUNITY

Melanie Xanthos was born to Mr. and Mrs. William Xanthos, Arlington Heights, on June 13 at 7 pounds 6 ounces. Her sisters are Karen, 5, and Debra, 3, and grandparents are Mrs. Estelle Scheuer Taboh, New York City, and Mrs. Helen Greene, Miami.

Christopher James Geary, weighing 8 pounds 3 ounces at birth June 13, is the son of the Garland F. Gearys, Arlington Heights, and a brother for Jim, 13. Grandparents are the Charles W. Gearys, Milton, Pa., and Mrs. John Blinder, Lewisburg, Pa.

LUTHERAN GENERAL

Dawn Marie Sharpe adds a daughter to the James L. Sharpe family, Elk Grove Village. Born May 31 at 8 pounds 6 ounces, she joins Jimmy, 2. Grandparents are the Vic Wehloges, Morton Grove, and the Joseph Sharpes, Glenview.

The report also said that the National Marine Fisheries Service, which issues the seals, does not inspect for filth.

I have since been contacted by a public relations officer for Ralston-Purina in San Francisco, packers of Chicken-of-the-Sea tuna, who declared that the UPI report, and consequently the information printed here, was wrong.

The man, who asked that his name not be used, said first of all, negotiations between the tuna industry and fisheries to provide this inspection had been underway long before the Consumers Union report was published.

Secondly, he said the statement that Fisheries does not inspect for filth was totally incorrect.

I checked out those complaints and found that:

• Negotiations between Ralston-Purina and Fisheries were initiated in December 1974, according to Gene Cope of Fisheries. The Consumers

by Monica Wilch Perin

Union article appeared in November 1974. According to Cope, the talks were initiated in response to the CU article.

• Fisheries does, indeed, inspect for filth, contrary to the UPI report.

• Consumers Union did, indeed, supply all its tuna data to FDA, which sent two officials to spend two days at CU laboratories, according to Consumer Reports.

The Ralston-Purina man also claimed that the tolerance level for filth in tuna as established by Fisheries is zero. Cope was unable to confirm this.

Fresh ideas for your fresh garden vegetables.

Gardens that are beginning to peek through the earth will soon start to provide their rewards both in money savings and good taste.

To make the most of the season's bountiful lettuce, crisp cucumbers, beans, squash, onions and sun-ripened tomatoes, whether they be home-grown or from the grocery, here are some recipes that will provide enjoyment and pride.

Homemade mayonnaise is almost as versatile as garden fresh vegetables — it can be varied effortlessly and endlessly. Flavor it with a medley of good things like chives, onions, parsley, green peppers or mint. Condiments, too — chili sauce, catsup, mustard, pickle relish; also chopped hard cooked eggs and lime or lemon juice.

CHIFFONADE SALAD

Dressing:

- 1 cup salad oil
- 1/2 cup reconstituted lemon juice
- 1 hard-cooked egg, chopped
- 1 tablespoon chopped parsley
- 1 tablespoon chopped green onion with top
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 teaspoon dry mustard
- Dash fresh pepper

Garden Vegetables:

- Salad greens
- Tomato wedges
- Cucumber circles or fresh vegetables cut into thin strips

In blender container with lid, blend salad oil, lemon juice, egg, parsley, onion, salt, mustard and pepper. In salad bowl, arrange salad greens and vegetables. Pour dressing over salad as needed and toss lightly. Refrigerate remaining dressing. Makes 1 1/2 cups salad dressing.

STUFFED GARDEN-FRESH TOMATOES

- 1/2 cup Lemon Mayonnaise*
- 2 zucchini or cucumbers, thinly sliced
- 2 green onions and tops, chopped
- 4 large tomatoes
- Reconstituted lemon juice
- Salt and pepper

In medium bowl, combine Lemon Mayonnaise, zucchini and onions. Cut off top 1/4 inch from each tomato. Scoop out seeds and some of the pulp. Season inside of tomato cup with lemon juice, salt and pepper. Fill with mayonnaise mixture. Makes 4 servings.

GARDEN JEWEL SALAD

(Makes 10 to 12 servings)

- 2 cups boiling water
- 1 (6-oz.) pkg. lemon flavored gelatin
- 1 1/2 cups cold water
- 1/2 cup reconstituted lemon juice
- 1/2 cup sliced cauliflowerets
- 1/2 cup diced cucumber
- 1/2 cup diced carrots
- 1/2 cup diced green pepper, radishes and salad greens, optional

In large bowl, combine boiling water and gelatin. Stir to dissolve. Add cold water and lemon juice. Chill 1 1/2 hours or until very thick. Fold in cauliflower, cucumber, carrots and green pepper. Turn into lightly oiled 1 1/2 quart mold. Chill 2 hours or until firm. Unmold onto serving platter. If desired, garnish with radishes and salad greens.

*LEMON MAYONNAISE

- 2 tablespoons reconstituted lemon juice
- 1 egg
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 teaspoon dry mustard
- 1/4 teaspoon paprika
- 1 cup salad oil

In blender container, combine lemon juice, egg, salt, mustard, paprika and 1/4 cup salad oil. Place top on blender, blend until smooth. Continue to run motor; remove top and slowly add remaining salad oil until blended. Makes 1 1/4 cups.

Variations

Lime Mayonnaise: Substitute reconstituted lime for lemon juice.

Garden Goddess Dressing: Add 1 tablespoon each chopped chives and parsley to Lemon or Lime Mayonnaise.

Island Dressing: Add 1/2 cup chili sauce, 1 chopped hardcooked egg and 1/4 cup each chopped onion, green pepper and pickle relish.

Fruit Dressing: Add 1 cup whipped topping and 2 tablespoons orange juice concentrate.

Seafood Sauce: Add 2 teaspoons prepared mustard.

GAZPACHO-GARDEN SALAD

- 1/2 cup salad oil
- 1/2 cup reconstituted lemon juice
- 1 to 2 cloves garlic, minced
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1/4 teaspoon pepper
- 1 green pepper, seeded and diced
- 1 cucumber, peeled, seeded and diced
- 2 tomatoes, seeded and diced
- 1 onion, diced
- 6 ripe olives, optional

In blender container with lid, blend salad oil, lemon juice, garlic, salt and pepper. In narrow 1-quart container or glass jar, layer 1/2 green pepper, cucumber, tomato, onion and olives. Repeat layering with remaining vegetables. Pour dressing over salad. Chill overnight to blend flavors. Makes eight 1/2 cup servings.

Yogurt consumer emerges in U.S.

A "new style" of yogurt eater has been found in the United States, says a Pennsylvania State University foods researcher. He is one who eats yogurt for fun and nutrition and not for therapeutic value.

In a presentation at the Institute of Food Technologists' Chicago convention earlier this month, Mark Kroger, foods scientist, said that yogurt sales in the United States exceeded $100 million last year and this figure is expected to increase steadily over the next several years.

THERE HAS been more than a 75 per cent jump in sales over the past five years, he said.

From the survey Kroger conducted, it was determined that three-fourths of the yogurt eaters preferred fruit-flavored yogurt to plain or non-fruit flavored. This is different from other countries where yogurt is eaten plain.

Also, nearly half of the yogurt eaters in the United States are not aware that yogurt contains massive amounts of bacteria — another switch from most countries where yogurt is eaten because of the bacteria for the "therapeutic" value of gastro-intestinal motility, said Kroger.

HOWEVER, IT should be remembered that yogurt has only been on the American scene since 1940. It dates back to Biblical times in the Middle East and to the early 1900s in the rest of the Western world.

In the United States, the majority of yogurt eaters consume it as a separate food product. But because of its nutritional value, mainly with calcium and protein, the American Heart Association has included yogurt in several of its recipes published in "The American Heart Association Cookbook" (David McKay Co., Inc., New York, 1973).

YOGURT AND GELATIN DELIGHT
1 package fruit-flavored gelatin
1 cup yogurt (the same flavor as the gelatin)

Prepare the fruit gelatin according to package directions. Chill until it begins to set. Stir the yogurt in until thoroughly combined with the gelatin. Return to the refrigerator until set. Makes 6 servings.

CUCUMBER AND YOGURT DIP
1 cucumber
1 8-ounce container plain yogurt
Garlic powder to taste
Dash Worcestershire sauce

Scrub cucumber to remove wax. Grate the unpeeled cucumber, and drain very well until almost dry. Combine with other ingredients. Serve with crackers. Makes 1½ to 2 cups.

A meat canning tip

If loss of liquid occurs in processing canned meat or poultry at home, never open a jar to refill; this would let in bacteria, and require processing the contents all over again.

THREE-FOURTHS of the yogurt consumers prefer fruit-flavored yogurt to plain.

YOGURT SALAD DRESSING
2 teaspoons lemon juice
1 tablespoon oil ½ cup plain yogurt from partially skimmed milk

½ teaspoon paprika
Dash tabasco
½ teaspoon salt
1/8 teaspoon garlic powder (optional)
Mix all ingredients together in a blender on medium speed for 5 seconds. Makes 2/3 cups.

CHICKEN IN WHITE WINE AND YOGURT SAUCE

4 chicken breasts
4 tablespoons margarine
3 tablespoons flour
½ cup chicken bouillon
¼ cup low-fat yogurt
¼ cup white wine
2 teaspoons grated lemon rind
1 teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon pepper
½ cup sliced mushrooms

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Melt 2 tablespoons margarine in a shallow baking pan; place chicken breasts in the pan. Bake, uncovered, about 30 minutes. Meanwhile melt remaining margarine in a saucepan, add flour and cook briefly, stirring. Add bouillon, stirring constantly until mixture is thick and smooth. Add yogurt, wine, lemon rind, salt and pepper, stirring until blended. Remove pan from oven. Turn each chicken breast. Cover each with sliced mushrooms; and pour sauce over all. Bake, uncovered for 30 minutes, or until tender. Makes 4 servings.

Everyday cheese for quiet times

Kraft's two sharpest cheddars are to be savored. Kraft Sharp Cheddar has a finely knit texture that's the mark of a good nibbling cheese. New York Extra Sharp has even more aged flavor; it's a cheese-lover's favorite. Serve either cheddar on a cheese tray or with fruit, for appetizers or dessert, with wine or simply a cup of coffee.

Take an hour for lunch

If you are one of the newer members of the brown bag set, you may have not yet learned to make the most of it.

Whenever possible, traditional lunchbox totes eat outdoors, even if that means lining up on the edge of a girder, along an excavation or on the back of a truck. They relax, talk about non-business subjects, maybe throw a few balls back and forth after eating, or just swap tales of the big one that got away last weekend.

The office worker has not always been so wise. The great temptation is to sandwich in a quick sandwich between chores, or to gobble a bite at the desk and then run out to shop.

Tomorrow, why not try something different?

Begin tonight by planning a great lunch and pack what you can now, to relieve the morning rush. When you get into the office, make a date with a friend to picnic in the park.

The "park" may be no more than the field behind your building or the plaza out in front — but it will be outdoors, preferably.

PEANUT BUTTER LUNCH SPREADS

Peanut Butter Lunch Spreads

Of course, there is another benefit to carrying your lunch, and that is the quality of the food you can have. You can prepare your own favorite, nutritious specialties.

If you are a salad devotee, for instance, pack the parts separately, the greens in a plastic wrap, other vegetables marinating in a container of salad dressing.

And, when it comes to sandwiches, why not explore new possibilities using your old school lunchbox standby, peanut butter? Whether plain or in a mixture, it is high in protein and a good source of the B vitamin, niacin. To complete your salad-sandwich meal, add some seasonal fresh fruit and milk or some other beverage.

PEANUT BUTTER-HAM SPREAD

Peanut Butter-Ham Spread

1/3 cup creamy or super chunk peanut butter
2 tablespoons real mayonnaise
1 teaspoon prepared mustard
¼ cup (about 4 ounces) chopped cooked ham
1/3 cup finely chopped celery

In a bowl, mix together peanut butter, mayonnaise and mustard until well blended. Add ham and celery. Makes enough for 4 sandwiches.

PEANUT BUTTER HONEY-ORANGE SPREAD

Peanut Butter Honey-Orange Spread

1 package (3 ounces) cream cheese, softened
¼ cup creamy or super chunk peanut butter
2 tablespoons honey
1 teaspoon grated orange rind (or diced orange rind)

In a bowl, mix together cream cheese, peanut butter, honey and orange rind. Makes enough for 2 or 3 sandwiches.

APPLE-CHEESE PEANUT BUTTER SPREAD

Apple-Cheese Peanut Butter Spread

¼ cup creamy or super chunk peanut butter
¼ cup applesauce
1/3 cup finely shredded Cheddar cheese

In a bowl, stir together peanut butter, applesauce and cheese. Makes enough for 4 to 6 sandwiches.

What's for dessert?

Ingredients to make cakes from scratch are stocked by 57 per cent of women, but cake served once a week by only 19 per cent. Ingredients to make pies from scratch are stocked by 53 per cent, served once a week by 20 per cent. The majority of women surveyed to not consider cooking a "chore," but enjoy it. Lack of time is the factor preventing them from serving home made pies and cakes.

The desserts served most often are canned fruit and ice cream (not necessarily together). Many more women stock canned fruit than serve it frequently; 84 per cent keep it on the shelf; 70 per cent serve it once a week. The situation is reversed for ice cream: 60 per cent stock it; 68 per cent serve it once a week.

Desserts most often on the shelf are:

canned fruit, 84 per cent; flavored gelatin and packaged pudding mixes, 77 per cent each; cookies, 64 per cent; ice cream, 60 per cent; ingredients to make a cake from scratch, 57 per cent; cake mixes, 51 per cent; frozen baked goods, 22 per cent; store bought cake, 12 per cent; store bought pies, 11 per cent; and sherbet, 9 per cent.

Desserts served most often are not the ones on the shelves. Women were asked which dessert they served most often and listed these: ice cream, 28 per cent; canned fruit and flavored gelatin, 14 per cent each; cakes from a mix, 12 per cent; cookies, 11 per cent; cakes from scratch, 9 per cent; packaged pudding, 6 per cent; cake from a package, 5 per cent; store bought pies and frozen baked goods, 2 per cent.

Lamb and zucchini for summer

by LOIS SEILER

With young, tender zucchini in ample supply, Lamb Mediterranean is an excellent dish to prepare during the summer months. It's a favorite of Marjorie Monachese, Mount Prospect, who makes this for both family and guests.

Midge likes to use small, plump zucchini for this recipe, par-boiling them and cutting out a section of each so that the zucchini resemble boats. They are filled with a tasty ground lamb mixture seasoned with spices and herbs and then baked in a rich white sauce. The zucchini boats can be assembled in advance, with the sauce added before baking.

AS ACCOMPANIMENTS for this unusual dish, Midge recommends hot bread or rolls and a lemon gelatin salad. The refreshing lemon flavor of the salad complements the mildly spicy Mediterranean lamb. Because vegetables are included in both the main dish and salad, none other is needed for this meal.

To complete the menu, Midge suggests either a colorful Fresh Strawberry or Raspberry Ribbon Pie. Both are pretty in appearance and perfect for the summer months.

TO SIMPLIFY preparation, frozen pie shells may be utilized for either recipe, and are baked and cooled. Both pies are easy yet elegant party desserts.

Another recipe which Midge chose to share with readers is her popular hot crabmeat dip, excellent for cocktail parties. Served with Triscuits or melba toast rounds, it always makes a big hit with guests.

Natives of New Jersey, Midge and Peter Monachese moved to Mount Prospect three years ago and quickly became involved in community activities. They are members of a gourmet group, and Midge served as hospitality chairman for the Mount Prospect Woman's Club. A member of Northwest Community Hospital Auxiliary, she's a volunteer in the snack shop, and also belongs to the Northwest Chorale. The Monacheses have two married sons: Peter Jr. in High Point, N.C., and Paul in Mount Prospect.

LAMB MEDITERRANEAN

- 1½ pounds lean ground lamb
- 2 medium onions, chopped
- 2 cloves garlic, minced
- ¾ teaspoon salt
- ½ teaspoon rosemary
- ½ teaspoon thyme
- ½ teaspoon pepper
- 1 teaspoon cinnamon
- ½ teaspoon nutmeg
- 8 small, plump zucchini

Brown lamb with onions and garlic. Add seasonings, blending them in well. Should be thoroughly mixed.

Remove tips from ends of zucchini and discard. Cook in boiling water for five minutes until barely tender. Make two slits down the length of each zucchini, removing ¼ of each squash. Scoop out center, forming a boat. Chop up removed portion and mix with lamb. Fill zucchini boats. Place in a shallow baking dish. Prepare the following white sauce:

- 3 tablespoons butter
- 3 tablespoons flour
- 1/8 teaspoon nutmeg
- Sprinkle of pepper
- 1 cup milk
- 2 egg yolks

Melt butter over low heat and blend in flour and seasonings. Slowly add milk, stirring until mixture is smooth and thick. Beat egg yolks and add a little hot sauce to yolks. Return to saucepan, stirring constantly. Pour over top of lamb-filled zucchini boats. Bake at 350 degrees for 25 minutes. Serves 8.

For more information

If you want to read more on the whole home canning subject, a guide is available for 45 cents from the government. It's called "Home Canning of Fruits and Vegetables," Home and Garden Bulletin No. 8, and is available by writing to Consumer Information, Pueblo, Colo., 81009.

LEMON GELATIN SALAD

- 1 package lemon gelatin
 - 1 cup hot water
 - 1 cup crushed pineapple
 - 1 cup grated carrot
- Dissolve gelatin in hot water. Drain pineapple and add enough cold water to make one cup liquid. Add to lemon gelatin. Let set until partially congealed. Stir in carrot and pineapple. Turn into eight small custard cups or small mold. Refrigerate until firm. Unmold on iceberg lettuce or escarole. Serve 8.

FRESH STRAWBERRY PIE

- 1 quart whole, fresh strawberries
 - 1 baked 9-inch pie shell
 - 1¼ cups granulated sugar
 - 4 tablespoons cornstarch
 - ¼ teaspoon salt
 - Juice of one lemon
 - 1¼ cups water
- Wash berries and drain them well. Arrange in baked pie shell. Combine sugar, cornstarch, salt, lemon juice and water in a saucepan and cook until thick and clear. Add a dash of red food coloring to give it color. Let cool. Pour over berries in shell. Refrigerate until served. Garnish with whipped cream, if desired. Serves 8.

RASPBERRY RIBBON PIE

- 1 9-inch baked pie shell, cooled
- 1 3 ounce package raspberry gelatin
- ¾ cup granulated sugar
- 1¼ cups boiling water
- 1 10-ounce package frozen red raspberries
- 1 tablespoon lemon juice
- 1 3-ounce package cream cheese, softened
- 1/3 cup confectioners sugar
- 1 teaspoon vanilla
- Dash of salt
- 1 cup heavy cream whipped

Red layer: Dissolve gelatin and granulated sugar in boiling water. Add frozen berries (not thawed) and lemon juice. Stir until berries are thawed. Chill until partially set.

White layer: Blend cream cheese, confectioners sugar, vanilla and salt. Blend in whipped cream a small amount at a time.

Spread a white layer over bottom of baked pie shell. Cover with a red layer. Repeat layers, ending with a white layer on top. Chill until set. When cut, five separate layers will be seen. Serves 8.

HOT CRABMEAT DIP

- 2 cans crabmeat (1 flaked, 1 claws)
 - 2 8-ounce packages cream cheese, at room temperature
 - 2 tablespoons minced onion
 - ½ teaspoon salt
 - 1 teaspoon prepared horseradish
 - Sprinkle of Accent
 - Silvered almonds or paprika for topping
- Combine crabmeat, cream cheese, onion, salt, horseradish and Accent. Turn into casserole. Top with silvered almonds or paprika. Bake at 375 for 15 minutes. (This mixture may be frozen; then bake for one hour.) Serve with Triscuits or Melba toast rounds.

Canning tomatoes

Because new varieties are continually being developed by horticulturists, tomatoes might not be completely safe from botulism toxin or other spoilage bacteria if the conventional waterbath canning process is used. Many new varieties of tomatoes are simply not acidic enough to prevent the growth of these organisms.

In Illinois, Heinz 1350, Campbell 1327, Manapal, Manalucie and Super-sonic varieties are safe.

If the variety of tomato isn't known the Illinois State Cooperative Extension Service recommends that ¼ teaspoon Citric Acid U.S.P. per pint or ½ teaspoon per quart be added when the tomatoes are cooking to increase the acidity of the product and ensure safe eating and storing. The Citric Acid U.S.P. is available at drugstores.

ZUCCHINI BOATS can be prepared in advance to help make entertaining easier for Marjorie Monachese of Mount Prospect. Filled with a ground lamb mixture, her Lamb Mediterranean is seasoned with spices and herbs before baking in a rich white sauce.

Everyday cheese for mealtimes

Rich flavor and goodness make both Kraft Mild Cheddar and Kraft Colby ideal for many main dish recipes. Both are fresh, versatile cheeses which add special heartiness to casseroles, pasta dishes, sauces for vegetables, and sandwiches. They're perfect for meatless menus, too. How to buy fresh vegetables Experience is the best teacher when buying vegetables. But it helps to have a few guidelines to take along to the supermarket. No matter the budget, it saves money to insist upon fresh vegetables. Those that are wilted and stale really are not a bargain unless tossed into a soup pot. Best buys occur at the peak of the season. Again it doesn't pay to buy more vegetables than can be used soon without waste. Most fresh vegetables hold for two to five days, while root vegetables can be stored from one to several weeks.

Here is a guide to buying fresh vegetables:

ARTICHOKES — Size not important in relation to quality. Should be compact, with thick, green scales (outside leaf). Avoid those with large areas of brown on the scales and with spreading scales, grayish-black discoloration, mold growth or signs of worm injury at the near-base.

ASPARAGUS — Has a short life. Use promptly. Stalks should be tender and firm and tips close and compact. Choose with little white on stalks for tenderness. Tender asparagus is brittle, while angular or flat stalks are apt to be woody.

SNAP BEANS — Select slender beans with no bumps, free from scars. When broken, there should be no strings. Avoid dry-looking, dull or lifeless-looking pod.

BROCCOLI — Look for fresh, green, compact bud clusters. Avoid yellowing, soft or spreading heads. Open bud clusters mean broccoli is overmature. Avoid wilted, flabby or bruised items.

BRUSSELS SPROUTS — Select sprouts that are firm, compact, fresh, bright and with good green color. Avoid puffy or soft sprouts, those with wilted or yellowing leaves. Avoid wormy, smudgy or dirty appearance. This indicates insect damage or decay.

CABBAGE — Three major groups here, green cabbage, green crinkly leaved Savoy and red cabbage. Sold as fresh-now or storage-old. Select firm, heavy-for-size heads. Outside leaves good color for type — good green or red. In now cabbage, avoid wilted or decayed outer leaves, yellowing or worm-eaten. In storage cabbage, avoid badly discolored, dry or decayed outer leaves. Separation of stems or leaves from central stem at base also indicates over-age.

CARROTS — Available year-round. Should be well-formed, smooth, well-colored and firm. Avoid those that look wilted, flabby, soft or shriveled. Also avoid those with roots with large, green, "sunburned" areas at the top and flabby or decaying roots.

CAULIFLOWER — Outer white portion called the curd. These should be white to creamy white, compact and clean. Jacket or green leaves should be good green color. Avoid discolored heads, soft spots. Smudgy or speckled appearance of curd is sign of insect injury, mold growth or decay.

CELERY — Celery is green Pascal or golden. Select celery with thick, solid-looking stalks, clean, glossy surface. Avoid wilted, flabby celery with pithy, hollow or discolored centers in branches. Also avoid stalks with "blackheart" or brown or black discoloration of small center branches; signs of insect injury or long, thick seedstem in place of usually small, tender heart branches.

CHICORY, ENDIVE, ESCAROLE — Look for freshness, crispness, good green color or outer leaves. Avoid leaves of brownish or yellowish discoloration and signs of insect injury.

CORN — Retains fairly good quality for a number of days if kept cold and moist since harvesting. Place in home refrigerator. Best to use promptly. Look for well-filled, plump kernels. Firm to touch. Husks are fresh and green. Avoid dry, yellowed or straw-colored husks or shrinking kernels; also old ears with very large kernels and dark yellow kernels.

CUCUMBERS — Available year-round but most plentiful in summer. Look for good green color, firm over entire length. Well-shaped but not too large in diameter. Avoid withered or shriveled cucumbers, also dull or yellowed or puffy looking. Size is not a quality factor.

EGGPLANT — Some use this dark, rich-purple vegetable more for decorating than cooking. Should be firm, well-shaped. Avoid those with scars or cuts, worm injuries. Wilted, shriveled, soft or flabby eggplant is waste, bitter with poor flavor.

GREENS — Turnip tops, mustard greens, collards, kale, Swiss chard, cabbage sprouts, beet tops, dandelions. All best when fresh, green, young-looking. Avoid signs of insect injury, coarse stems, seedstems, dry or yellowing leaves, excessive dirt or poor development.

LETTUCE — Fairly even year-round supply. Four major sellers include Iceberg, butter-head, Romaine and leaf. Select fairly firm to firm head Iceberg that is clean, without excessive tip burn, rusty appearance or shows seedstems or excessive outer leaves. Color is medium-green outer and lighter green inner leaves. Butter-head (Bibb and Big Boston) slightly flat on top with soft, succulent, light-green leaves in rosette pattern in center. Romaine is tall, cylindrical with dark-green leaves. Leaf lettuce is without compact head, has broad leaves. Look for freshness, crisp leaves and good bright color in all lettuce. Avoid tip burn, serious discoloration, irregularly shaped heads and those with bumps.

MUSHROOMS — Young mushrooms should be small to medium in size. Select clean, white to creamy white or light brown, free from open caps (top); caps can be slightly open with pink and light-tan gills (rows of tissue under cap). Avoid overripe mushrooms with wide-open caps, dark, discolored gills, pitted or seriously discolored.

OKRA — Look for tender pods whose tips bend with slight pressure, under 4½ inches long, bright green, free from blemishes. Avoid dull, dry-looking pods, also shriveled or discolored, or pale-faded green color. These all lack flavor.

ONIONS — Three general varieties, Globe, Granex-Grano, Spanish. Look for hard, firm onions, dry with small necks, with papery outer scales, reasonably free from green sunburn spots, blemishes. Avoid onions with wet or very soft necks, thick, hollow, woody centers in neck or with fresh sprouts.

ONIONS (GREEN) Shallots, Leeks — Green harvested very young, very little or no bulb formation, tubular top. Shallots similar to green but grow in clusters, little swelling at base. Leeks larger with slight bulb formation, broad, flat, dark-green tops. Look for fresh, crisp green tops, well-blanching (white) for two or three inches from root. Avoid yellowing, wilted or discolored tops.

PARSLEY — Should be bright, fresh, green crisp. Avoid yellowed leaves, dirt, wilting.

PEAS, GREEN — Select pods well-filled but not bulging. Should be uniformly light green, slightly velvety to touch. Reject if large number of pods appear flat and quite empty; spotted, yellowed or flabby.

PEPPERS, SWEET — Medium or dark green, glossy sheen, relatively heavy weight, firm walls and sides. Fully mature peppers have bright red color. Avoid peppers with thin walls, wilted, flabby with cuts or punctures, soft, watery spots.

POTATOES — "New" potatoes may be freshly harvested and sold during late winter or early spring. Or freshly dug potatoes not fully matured. Baking potatoes another staple. In new potatoes, select well-shaped, firm, free from blemishes and sunburn (green discoloration under skin). For general purpose and baking, select reasonably smooth, well-shaped, firm, free from blemishes, sunburn and decay, reasonably free from skinned surfaces. Avoid all potatoes with large cuts or bruises, green color, any signs of decay, sprouting or shriveling.

SWEET POTATOES — Should be clean, smooth, well-shaped, firm, bright. Types include yellow-fleshed, orange-fleshed, copper-skinned or light-skinned. Avoid seriously mushy tubers, those with cracks, damp or soft spots. There is a moist sweet potato and a dry type.

SPINACH — Look for clean leaves, fresh, good green color. Avoid yellowing, discoloring, wilting, bruised or crushed-looking leaves.

TOMATOES — Best flavor home-grown on nearby farms because picked ripe. Can ripen in warm place wrapped in newspaper. Do not refrigerate unless fully ripe. Look for well-formed tomatoes, smooth, well-ripened (if possible), reasonably free from blemishes. If fully ripe, rich red color. Slightly less than ripe, look for firm texture and color from pink to slight red. Avoid overripe, bruised tomatoes, those with sunburn (green or yellow areas near stem scar), growth cracks (deep cracks around stem scar), decayed (soft, water-soaked spots, depressed areas or surface mold). Remember, cold temperatures keep tomatoes from ripening.

Court rejects request by city to block funds for sewage plant

U.S. District Court Judge Thomas R. McMillen denied a motion by Des Plaines Wednesday to block the use of $138.5 million in federal funds for construction of the O'Hare Water Reclamation Plant.

City Corporation Counsel Robert DiLeonardi argued that the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency and the Metropolitan Sanitary District should be prevented from using any of the grant authorized Monday for the plant until after another suit brought by Des Plaines is settled. "I don't want to see anything done that cannot be recalled by the court later," DiLeonardi said.

HOWEVER, ATTORNEYS for the EPA and MSD argued that the grant authorization and a meeting planned for today by the MSD to accept the grant offer did not constitute any immediate action.

"The government won't be dis-bursing any funds, and the district will only be acting to advertise for bids for the project," said James B. Murray, an attorney for the MSD.

McMillen denied the injunction request and indicated he did not see a need for immediate action.

The judge also indicated he did not want to do anything that might cause the district to lose the federal funds which represent 75 per cent of the cost of the $182 million plant and a related series of deep tunnels.

THE MSD HAD until June 30 to obtain final approval from the EPA for the project or face the possibility of losing the federal funding for the project this year.

The MSD got the approval, but Des Plaines officials argue the EPA ignored a number of details regarding the environmental impact the plant will have on nearby residential areas in an effort to meet the deadline.

The plant, which will be built on a 104-acre tract at the southeast corner of Oakton Street and Elmhurst Road, will serve Des Plaines, Mount Prospect, Elk Grove Village, Arlington Heights, Wheeling, Buffalo Grove and Rolling Meadows.

Village Atty. Edward Hofert of Elk

Grove Village has indicated his community will join with the MSD to prevent any additional delays in construction.

MSD OFFICIALS say the facility will take about 3½ years to construct.

The city also expanded its suit against the MSD and the EPA to ask that McMillen review the final environmental impact statement prepared by the EPA on the project.

The new complaint charges the EPA omitted more than 30 separate facts from the final environmental impact statement and that these facts have a bearing on the final approval of the facility.

Included in the complaint is a recommendation by an EPA study team to move the plant to another site. The recommendation was suppressed by EPA officials who later said the recommendation represented only a preliminary view. However, the recommendation was prepared only a week before the agency began preparing the environmental impact statement.

OTHER OMISSIONS from the report include testimony by several city officials: State Sen. David Regner, R-Mount Prospect, and U.S. Rep. Philip M. Crane, R-12th.

McMillen also indicated he will prepare to rule next month on several motions filed with the original suit.

The city contends the MSD must follow its health ordinance for construction and operation of a sewage-treatment plant as a condition for receiving federal funds for the project.

City to discuss status of Superblock project

The Des Plaines City Council will meet in special session next week to discuss the status of the long-delayed Superblock project, the first phase of the downtown redevelopment plan.

Council members will meet with the Des Plaines Mall Corp., developers of the project, about financing for the first phase and the possibility of another extension on the timetable for the redevelopment.

"It'll be a where are we now and where are we going type meeting," said Mayor Herbert H. Behrel. The meeting will be July 1 at 8 p.m. in the Civic Center.

ALD. ROBERT Sullivan, 2nd, suggested the special meeting, saying city council members should be informed of the latest developments with the project in the event they are asked to authorize financing or grant another extension at the July 7 meeting.

The developers still are hoping to obtain private financing for the project, which consists of a three-story retail area and a 10-story office building, but have asked the city to consider selling tax-exempt industrial revenue bonds if private financing cannot be obtained.

The developers recently were refused a mortgage by the Aetna Insurance Co., but are talking to other insurance companies in an attempt to secure financing.

Officials of the Des Plaines Mall Corp. were unavailable for comment Wednesday, but Behrel said they recently told him they are confident of getting private financing.

"THE LAST TIME I talked with them they were more encouraged than they have been in a long time about the possibility of getting private financing for the entire project," Behrel said.

If private financing is not approved for Superblock, however, the city has been asked to consider selling $2.5 million in industrial revenue bonds for the commercial area and another $2.5 million in bonds for the office building.

If the developer does not obtain private or city financing of the project by the July 15 deadline, the city council probably will be asked for a third extension on the construction timetable.

Some aldermen have indicated that if the financing is not obtained by the deadline, they may push for full review of the project.

Man hurt in crash listed 'satisfactory'

A Northbrook man, injured while riding his motorcycle in Des Plaines, was in satisfactory condition Wednesday at Holy Family Hospital.

The man, Bruce R. Baiko, 42, of 845 Huckleberry Ln., suffered multiple cuts when his motorcycle was struck head-on by an auto Tuesday at Elmhurst Road and Holiday Lane.

Police said Baiko was northbound on Elmhurst Road when a car driven by Patricia D. Sorensen, 46, of 7500 N. Elmhurst Rd., Des Plaines, struck him while turning left onto the road.

The woman was ticketed by police for failure to yield the right-of-way at an intersection.

Special voter sign-up Saturday

A special day-long voter registration drive will be conducted Saturday in the 6th Ward.

The registration program was arranged by Ald. Robert Kraves, 6th. The program will be conducted from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. at Orchard Place School, 2727 Maple St., Des Plaines.

Kraves said he arranged the program as a means of preventing voters from being left off the registration list.

A number of 6th Ward residents were not allowed to vote in the April 15 aldermanic elections because of an improper canvass conducted by county election officials.

While the program is aimed at 6th Ward residents, Kraves noted that any resident of the city can register to vote Saturday.

2 bound over in burglary, rape cases

A Mount Prospect man charged with rape and a Des Plaines man charged with burglary and forgery were bound over to the grand jury in separate cases heard Wednesday in the Mount Prospect branch of Circuit Court.

The accused rapist, Charles L. Townsend, 27, of 507 Enterprise, Mount Prospect, was bound over in a case in which he allegedly raped an 18-year-old friend of his wife.

In the other case, Rex A. Austin, 20, of 777 Greenview Ave., Des Plaines, was bound over on burglary and forgery charges. Austin allegedly tried to cash a stolen payroll check April 11 at a currency exchange in the Mount Prospect Plaza.

Both cases were heard by Associate Judge George J. Zimmerman.

Burglar takes $145 from Texaco station

A burglar Tuesday night took $145 in cash from Potempa's Texaco station, 15 W. Golf Rd., Des Plaines.

Des Plaines police said the burglar entered through a small door in the overhead door at the rear of the gas station. The burglar took the money from a cash register, but missed $40 that was in a picture frame above the register.

CONTEMPLATION can be pre-occupying as shown here by Jimmy Derosa, 4, who is too busy staring ahead to even notice his reflection in the puddle in front.

Police see link in armed robberies reported in area

Mount Prospect police said they believe two Old Orchard Country Club busboys were robbed this week by the same gang responsible for similar stickups in the Northwest suburbs during the last six weeks.

"It is very possible this robbery may be connected," said Sgt. Patrick Hallihan, head of the investigative section. "We are investigating that possibility and others."

Three robbers, armed with a gun and two knives, robbed two busboys late Monday in the busboys' residence, at 700 W. Rand Rd. Witnesses said the three fled in a car which may have been driven by a woman.

THE HOLDUP gang of one woman and three men has struck in Elk Grove Village, Palatine, Elmhurst and Wood Dale. It is reportedly headed by the woman, and robs busboys in their homes. Immigration documents and money usually are among the stolen items.

Police said $900 cash, clothing and a $100 tape recorder were taken in the Monday night robbery. The victims were Lorenzo Alva, 19, and Avel Alva, 18.

The three male robbers entered the Alvas' first-floor bedroom about 10 p.m. The robber with the gun ordered the brothers to the floor and demanded money. The robbers spoke only Spanish, police said.

One witness told police he saw three men, matching the robbers' description, with a woman in the Old Orchard Country Club restaurant about four hours before the robbery.

About a month ago, Elk Grove Village Det. Sgt. Ronald Iden said his department learned through intercepts of rumors of other, unreported holdups. The rumors had been circulating through the Mexican community.

City opens program for sidewalk repairs

Des Plaines residents who want their old sidewalks removed and replaced under the city's "50-50" program should make their requests as soon as possible.

Under the shared cost program, residents must pay $14.50 for a five-foot square of sidewalk. Six-foot squares for driveways are $15.38.

City officials said requests for new sidewalks will be handled on a first-come, first-served basis until all budgeted funds are used.

Residents wanting the work done should call the city engineer's office at 297-1200.

Jim Didier completes a mighty swing.

Demons, soaring gulls and flaming mountain ranges can all flow from the Hangman's brush onto cars.

The baddest man in town

Sumei art uses the brush to mix and blend colors.

by JOE SWICKARD

The Hangman will give you the ride of your life and paint your wagon with the images of dreams.

Forget foxtails on the aerial or fuzzy dice from the rearview mirror. You're riding in style unmatched if you've got one of The Hangman's painted fantasies on your car.

For the next week or so, he is applying his art at Mark Motors in Arlington Heights.

Crouched next to a sensible Plymouth Duster is The Hangman ("The" to his friends, or the more formal "Thee" if you prefer) stroking and rolling a tapered short handle brush. A landscape of flaming mountains flows almost magically as his hand moves. Just one brush and as many as 28 colors emerge from it.

He gives you his business card that can give you a migraine headache as well. Even without the 3-D calling card with orange polkadots on a gold background, you aren't likely to forget The Hangman.

WHAT KIND of man paints that kind of stuff on the sides of cars?

"You expect to see some retarder with hair down to here in a '60 Volkswagen van. All kinds of dope, a pregnant wife with no bra and an old dog with an ear infection. Right?" he said.

The Hangman knows what people expect to see. What they get is Jim Ballagh, 43-year-old former school teacher now living in Centerville, Iowa. Neatly trimmed and thinning blond hair, comfy suede shoes (with white socks) and a clean white smock.

The Hangman looks more like a laboratory technician than the pinstripping perpetrator he is.

His art is painting fantasy on cars. "It is the next step above and beyond pinstripping. It is sume! art — the blending of several colors on one brush at once," he said.

He says there are only three people in the country doing sume!; himself and two others he taught.

SUME! USES the brush instead of a palette for the mixing of the colors. By turning the brush, the colors are exposed and blended on the surface. Because the colors will bleed together, he can get only about 15 strokes before the brush must be remixed.

The Hangman's subjects range from panoramic mountain ranges to highly stylized flames, soaring gulls or freeform designs.

He is working at Mark Motors now because sales manager Rick Durgin saw him in action in Florida. Durgin liked what he saw and invited The Hangman to have a go at the cars in the Arlington Heights agency.

Although Mark Motors also sells Mercedes-Benzes, The Hangman acknowledges his artistry would not quite be what the customer wants on a $10,000 car.

THE WORK on the Dusters led to a custom job for the boyfriend of Durgin's sister. The boyfriend is bringing in more friends and even the 62-year-old woman bookkeeper wants an execution from The Hangman.

"A lot of people don't know exactly

Jim Ballagh, The Hangman, car painter and designer of dreams.

what they want. I don't know what's going to happen either. It just goes," he said.

Just letting it go is a lot of what The Hangman is and believes.

"I was the kid who was being kept after school for drawing in class. I was always in trouble for it. I can't see why they can't recognize a talent — whatever it is: drawing or music or whatever — and let it develop," he said.

Until three years ago he and his wife were employed by a public school system in California. She was the principal and he the teacher letting children learn through their interests. Skills and talents were used as tools to teach other subjects indirectly.

THEY WERE asked to leave and it opened the way for Ballagh to become The Hangman, a name taken from an old Randolph Scott movie.

Traveling the country, he paints cars, sneakers, walls or just about anything that stands still for a minute, and thoroughly enjoys himself.

"I'm a catalyst. I can bring people together and put them at ease. They can enjoy themselves. Take John, a mechanic here. He wanted something on his car but he didn't know what and I didn't either. Who'd ever thought it would be a bunch of fire ants crushing Coors beer cans."

The future may hold another school for he and his wife so some child won't fall because he wants to sing or draw. Jerry Lewis' Muscular Dystrophy telethon will get the proceeds from the auction sale of a van he is going to paint for 24 hours live on television.

The Hangman can realize your dreams in 28 colors from one brush. That's not too bad for a kid who was kept after school for drawing in class.

by JUDY JOBBITT

Teachers have a new motive for going back to school — holding on to their jobs.

Declining enrollment and program changes are sending more teachers back to the classroom to pick up credits toward a new major.

The foreign-language teacher is going back to get credits for teaching European history; the math teacher is headed into computer sciences; the science teacher is entering health education.

While the trend is most noticeable for high school teachers, the number of elementary teachers moving into new subjects also is increasing. They're finding they are more valuable to their school if they can offer themselves as a reading specialist, special-education instructor or learning-center director as well as classroom teacher.

TWO MOTIVES are behind this education trend — the fear of staff cuts because of declining enrollment or finances and the desire to teach subjects recently added to the curriculum.

Teachers say developing new areas of expertise should make them more valuable to their district if cutbacks become a reality.

High school districts 207 and 214 see such cutbacks in the future as they face declining enrollments over the coming years. High School Dist. 211 administrators say declining enrollment is too far off for teachers to be concerned about losing their jobs because of it, but teachers there also are expanding their backgrounds professionally.

"We are seeing teachers coming back for job security," said Michael Thompson, graduate adviser at Northern Illinois University, DeKalb. "People are becoming edgy about their situation. Even though their own situation might not be in jeopardy, they are planning for the future."

HE SAID the trend has developed over the past two years. "At first I thought it was just me seeing things, but it kept up."

He says it is encouraging to see teachers expanding their background because "it makes them a much more interesting teacher."

Edith Gauger of National College of Education, Evanston, said she has received some inquiries from teachers who are looking at the trends in their district and seeing where the opportunities will be in terms of dealing with cutbacks.

She said the major areas elementary teachers are going into are individualized instruction; special education; reading instruction and learning resource center backgrounds.

Northeastern Illinois University, Chicago, also is finding more elementary education teachers are entering fields related to their classroom instruction. Vincent Malek, dean of Northeastern's graduate college, said guidance counseling is another field more teachers are entering. He said teachers can use that knowledge in the classroom now as well as use it in the future if they need to find another teaching job.

TEACHERS ATTENDING DePaul University are looking into business-related courses more than before, said Bernetta Goldsberry, administrative assistant to the liberal arts college dean. "Teachers are going back for degrees in business areas even if they are currently employed as teachers," she said.

When districts cut back, "frills" like music and foreign language, go first, she said. These teachers have limited skills to offer employers outside of teaching so many are preparing themselves in advance to enter the business world in case of staff cuts.

A sampling of teachers who are switching from their original field substantiate the findings of universities.

Norm Horler, a biology teacher at Forest View High School, said he is taking health-education courses to expand his background in biology.

"Since I am teaching biology I have to teach nine weeks of health," he said, referring to the state requirement on health education. "It's an area I've always been interested in. Now that there is a mandate I want to make myself as well qualified as possible."

HE SAID although he doesn't have to worry about staff cuts because of his seniority on staff, he "hopes this will make me more valuable to the district."

Ed Swick, a German and Russian teacher at Prospect High School, has expanded his background in three directions. He has credits to teach English, Russian studies or European history.

"I saw other foreign languages going down and decided to take precautions," he said. "To keep all possibilities open I decided to be prepared to go into the English program." He also expanded his background in Soviet studies and European history.

Norma Schultz of Rolling Meadows High School decided to get credentials to teach business English, which will allow students to receive English credit for the course. Her major is business education. She has taught business English for several years although students couldn't receive English credit for the course. "One reason I went back is because I now will have two strengths to offer the district."

STEVE HERRING of Maine West High School is getting a stronger background in computer science to add to his mathematics major.

Declining enrollment had little to do with his decision to expand his background. "I've always had an interest in computer science," he said. He went back to specialize because new programs were being started in his field. This year, he offered Maine West students a semester course on computer science in addition to the data-processing course that has been offered the past two years.

But while these teachers say their primary reason for changing majors was an interest in another field or an expanded program, all admit they hope their diverse backgrounds will make them more valuable in case the day of teacher cutbacks comes.

Residents of 'island' weigh annex

by LYNN ASINOF

A small group of homeowners living in a 90-acre "island" of unincorporated land surrounded by Mount Prospect will meet with village officials in early July to discuss possible annexation.

Ken Rhead, 805 S. Busse Rd., said he and other property owners in the area are interested in annexation, but concerned about the cost of joining the village.

The meeting is being scheduled in response to a petition signed by the owners of 16 lots in the southern part of the island, which is bordered by Golf and Busse roads, Lonnquist Boulevard and runs east of Meyer Avenue.

Rhead said the group is interested in annexation because it would allow the village to take steps to protect the neighborhood from developers who might divide the large half-and-half-acre lots.

THE MATTER arose when Semar Home Builders petitioned for annexation and zoning to build four new homes on two Lonnquist Boulevard lots. The village has granted tentative approval of this request, despite the objections of residents who say it will ruin their neighborhood.

Rhead said the residents want a preliminary meeting because they are concerned that the village will force them to make major improvements to the area, changing the character of the neighborhood and costing substantial amounts of money.

Village Mgr. Robert J. Eppeley said these fears are unfounded. "We have no plans to throw big loads of expense onto them to supposedly upgrade them to the rest of the town," Eppeley said, noting that residents think they will immediately be asked to install sidewalks, curbs, gutters and streetlights.

Eppeley said many areas of the village have been annexed in similar fashion and still do not have sidewalks or other such improvements.

The petition does not include residents from the northern part of the island which runs along Busse Road west of the Mount Prospect Park District golf course. Residents in that area, however, are reportedly being canvassed for similar action.

Trustee Edward B. Rhea Jr. said he is confident that the village will be able to create some protection for the area, so that it won't be destroyed by developers.

Immunization clinic to move

The County Dept. of Public Health immunization clinic will move to the Trinity Lutheran Church, Algonquin and Wolf roads, Des Plaines.

The clinic, formerly at 800 S. Beau Dr., Des Plaines, will be open from 9 a.m. to 11 a.m. the third Thursday of the month beginning July 17. Children up to age 18 may receive free immunizations.

No appointment is necessary. Any one with a history of allergies or neurological diseases will not be accepted. Signed consent from parent or legal guardian is required for immunization. The child's immunization record also should be brought to the clinic.

Oakton College wrapup

Trustees angered
by program cut

Oakton Community College Trustees were angry Tuesday because the college administration decided not to offer courses in the college's chemical technology program in the fall.

Board chairman Ray Hartstein said he first found out about the decision in a letter he received Monday from Herman Bloch, director of catalysts research for Universal Oil Products. Bloch is a member of the advisory committee to the program.

"This board approves programs and I think we should be informed when a program is dropped," Hartstein said. "It's embarrassing to find out from a constituent."

College Pres. William Koehnline said he took full responsibility for not informing the board about the program. "The administration is at fault," he said, "and we take full responsibility for it. It was not intended as an affront to the board."

College Vice Pres. Richard Jordan said no courses are being offered for the fall semester because no new students applied for admission to the course. He said the program has not been dropped from the curriculum but "it is in grave danger. We have spent $25,000 trying to build the program and we have no new students."

Jordan said the three-year-old program had just 11 students enrolled last spring and had a maximum enrollment of 15 the first year it was offered. "Our coordinator has been recruiting and he's not coming up with anything," he said.

The chemistry technology program is designed to train technicians to work with chemists. In his letter to the board Bloch urged the college to continue the program. "There is still a need for chemical technicians in the community. The one student we were able to hire at UOP was excellent and a credit to the program," he said.

Koehnline said the college administration would prepare a detailed report to the board on the program's future in the next week.

Budget cut nay, ERA yea

The board opposed Gov. Daniel Walker's proposed 6 per cent budget cut and endorsed the Equal Rights Amendment to the U. S. Constitution.

The board voted unanimously to oppose Walker's call for an across the board 6 per cent budget cut which would affect the budgets for state aid to community colleges. Board Member Thomas Flynn, who introduced the resolution, said, "The college established its budget and tax levies based on the governor's word of honor that education would receive full funding."

The board also passed, with three board members abstaining, a resolution introduced by Flynn supporting the Equal Rights Amendment, which is expected to be called for a final vote in the Illinois Senate in the next few days.

Board members Stephen Leska and Paul Gilson objected to the resolution because they did not feel the issue directly affects the college. "We have an obligation to this community college — period. I do not think this is a college-educational matter," Leska said.

Leska, Gilson and Howard Levin abstained. Flynn, Ray Hartstein and the board's two women, Harriet Rittler and Vivian Medak voted in favor of the endorsement.

Computer purchase OK'd

The board agreed Tuesday to spend $597,444 to purchase computer equipment for the college.

The college will buy IBM 370 computer equipment with plans to keep it at least five years, said College Vice Pres. David Hilquist. He said buying the equipment now will save the college money when compared with the cost of leasing computer equipment.

"We feel that with this equipment we can serve the college better for less money," he said.

The obvious winning spirit shown by face and fingers.

DIANE NULL mounts the ladder for the diving board above the Wheeling Community Pool as she gets ready to take a cooling dip Wednesday.

No residential problems: builder

Car-crusher plant 'to meet all codes'

Officials of a company that wants to build an automobile-crushing plant in Wheeling said Wednesday that the development will meet all village codes and create no problems for area residents.

Burt Diamond, president of Diamond Scrap Yards Inc., Waukegan, told a special meeting of the village board that his proposed operation will meet all village requirements and will be an asset to the community.

"I'm here to meet the requirements," Diamond said. "There are no ifs about it. Our equipment will meet all standards."

DIAMOND TOLD the board the facility, proposed for a 2.3-acre site at Wheeling Road and W. Pine Street, will be a feeder yard for the company's main facility in Waukegan. He said the area will be fenced and will include a mobile auto flattener, an in-loader for junk cars and a crane. A warehouse to store no ferrous materials also is planned, he said.

Trustees and other village officials questioned Diamond on several areas of concern, including noise levels generated from the operation and traffic projections.

James Green, environmental advisory commission member who voted against recommending approval of the crusher plans, said potential noise levels from the facility could present a problem for neighboring residents.

Green said noise levels he recorded at the Waukegan plant registered 85 decibels, which would be reduced to 74 decibels after traveling 800 feet, the distance between the proposed crusher site and the nearest residential area. County standards place the noise limit at 61 decibels.

Noise readings taken by the Cook County Environmental Protection Agency registered between 75 and 81 decibels, reduced to 63 to 68 decibels at a distance of 800 feet, said Dennis Lyngaas, field engineering supervisor for the county EPA.

TRUSTEE JOHN COLE also questioned plans to use Dundee Road as an access route for the facility. "We have a traffic problem there as it is without flatbed and semi-trailer trucks going on there," Cole said. "That concerns me."

Discuss retention basin proposal tonight

Three Buffalo Grove village officials will meet with Wheeling-Buffalo Grove Dist. 21 board members tonight to discuss flooding problems on University Court, adjacent to Tarkington School, Wheeling.

Village Pres. Edward Fabish; Arnold Seaberg, village engineer, and Trustee Jerry Driscoll are expected to attend the school board meeting to propose building a retention basin near the school.

FLOODING PROBLEMS have long plagued residents along University Drive, which runs east and west in the Cambridge subdivision in Buffalo Grove. Tarkington School, 310 Scott St., is immediately east of the subdivision in Wheeling.

"We want to get the board's response to our request for consideration of a drainage facility on school property," Seaberg said.

This is the first time the school board will meet publicly to discuss the flooding proposal. Initial school district reactions were cool, however, because officials said the 17-acre retention basin would use up scarce school property and pose a safety hazard to children.

The board and village officials will meet at 8:15 p.m. in the school board room, 999 W. Dundee Rd., Wheeling.

CONTEMPLATION can be pre-occupying as shown here by Jimmy Derosa, 4, who is too busy staring ahead to even notice his reflection in the puddle in front.

Activities start Sunday

Fish derby kicks off July 4 fun

Fireworks, a parade, carnival and fishing derby will highlight Wheeling's celebration of the Fourth of July.

Activities will begin Sunday when a fishing derby for children ages 6-15 will take place at Potawatomi Lake, Dundee Road east of Milwaukee Avenue. The derby will begin at 8 a.m. and continue through dusk with a $25 savings bond awarded to the youngster who catches the biggest fish. Fishermen must register before the contest.

A week-long carnival at the Dunhurst Shopping Center, Dundee and Elmhurst roads, will begin Tuesday and continue through Sunday. The carnival will be open nightly from 6 p.m. to midnight.

SPECIAL CARNIVAL events include a greased pig contest, a banana-split eating contest and a water fight, all planned for July 4. Participants in the greased pig contest will be timed with the person recording the fastest time to catch the pig awarded a $25 savings bond.

The banana-split eating contest is sponsored by Dairy Queen of Wheeling, Elmhurst and Dundee Roads. The water fight will be between teams from the fire and police departments.

Activities at the carnival planned for July 5 include a craft contest sponsored by the Wheeling Jills and a greased-pole climbing contest. Registration for the craft competition will be from 4 to 6 p.m. with judging at 6 p.m.

A fireworks display within the vicinity of the carnival will begin at 8 p.m. July 4.

The week's activities will culminate with a parade planned for July 8. The parade will begin at 3 p.m. at the corner of Wheeling and Dundee roads and proceed east on Dundee to the parking lot of the Wheeling Trust and Savings Bank, Milwaukee Avenue and Dundee Road.

THE PARADE WILL include five drum and bugle corps including one from Wheeling High School. Prizes will be awarded for the following categories: best of parade, best musical unit, best commercial entry, best marching group, best civic entry, most original idea and best decorated car.

Parade marshal will be Connie Reif, Miss Illinois. Village officials also will be in the parade.

A turtle race in front of the village hall, 255 W. Dundee Rd., will begin immediately after the parade.

All the week's activities have been arranged by the Wheeling Jaycees and Jills.

Tonight by planners

Foxboro site plan changes up for review

Site plan changes proposed for the second phase of the Foxboro apartment development will be reviewed tonight by the Wheeling Plan Commission.

The second phase of the project, on the west side of Wolf Road north of Hinz Road, calls for construction of 164 units, the same number built during the first phase of development. Changes proposed for the second phase deal with the size of sidewalks, parking spaces and the amount of open space to be allowed.

The plan commission will be reviewing the proposed changes for the second time, having tabled discussion at its last meeting to allow new commissioners time to review the project.

THE COMMISSION first reviewed the plans in March but voted to recommend the village board not approve the second phase of the project because the developer, Irv Laskowitz, made certain changes in the first phase of construction without first seeking plan commission approval.

Commissioners also objected to the high density of the project, which was granted under county zoning before the project was annexed to the village. County zoning allows the developer to build 20.6 units per acre while village zoning limits construction to 16 units per acre.

The village board followed the commission's recommendation and failed to approve the plans but at the same time directed the commission to review the plans again. Village Atty. Paul Hamer said the commission should make another recommendation based on more substantial facts than merely disapproval of the project's density.

The board this week decided to approve the issuance of occupancy permits for the pool and recreation building completed as part of the first phase of the project.

HAMER HAD recommended the permits be withheld pending a recommendation from the plan commission on the project's second phase. Hamer said withholding the permits would serve as leverage to ensure that the developer completes certain work on the first phase which has been required by the village.

The board voted to grant the occupancy permits at the request of residents of the first phase, who claimed they were being unduly punished by being denied use of the facilities.

The commission meeting is set for 7:30 p.m. in the Village Hall, 255 W. Dundee Rd.

Demons, soaring gulls and flaming mountain ranges can all flow from the Hangman's brush onto cars.

The baddest man in town

Sumei art uses the brush to mix and blend colors.

by JOE SWICKARD

The Hangman will give you the ride of your life and paint your wagon with the images of dreams.

Forget foxtails on the aerial or fuzzy dice from the rearview mirror. You're riding in style unmatched if you've got one of The Hangman's painted fantasies on your car.

For the next week or so, he is applying his art at Mark Motors in Arlington Heights.

Crouched next to a sensible Plymouth Duster is The Hangman ("The" to his friends, or the more formal "Thee" if you prefer) stroking and rolling a tapered short handle brush. A landscape of flaming mountains flows almost magically as his hand moves. Just one brush and as many as 28 colors emerge from it.

He gives you his business card that can give you a migraine headache as well. Even without a 3-D calling card with orange polka dots on a gold background, you aren't likely to forget The Hangman.

WHAT KIND of man paints that kind of stuff on the sides of cars?

"You expect to see some retarder with hair down to here in a '60 Volkswagen van. All kinds of dope, a pregnant wife with no bra and an old dog with an ear infection. Right?" he said.

The Hangman knows what people expect to see. What they get is Jim Ballagh, 43-year-old former school teacher now living in Centerville, Iowa. Neatly trimmed and wearing blond hair, trimly suede shoes (with white socks) and a clean white smock.

The Hangman looks more like a laboratory technician than the pinstripping perpetrator he is.

His art is painting fantasy on cars. "It is the next step above and beyond pinstripping. It is sumei art — the blending of several colors on one brush at once," he said.

He says there are only three people in the country doing sumei; himself and two others he taught.

SUMEI USES the brush instead of a palette for the mixing of the colors. By turning the brush, the colors are exposed and blended on the surface. Because the colors will bleed together, he can get only about 15 strokes before the brush must be remixed.

The Hangman's subjects range from panoramic mountain ranges to highly stylized flames, soaring gulls or freeform designs.

He is working at Mark Motors now because sales manager Rick Durgin saw him in action in Florida. Durgin liked what he saw and invited The Hangman to have a go at the cars in the Arlington Heights agency.

Although Mark Motors also sells Mercedes-Benzes, The Hangman acknowledges his artistry would not quite be what the customer wants on a $10,000 car.

THE WORK on the Dusters led to a custom job for the boyfriend of Durgin's sister. The boyfriend is bringing in more friends and even the 62-year-old woman bookkeeper wants an execution from The Hangman.

"A lot of people don't know exactly

Jim Ballagh, The Hangman, car painter and designer of dreams.

what they want. I don't know what's going to happen either. It just goes," he said.

Just letting it go is a lot of what The Hangman is and believes.

"I was the kid who was being kept after school for drawing in class. I was always in trouble for it. I can't see why they can't recognize a talent — whatever it is: drawing or music or whatever — and let it develop," he said.

Until three years ago he and his wife were employed by a public school system in California. She was the principal and he the teacher letting children learn through their interests. Skills and talents were used as tools to teach other subjects indirectly.

THEY WERE asked to leave and it opened the way for Ballagh to become The Hangman, a name taken from an old Randolph Scott movie.

Traveling the country, he paints cars, sneakers, walls or just about anything that stands still for a minute, and thoroughly enjoys himself.

Teachers, leery of layoffs, becoming students again

by JUDY JOBBITT

Teachers have a new motive for going back to school — holding on to their jobs.

Declining enrollment and program changes are sending more teachers back to the classroom to pick up credits toward a new major.

The foreign-language teacher is going back to get credits for teaching European history; the math teacher is headed into computer sciences; the science teacher is entering health education.

While the trend is most noticeable for high school teachers, the number of elementary teachers moving into new subjects also is increasing. They're finding they are more valuable to their school if they can offer themselves as a reading specialist, special-education instructor or learning-center director as well as classroom teacher.

TWO MOTIVES are behind this education trend — the fear of staff cuts because of declining enrollment or finances and the desire to teach subjects recently added to the curriculum.

Teachers say developing new areas of expertise should make them more valuable to their district if cutbacks become a reality.

High school districts 207 and 214 see such cutbacks in the future as they face declining enrollments over the coming years. High School Dist. 211 administrators say declining enrollment is too far off for teachers to be concerned about losing their jobs because of it, but teachers there also are expanding their backgrounds professionally.

"We are seeing teachers coming back for job security," said Michael Thompson, graduate adviser at Northern Illinois University, DeKalb. "People are becoming edgy about their situation. Even though their own situation might not be in jeopardy, they are planning for the future."

HE SAID the trend has developed over the past two years. "At first I thought it was just me seeing things, but it kept up."

He says it is encouraging to see teachers expanding their background because "it makes them a much more interesting teacher."

Edith Gauger of National College of Education, Evanston, said she has received some inquiries from teachers who are looking at the trends in their district and seeing where the opportunities will be in terms of dealing with cutbacks.

She said the major areas elementary teachers are going into are individualized instruction, special education, reading instruction and learning resource center backgrounds.

Northeastern Illinois University, Chicago, also is finding more elementary education teachers are entering fields related to their classroom instruction. Vincent Malek, dean of Northeastern's graduate college, said guidance counseling is another field more teachers are entering. He said teachers can use that knowledge in the classroom now as well as use it in the future if they need to find another teaching job.

TEACHERS ATTENDING DePaul University are looking into business-related courses more than before, said Bernetta Goldsberry, administrative assistant to the liberal arts college dean. "Teachers are going back for degrees in business areas even if they are currently employed as teachers," she said.

When districts cut back, "frills" like music and foreign language, go first, she said. These teachers have limited skills to offer employers outside of teaching so many are preparing themselves in advance to enter the business world in case of staff cuts.

A sampling of teachers who are switching from their original field substantiate the findings of universities.

Norm Horler, a biology teacher at Forest View High School, said he is taking health-education courses to expand his background in biology.

"Since I am teaching biology I have to teach nine weeks of health," he said, referring to the state requirement on health education. "It's an area I've always been interested in. Now that there is a mandate I want to make myself as well qualified as possible."

HE SAID although he doesn't have to worry about staff cuts because of his seniority on staff, he "hopes this will make me more valuable to the district."

Ed Swick, a German and Russian teacher at Prospect High School, has expanded his background in three directions. He has credits to teach English, Russian studies or European history.

"I saw other foreign languages going down and decided to take precautions," he said. "To keep all possibilities open I decided to be prepared to go into the English program." He also expanded his background in Soviet studies and European history.

Norma Schultz of Rolling Meadows High School decided to get credentials to teach business English, which will allow students to receive English credit for the course. Her major is business education. She has taught business English for several years although students couldn't receive English credit for the course. "One reason I went back is because I now will have two strengths to offer the district."

STEVE HERRING of Maine West High School is getting a stronger background in computer science to add to his mathematics major.

Declining enrollment had little to do with his decision to expand his background. "I've always had an interest in computer science," he said. He went back to specialize because new programs were being started in his field. This year, he offered Maine West students a semester course on computer science in addition to the data-processing course that has been offered the past two years.

But while these teachers say their primary reason for changing majors was an interest in another field or an expanded program, all admit they hope their diverse backgrounds will make them more valuable in case the day of teacher cutbacks comes.

Carpentersville youths

Two charged in armed robbery

Buffalo Grove police have charged two Carpentersville youths with armed robbery. Police said the youths Tuesday robbed the White Hen Pantry food store, 223 W. Dundee Rd., of $118 after threatening a store clerk with a hunting knife.

Arrested were Michael C. Brown, 19, of 141 Mora Rd., and Michael Douglas Verborn, 17, of 117 Cordona Rd., in the suburb. Both were charged with armed robbery.

A third youth, James T. Dent, 17, of 149 Mora Rd., Carpentersville, who was with Brown and Verborn at the time of their arrest, was released without charges, said police Sgt. Ronald Gozdecki.

The youths were arrested minutes after the holdup on Dundee near Hicks Road while driving in a green van described by store clerk David Bollito, 18, as the getaway vehicle.

POLICE SAID Brown pulled a knife on Bollito after entering the store and purchasing a container of yogurt. He allegedly ordered Bollito to put money from a cash register in a paper bag and then fled to the van where Verborn was waiting.

Dent was reportedly asleep in the vehicle and knew nothing of the robbery.

The clerk later identified Brown as the holdup man and the cash was found on the suspect during a station search, Gozdecki said.

Both youths were taken to Cook County Jail where they are being held on $5,000 bond pending a hearing in Circuit Court July 25.

18 light fixtures worth $360 damaged

Vandals caused $360 damage by breaking 18 light fixtures inside two buildings under construction at the Buffalo Grove Plaza, 400 W. Dundee Rd., police said Wednesday.

The damage probably was done between 3 and 5 p.m. Tuesday, police said.

Parks to review meet with trustees

The Buffalo Grove Park District will meet today to review a joint workshop meeting recently conducted with the village board.

Commissioners will review discussions about proposed park-land donations at Strathmore Grove and The Crossings developments and various park-district leases. Commissioners also will hear plans to install a walkway along Buffalo Grove Road to Cambridge Park, near Buffalo Grove and Dundee roads.

The meeting will begin at 8 p.m. at the park district office, 150 Raupp Blvd.

Kids learn joys of show business

by MARILYN McDONALD
There's no business like show business, especially when first, second and third graders are involved.

Primary students at Irving School, 1250 Radcliffe, Buffalo Grove, are discovering the joys of greasepaint and applause through their "Showbiz '75" summer school course. Teachers Connie Norton and Cindy Quinn are guiding the 30 junior thespians through four weeks of costuming, set design, puppetmaking and performances.

"We wanted to teach a fun course this summer, not something academic," said Mrs. Norton. She and Miss Quinn discussed books they have read and enjoyed that might lend themselves to junior dramatics. Then they asked their students to read the stories, design simple painted backdrops for scenery, create costumes from old clothes and adapt the stories to short play form.

THE COURSE is loose in structure and designed basically for enjoyment, but Mrs. Norton said students will use language arts skills in turning stories into plays.

The course is designed to produce a play each week. This week the students are preparing for Friday's presentation of "A Trip Through Storyland." Six separate "theater companies" are preparing dramatic presentations of "Cinderella," "The Three Little Pigs," "The Three Bears" and other popular fairy tales. Students will invite their families and other Irving School summer school pupils to see the plays.

As the youngsters' earnestly bent over their set designs, sprawling on the floor in the comfort of loose summer clothing, Mrs. Norton remarked on her students' enthusiasm for the course.

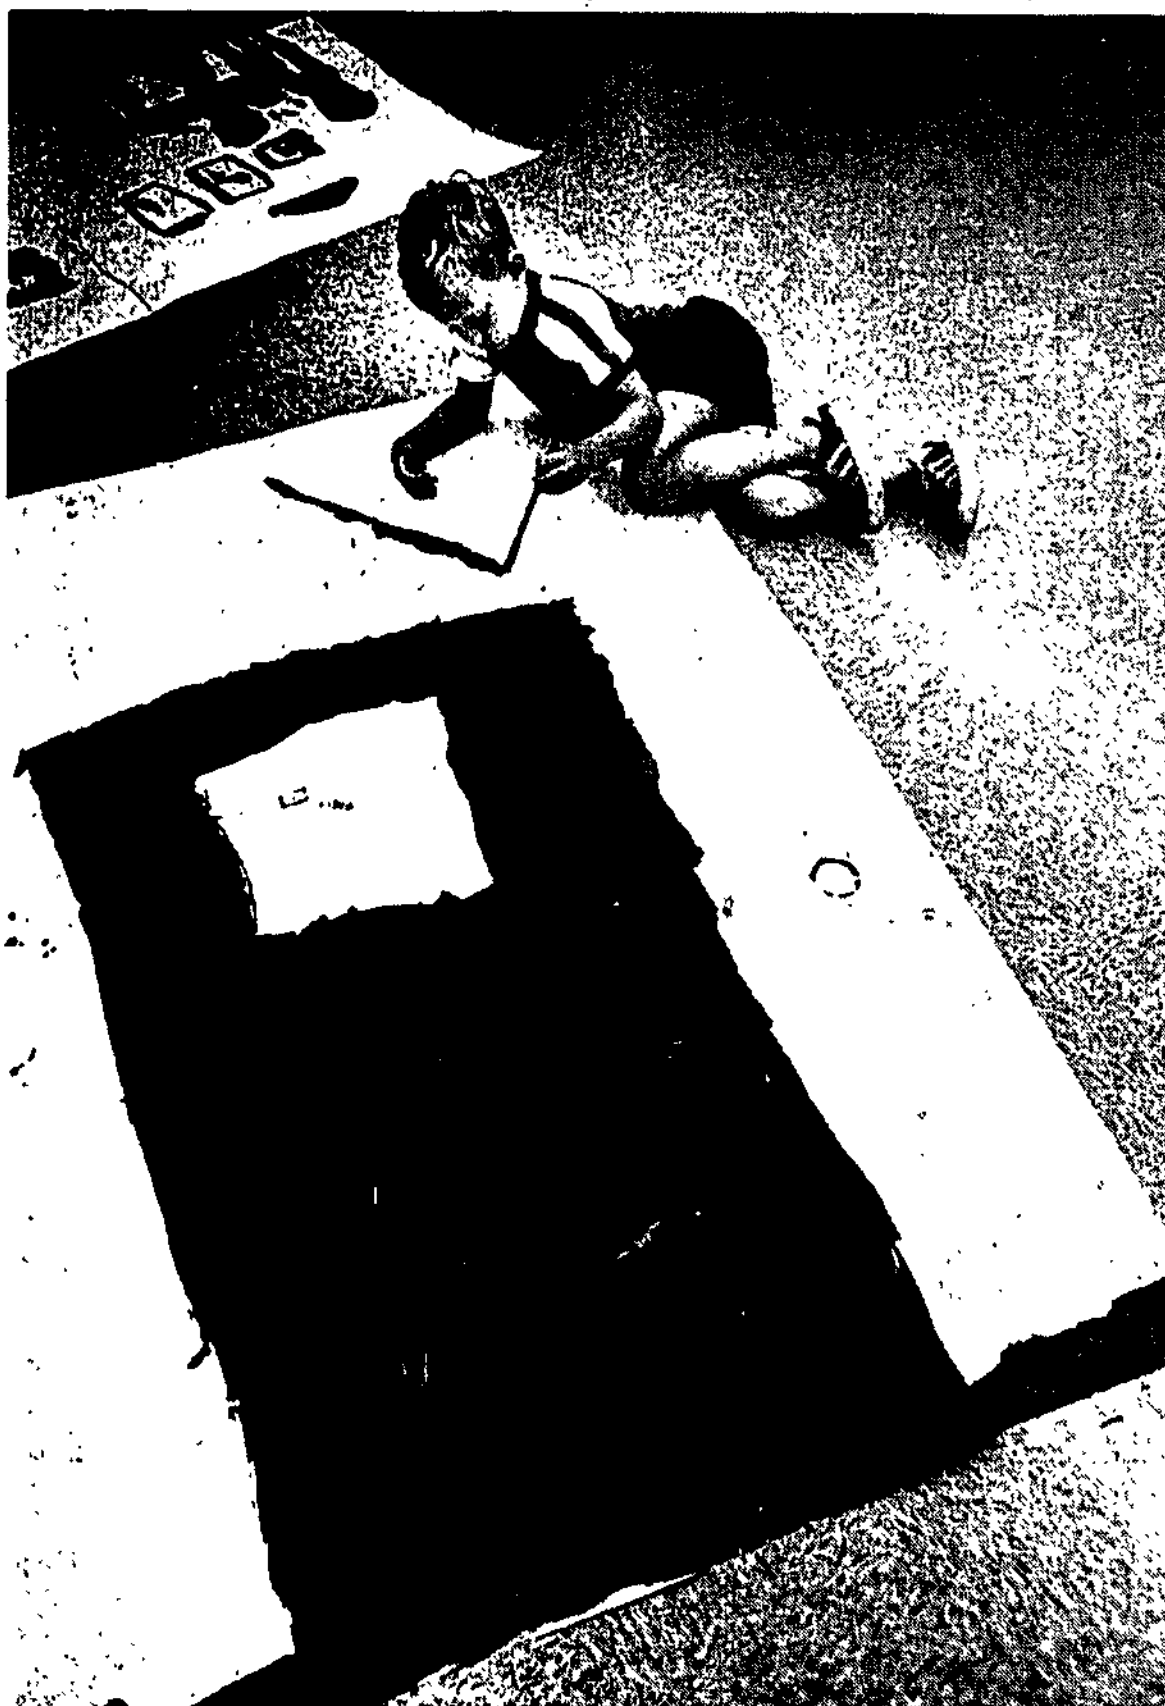

"THIS IS REALLY a nice group of kids. They all really wanted to be doing this. In fact, we had to turn a few children away because the class was limited to 30."

When the sets are painted, the students will rehearse their parts in the plays. Most students take several parts, quickly changing character with a change of costume.

But versatility can take its toll — one young actor complained that he'll have to be all three billy goats in "Three Billy Goats Gruff."

LISA MEIER, 7, consults her copy '75" summer school class will present Friday. This is the first year the class has been held at Irving.

THE ROOF OF CINDERELLA'S house occupies the attention of Jeff Kiva, 7. Jeff and his classmates are busy designing scenery for their production of "Cinderella," one of six fairy tales the "Showbiz

'75" creative dramatics class at Irving School will present Friday. This is the first year the class has been held at Irving.

Townhouses out?

Change to single-family sought for The Crossings

A plan to build single-family detached homes instead of proposed townhouse units in the second phase of The Crossings development was brought before the Buffalo Grove Plan Commission Wednesday night by Otis Associates.

Andy McPherson, an architect with the firm, told commissioners in a workshop session that the developer wants to build 39 homes instead of the 40 townhouse units previously approved by the village. The change of plans, however, would not change the density, McPherson said.

The change is being sought by the developer, the Richards Group, because single family homes appear to be the most appealing in the housing market, McPherson said. "It is an attempt to get that part of the market that's the strongest," he said of the new plan.

The changes were carefully developed after marketing studies so that the existing portion of the development will not be altered, he said.

THE CROSSINGS development site near Ill. Rte. 53 and 83 wedges the village of Long Grove to the south and west. The approved plan was to build 748 rental and condominium units. The first phase of the development consisting of 120 townhouses already has been completed immediately south of Ill. Rte. 53.

The single-family homes are proposed south of the existing townhouses. Houses will line an L-shaped street. Those on the north-south portion of the street will back a 250 foot long recreation lake that also will serve as a retention for storm water. Each lot will have a minimum of 6,000 square feet and homes from 1,250 to 2,000 square feet. The lots would have "a glimmer of open space" McPherson said.

Although architects of the Otis firm have not completed drawings on the types of homes that will be sold there are four different structures proposed.

They include small ranch-style house, a split-level design, a two-story structure designed for the larger family and a "Saltbox" structure. The houses will range from $55,000 to $72,000 depending on labor and material costs.

DRAWINGS will be completed and submitted soon to the village appearance control commission for approval, McPherson said.

There will be two accesses to the lake which is expected to be deeded to the Buffalo Grove Park District, McPherson said.

Commr. Rodney Jacobs said residents who buy home that back the lake may want to fence off their property for safety and privacy.

Commissioners said they were unsure of possible village limitations that would prohibit fencing in that particular area.

Jacobs said the architects should consider the fencing matter because it is adjacent to a public recreation area. He added that residents may choose bushes and hedges as a means of fencing.

Discuss retention basin proposal tonight

Three Buffalo Grove village officials will meet with Wheeling-Buffalo Grove Dist. 21 board members tonight to discuss flooding problems on University Court, adjacent to Tarkington School, Wheeling.

Village Pres. Edward Fabish; Arnold Seaberg, village engineer, and Trustee Jerry Driscoll are expected to attend the school board meeting to propose building a retention basin near the school.

FLOODING PROBLEMS have long plagued residents along University Drive, which runs east and west in the Cambridge subdivision in Buffalo Grove. Tarkington School, 310 Scott St., is immediately east of the subdivision in Wheeling.

"We want to get the board's response to our request for consideration of a drainage facility on school property," Seaberg said.

This is the first time the school board will meet publicly to discuss the flooding proposal. Initial school district reactions were cool, however, because officials said the 17-acre retention basin would use up scarce school property and pose a safety hazard to children.

The board and village officials will meet at 8:15 p.m. in the school board room, 909 W. Dundee Rd., Wheeling.

Carpentersville youths

Two charged in armed robbery

Buffalo Grove police have charged two Carpentersville youths with armed robbery. Police said the youths Tuesday robbed the White Hen Pantry food store, 223 W. Dundee Rd., of $118 after threatening a store clerk with a hunting knife.

Arrested were Michael C. Brown, 19, of 141 Mora Rd., and Michael Douglas Verborn, 17, of 117 Cordona

Rd., in the suburb. Both were charged with armed robbery.

A third youth, James T. Dent, 17, of 149 Mora Rd., Carpentersville, who was with Brown and Verborn at the time of their arrest, was released without charges, said police Sgt. Ronald Gozdecki.

The youths were arrested minutes after the holdup on Dundee near Hicks Road while driving in a green van described by store clerk David Bolitho, 18, as the getaway vehicle.

POLICE SAID Brown pulled a knife on Bolitho after entering the store and purchasing a container of yogurt. He allegedly ordered Bolitho to put money from a cash register in a paper bag and then fled to the van where Verborn was waiting.

Dent was reportedly asleep in the vehicle and knew nothing of the robbery.

The clerk later identified Brown as the holdup man and the cash was found on the suspect during a station search, Gozdecki said.

Both youths were taken to Cook County Jail where they are being held on $5,000 bond pending a hearing in Circuit Court July 25.

Busboy robbers may be tied to other stickups: police

Mount Prospect police said they believe two Old Orchard Country Club busboys were robbed this week by the same gang responsible for similar stickups in the Northwest suburbs during the last six weeks.

"It is very possible this robbery may be connected," said Sgt. Patrick Hailhan, head of the investigative section. "We are investigating that possibility and others."

Three robbers, armed with a gun and two knives, robbed two busboys late Monday in the busboys' residence, at 700 W. Rand Rd. Witnesses said the three fled in a car which may have been driven by a woman.

THE HOLDUP gang of one woman and three men has struck in Elk Grove Village, Palatine, Elmhurst and Wood Dale. It is reportedly headed by the woman, and robs busboys in their homes. Immigration documents and money usually are among the stolen items.

Police said $900 cash, clothing and a $100 tape recorder were taken in the Monday night robbery. The victims were Lorenzo Alva, 18, and Abel Alva, 18.

The three male robbers entered the Alvas' first-floor bedroom about 10 p.m. The robber with the gun ordered the brothers to the floor and demanded money. The robbers spoke only Spanish, police said.

One witness told police he saw three men, matching the robbers' description, with a woman in the Old Orchard Country Club restaurant about four hours before the robbery.

About a month ago, Elk Grove Village Det. Sgt. Ronald Iden said his department learned through interpreters of rumors of other, unreported holdups. The rumors had been circulating through the Mexican community.

Parks to install walkway near road

Buffalo Grove Park officials are planning to install a walkway along an eastern portion of Buffalo Grove Road for pedestrians and bicyclists traveling to Cambridge Park.

About 1,300 feet of walkway will be paved from Downing Road up to the western entrance of the park. The park site is near the southeast corner of Dundee and Buffalo Grove roads in the Cambridge subdivision.

The asphalt path is needed to ensure the safety of foot and bike traffic from the Cambridge area, said Park Director Stanley Crosland.

The path will lead to a parking lot entrance of the park, he said.

The project is estimated to cost $2,900, Crosland said. Park district workers already are excavating for the project. The walkway is expected to be finished by Labor Day, Crosland said.

CONTEMPLATION can be pre-occupying as shown here by Jimmy Derosa, 4, who is too busy staring ahead to even notice his reflection in the puddle in front.

ARLINGTON HEIGHTS firefighters concentrate a stream of water on a fire that gutted an abandoned house Wednesday near Arlington Heights Road and Fairview Lane. No cause for the blaze has been determined. Two Buffalo Grove firetrucks assisted the four Arlington Heights fire units about 3:10 p.m.

Scouting news

Fifteen new Cub Scouts recently were initiated into Buffalo Grove Cub Pack 39 in a ceremony at Potawatomi Woods.

There was a family picnic supper and an awards presentation afterwards.

Jim Musfeldt was chosen the Cub Scout of the year. Brian Terry, Chafy Mostofi and Chris Spchalski were presented wolf badges.

Frank Pollard and Jim Musfeldt each won an arrow point and Chafy Mostofi won two arrow points.

Several boys were initiated into Boy Scout Troop 39 in Indian ceremonial rites. The Scouts have several projects planned for the summer.

Strathmore hearing July 14

July 14 has been the date selected for a public hearing on Levitt and Sons Inc.'s change of plans for the Strathmore Grove development.

Robert Brandwein, vice president of the firm, is asking for a zoning change for the second phase of the housing development in the northern section of the village.

The zoning change would allow Levitt to build 57 single-family homes instead of the 225 apartment and condominium units proposed in original plans.

Another public hearing also has been set for July 14 for the annexation of a strip of property owned by Aaron Goldin of Long Grove.

Annexation is being sought as an agreement made between Goldin and developer William Simpson for a shopping center on the southeast corner of Dundee and Buffalo Grove roads. A Kohl's supermarket is proposed for the shopping center.

Action delayed on making fire house a library

The Schaumburg Township Board of Auditors delayed action Wednesday on a request from the Schaumburg Township Public Library for $43,200 in federal revenue-sharing funds to convert a vacant fire station into a branch library.

Library officials asked the board last month for a commitment to remodel the station at 468 Hassel Rd., Hoffman Estates, if the library board decides to buy the site. Library board Pres. John Lucas said the auditor's action "puts us in a very borderline position."

"Our budget is shaped for the next year, and there is no contingency. We have to make a decision (on the fire station) in the next couple of weeks and we have to know if money is available," he said.

TOWNSHIP AUDITOR John Jensen Jr. said he was "bothered by the library's proposal."

"The library board is asking us to make the decision if they should go into branch libraries. I'd like to see a total commitment from the (library) board in favor of building branch libraries as soon as they can be financed," he said.

Lucas said that "once the library board adopts any branch, we're committed to a branch in various corners of the township. That's pretty well understood."

While the library board has not formerly voted to buy the station, Lucas said a decision is expected July 2.

Jensen said he is also concerned about the township bailing Hoffman Estates out of financial difficulties.

"Why doesn't Hoffman Estates try biting the bullet. They're selling the station for the cost of the loan. I have to believe they have a white elephant on their hands," he said.

MICHAEL MADDEN, library director, said, "The fire station may be a white elephant to the village but it doesn't mean it's a white elephant for us." He said studies indicate the fire station is "in the best possible location for serving the northwest corner of the township."

Madden said remodeling of the station also is cheaper than building a branch library from scratch.

"The building alone would cost us $40,000 more than remodeling. If you include land costs and architects' fees, it would probably be about $65,000 more," he said.

Lucas said the request for revenue sharing funds is "a one-shot deal. After this we will budget for operation of the branch," he said.

TOWNSHIP AUDITOR Glenn E. Hoffman said he personally believes "a sense of commitment to the library."

"We gave them $35,000 in revenue sharing funds last year to buy books. I think we should allocate the same sum whether they use it for the branch or for other things," Hoffman said.

The library is competing with the Hoffman Estates Park District for the firehouse. Hoffman Estates Village Pres. Virginia Hayter Wednesday said the village has made no decision about which agency will get the station.

Neither the park district nor the library has met with the village since a May 27 meeting when the matter was discussed in a committee-of-the-whole meeting.

"We're waiting for both of them to come forward with what they can handle. There isn't anything we can do until there is more information," Mrs. Hayter said.

The village board is expected to decide July 8 which governmental body will get the station.

SCHAUMBURG OFFICIALS gave Dunbar Builders the green light on a proposed fence to be constructed along the south side of Cougar Trail to screen the Dunbar Lakes townhouse development from Conant High School. The builder was forced to come back to the village board for approval since the fence was not included in his original site plans, though residents were told about it at the time they purchased townhouses.

Builder granted variance

Fence near Conant wins approval

Builders of Schaumburg's Dunbar Lakes townhouse development have been granted a variance that will permit construction of a fence separating the project from Conant High School.

Village officials, however, will withhold occupancy permits for six existing three-bedroom units in the development until the builder has adjusted the total bedroom count to meet Schaumburg's maximum 15 percent three-bedroom guideline.

Fred Banker, a representative of the Dunbar townhouse owners' association, said the builder plans to install a six-foot shadowbox fence near Cougar Trail on the north side of the project to separate the development from Conant High School.

ALTHOUGH the fence was not included in the original site plans, village officials agreed to grant the variance but require the builder to submit revised plans before a fence permit is issued.

Recently village officials learned that Dunbar has exceeded the three-bedroom maximum in the first and second phases of the development, though it was pointed out this week that the error was not caught by the village building department when permits were issued for construction.

Trustee Alan Larson, a former Dunbar employee, contends that the buildings causing the overage were listed on the site plan as two-bedroom units with a den.

IN A DECISION to withhold occupancy permits on the six units until the builder adjusts the bedroom count, the village board went against the recommendations of Village Atty. Jack M. Siegel.

Siegel said he questions the legality of freezing occupancy permits since building permits were issued.

"Unfortunately, I think the village shares some of the responsibility in this because the building permits were processed by the village and if a permit is issued it is hard to hold up an occupancy permit," he said.

'Owners must sign Centex site plans'

Subdivision plats for Centex-Schaumburg Industrial Park must contain the names of principals in the land ownership trust, Village Atty. Jack M. Siegel says.

Siegel was addressing a problem recently brought to light by the village plans commission, which has delayed the approval of Centex Unit 134.

Plans commissioners refused to process the subdivision because site plans were not signed by owners and the matter was then brought to the attention of Chicago financier Jack M. Pritzker, a Centex principal.

Pritzker advised the village that it would be a "hardship" to provide the signatures in time for regular plans commission hearings when Centex matters are presented.

"Candidly, I see no difference in Mr. Pritzker's position than others coming in to us who do sign their plats," Siegel said, adding "I don't like unsigned plats and we just can't have two sets of rules in Schaumburg."

Pritzker, along with Bennett and Kahnweiler Associates, Chicago based real estate brokers, and William Lambert, a Park Ridge resident, own extensive properties in the Schaumburg area including the more than 200-acre Golf Road site on which the huge $250 million Woodfield 76 "Metro Center" is planned.

3 arrested for Woodfield thefts

A $15 shoplifting incident at the Woodfield Shopping Center, Schaumburg, led to the arrest Tuesday night of three persons for possession of $330 worth of stolen property, police said.

Emma Lee Clay, 40, and Joyce Taylor, both of Rockford, were charged with four counts of theft under $150 and one of possession of stolen property each. Robert Collier, 25, also of Rockford, was charged with three counts of theft under $150 and one of possession of stolen property.

Police said they followed the two women out of the JC Penney store and saw them place two gymnasts under the front seat of a car.

Police stopped the car and recovered the stolen clothing from Casual Corner, Madigans, Chess King and Silverman's, authorities said.

Sheffield club membership up--but so is vandalism

Sheffield Park West resident Jack Halpin brought good and bad news to the Schaumburg Village Board.

Halpin reported that the Sheffield Park Swim and Racquet Club is operating successfully this summer, despite residents' earlier concerns when Levitt Residential Properties Inc. management appeared reluctant to operate the facility because of insufficient revenue from club memberships.

Halpin said more than 200 families have joined the club, now operated primarily by the Sheffield Park Homeowners Assn. "with little builder involvement."

But Halpin called rapidly increasing incidents of vandalism in the subdivision to the attention of the board and said he has not noticed police cars patrolling the area during the last week.

Village Pres. Raymond Kessell told Halpin he has discussed the vandalism problem with Police Chief Martin Conroy and has been assured the subdivision is under close surveillance.

"The chief is acutely aware of this problem, but you must remember that an important part of police work is not always obvious," Kessell said.

Board seeks youth court for new building

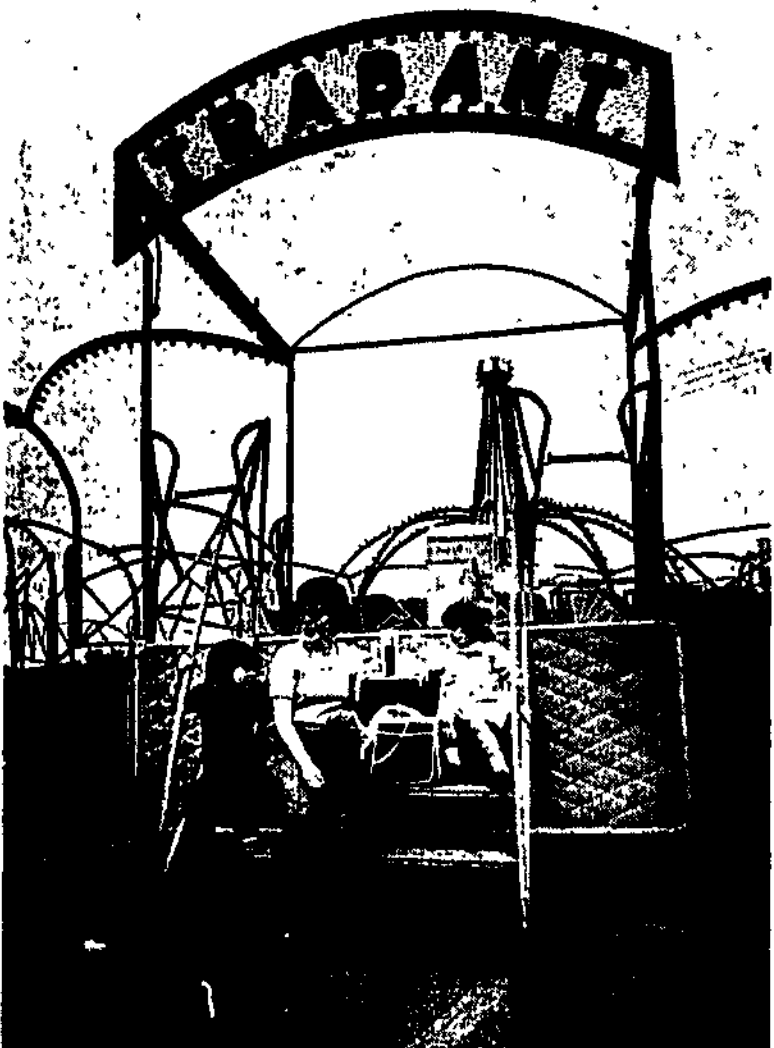

A resolution petitioning Cook County Circuit Court to establish a satellite juvenile branch in Schaumburg's new $1.5 million police and courts building has been adopted by the village board.

The recommendation made recently by the safety, health and recreation committee was endorsed by the village board earlier this month. The proposal stemmed from a recent committee study of increased vandalism in the village.

Village Atty. Jack M. Siegel said copies of the resolution will be sent to Judge John S. Boyle, chief of the Circuit Court; Judge Anton Smigiel, chief of the 3rd Municipal District; the County Board, and the Illinois General Assembly.

Smigiel recently dismissed the Schaumburg proposal as "not feasible" and pointed out that establishment of a Niles juvenile court came 18 months ago after more than 10 years of negotiations.

Consideration of a Schaumburg branch, Smigiel said, would "open the door for 23 other municipalities" in the Third District to make similar requests.

THEY WERE waiting for the carnival to open Wednesday, and Mrs. Starr Spencer and her children, Benjamin and Jennifer, didn't have to wait long. The Hoffman Estates Jaycees carnival opened last night in the Golf-Rose shopping center and will run through Sunday. The annual event raises funds for the Jaycees.

Dems slate family picnic

The Regular Democratic Organization of Schaumburg Township will hold its annual family picnic from 11 a.m. to 7:30 p.m. Sunday at Ned Brown Forest Preserve, Busse Woods, south of Higgins Road near Arlington Heights Road.

Groves 8-12 are reserved for the picnic, said John Morrissey, Democratic committeeman.

Cost is $1 per adult, which includes beer, soda, ice cream, music, games and prizes. Children will be admitted free. Tickets may be purchased on the grounds.

Church sets puppet show

A Kid's Crusade with Uncle Hank and Aunt Joyce, featuring puppets "Oliver and Stretch," will be presented Sunday through July 2 at Calvary Baptist Church, 1000 S. Spring-guth Rd., Schaumburg.

Presentations at 7 p.m. each night are open to the public.

Trustees to consider plan-unit guidelines

Guidelines for preparing an ordinance to govern Schaumburg's proposed planning department will be discussed by village trustees meeting as a committee-of-the-whole at 8 p.m. today.

The village has budgeted $82,415 for the department, including $18,000 for a professional planner, for the fiscal year ending April 30, 1976.

Six applications from prospective planners have been received in response to advertisements run this month in several professional magazines, said Village Mgr. John E. Costo.

Costo said he expects the village board to appoint a recruitment committee to screen applicants and select a planner within the next few weeks.

The public meeting will be in the Schaumburg Civic Center, Washington Room, 101 S. Schaumburg Ct.

Rosenberg resigns planning position

The resignation of H. James Rosenberg, 1918 Flintshire Dr., from Schaumburg's plans commission was accepted this week by the village board.

Village Pres. Raymond Kessell said Rosenberg recently advised him by letter that he intends to move.

Kessell said he hopes to fill soon the plans commission vacancy and an opening on the zoning board.

Chambers may merge by year's end

The four-year-old possibility of merging the Schaumburg Assn. of Commerce and Industry and Hoffman Estates Chamber of Commerce could become reality by the end of the year, representatives of both groups said this week.

A report of the recent survey conducted by the Schaumburg group will be presented to the membership at an 8 a.m. breakfast meeting Thursday at Motorola Inc., said Russell Larson, president.

Larson said 40 members "voted overwhelmingly in favor of merger," adding that three representatives have been appointed to work with Hoffman Estates in a 60-day study of merger implementation.

Arthur Kelter, president of the Hoffman Estates Chamber said Wednesday that "100 per cent" support for further study of the merger was reported by his members as the result of an identical survey.

"We are prepared to work with their committee," Kelter said, noting that "the mechanics" will be hammered out later.

He said the Hoffman Chamber has some 40 to 50 members.

WHILE NO timetable has been established, Kelter said he expects "all the details will be worked out by the end of the year."

Discussions surrounding possible Chamber merger have taken place since 1971 with debate usually revolving around advantages to be gained in affiliation.

Negotiations, however, appeared to break down late last year when, after several joint meetings, Larson said his group never intended to merge with the Hoffman Estates Chamber, but had invited members of the other organization to join Schaumburg.

Health, youth group laws being revised

Ordinance revisions to increase the membership on the Hoffman Estates Board of Health and defining terms of office on the village youth commission are being drafted.

The changes would provide for four two-year terms and three one-year terms on the board of health and would increase the board's membership from five to seven. Other revisions would create five two-year terms and four one-year terms on the youth commission. The commission would still keep its nine-member composition.

Stronger requirements in the village's erosion, sedimentation and stormwater retention ordinances also are being drafted. The requirements would apply to developers building in the village.

The ordinance revisions are expected to be ready for board action July 7.

Model home looted of furnishings

Schaumburg police are investigating a burglary in which furnishings worth $500 were stolen Monday from a model home at the Nantucket Cove development, Roselle and Wiso roads.

Taken was a coffee machine, a vacuum cleaner, two lamps, two end tables and a bedspread. Entry was gained by prying open the front door, police said.

Stone crafts at library

An exhibit of stone craft called "Pebble People" will be presented at the Schaumburg Township Public Library, 32 W. Library Ln. from 11 a.m. to noon Thursday.

Cathryn Werner will exhibit samples of the stone craft and will also offer instruction. A limited number of Mexican beach pebbles will be offered for sale.

The program is free and the public is invited to attend.

Curtains need washing often

Dear Dorothy: It must be that air pollution is getting worse. Even though I wash my kitchen curtains with the same amount of detergent I use on other white things, they no longer come out white. Have any others had the same problem? — Glenda Snider

You bet! There's never been as much mail on this question as in recent months. The fact is that curtains have to be washed much more regularly than most people do. Whether it's worse now than before, I don't know, but we certainly live in an atmosphere filled with airborne oil, dust and high humidity. Not only do curtains need regular washing (or cleaning, as the case may be) but over so carefully and never with other colors. It's smart to soak them in either a regular detergent solution or a per-oxygen bleach, then since and start all over again. Yes, most curtains today can be bleached in a mild solution unless the instructions state specifically not to use bleach.

Dear Dorothy: This little reminder might help those who store patent leather bags. I put my bag on a shelf with the brass handles resting on the patent. When I took it down, there was a ridge on the bag and a strange stain — the shape of the handle. Rubbed the bag with a cloth dipped in household ammonia. It came off after two tries. From now on, the handles are not going to rest on the body of the purse. — Jessie Handelman

Dear Dorothy: I have a simple solution for keeping cookies soft. Put them in a container, cover with a piece of aluminum foil on which you put a large slice of unpeeled apple. Then close the container. The moisture of the apple goes into the cookies in a couple of days and keeps them soft. After a week, renew the piece of dried-out apple. All dentures will be saved! — Li Altschuler.

Clothes for kids

Design, construction and ease of laundering are as important as price in children's clothing, says the consumer education department of Cornell University here.

It advises looking for elastic waistbands, and wide seams or large hems that can be let out as the child grows. Choose clothing a child can put on easily without help, preferably with large snaps or zippers instead of buttons or hooks and eyes. (UPI)

Consumer complaint center opening here

The Governor's Consumer Advocate Office has announced it is opening a complaint center in the Elk Grove Village Public Library, 101 Kennedy Blvd.

Complaint forms and consumer information material will be available at the main desk. All complaints will still be handled by the Chicago office, however, according to Estelle Langendorf, a member of the Consumer Advocate's staff.

The Office of the Consumer Advocate was created by Gov. Walker in 1973 after the General Assembly killed a bill to create a Consumer Protection Agency.

The Consumer Advocate's Office has no authority to take legal action on behalf of consumers, but instead has focused on preparing and lobbying legislation to correct consumer abuses. It also acts as a bargaining and pressuring agent in settling consumer disputes.

Under the direction of Celia Maloney, Gov. Walker's appointee as Consumer Advocate, the office introduced a package of more than 20 consumer bills in Springfield this year. At least a dozen of the bills have passed one house and are still alive in the other.

CORRECTION? I relayed on May 29 a report from United Press International that the new government seal of approval on cans of tuna was sought by the tuna industry after Consumers Union had reported finding minute amounts of filth in 13 brands of tuna.

The report also said that the National Marine Fisheries Service, which issues the seals, does not inspect for filth.

I have since been contacted by a public relations officer for Ralston-Purina in San Francisco, packers of Chicken-of-the-Sea tuna, who declared that the UPI report, and consequently the information printed here, was wrong.

The man, who asked that his name not be used, said first of all, negotiations between the tuna industry and fisheries to provide this inspection had been underway long before the Consumers Union report was published.

Secondly, he said the statement that Fisheries does not inspect for filth was totally incorrect.

I checked out those complaints and found that:

- Negotiations between Ralston-Purina and Fisheries were initiated in December 1974, according to Gene Cope of Fisheries. The Consumers Union article appeared in November 1974. According to Cope, the talks were initiated in response to the CU article.
- Fisheries does, indeed, inspect for filth, contrary to the UPI report.
- Consumers Union did, indeed,

Cherylann Robottom a bride

A pink and white color scheme surrounded Cherylann Robottom of Hoffman Estates as she became the bride of Martin D. Pribula of Schaumburg.

Married May 31 in a 4 p.m. ceremony in Prince of Peace Lutheran Church, Hoffman Estates, the bride carried a bouquet of pink and red roses with baby's breath, adding accent to her white sate peau gown which was trimmed with appliques of Venise lace. Her fingertip mantilla veil was edged in matching lace.

Cherylann's attendants wore white dotted swiss dresses appliqued in pink flowers, with pink jackets to match. They carried white umbrella baskets filled with pink and white carnations and baby's breath.

THE BRIDE, daughter of the Richard K. Robottoms, chose Donna Vornbrack, Hoffman Estates, as maid of honor. Her sister-in-law, Marjory Robottom, Jackson, Mich., along with Liz Burton and Debbie Krick, Hoffman Estates, and Cathy Fournier, Schaumburg, served as bridesmaids, and Carrah Lapakas, 2, of Troy, Mich., cousin of the bride, was flower girl.

Martin is the son of the Emil Pribulas. With him at the altar were Robert Fox of Bartlett as best man and the couple's brothers, Lenny Pribula and Richard Robottom II, Edgar Willie, Streamwood, and Robert Moses, Schaumburg, as groomsmen.

A reception followed at Allegretti's in Chicago, the couple then honeymooned at Niagara Falls and are living in Schaumburg.

Both graduated from Conant High School, Cherylann in '74 and Martin in '70. She attended Harper College and works for Dr. Klemens in Rolling Meadows. Martin, a graduate of Washburn Trade School, Chicago, is a carpenter working for the local school Dist. 211.

supply all its tuna data to FDA, which sent two officials to spend two days at CU laboratories, according to Consumer Reports.

The Ralston-Purina man also claimed that the tolerance level for filth in tuna as established by Fisheries is zero. Cope was unable to confirm this.

After a reception for 225 guests at Richard's Ballroom, Berwyn, the newlyweds honeymooned on the east coast and in the Caribbean.

Towns play 'Who's on first?' over potholes in road

by JOE SWICKARD
Charles Jacobs is getting a first-hand lesson on why taxpayers don't get a chance to turn gray. They tear out their hair in frustration first.

Jacobs, 2407 Oak Ln., Rolling Meadows, was driving along Old Wilke Road, between Algonquin and Central roads, when he had to swerve to the side of the road to avoid an accident. His car went through a deep, jagged-edged pothole that caused the right front tire to blow out. The next day the right rear tire went flat, apparently as a result of the impact.

Potholes deep enough to ruin two tires do not belong on the edge of the pavement, Jacobs figured, and some governmental body should help him replace those tires.

"I WENT TO the county and they told me they had given Old Wilke Road to Rolling Meadows. So I went to Rolling Meadows and they asked me which side of the road it happened on," he said.

The mishap was on the east side and Rolling Meadows officials said that side belonged to Arlington Heights. But Arlington Heights officials said east side or west side, Old Wilke Road is Rolling Meadows' responsibility.

"It has to belong to somebody," Jacobs said. "They each said it belongs to the other one."

He said he feared he was becoming tangled in a classic run-around in trying to collect for his two tires.

JAMES WATSON, Rolling Meadows city manager told The Herald that his city and Arlington Heights have "divided responsibility" for maintaining the roadway because it is the boundary between the two towns.

The west side of the road is in his city and crews stop at the center line when it comes to repairs and patches, Watson said.

Not so, said L. A. Hanson, Arlington Heights village manager.

"That road is Rolling Meadows' responsibility. We've got a copy of a signed agreement between them and the county . . . It was all signed and delivered," Hanson said.

The agreement, dated May 7, 1973, signed by the Rolling Meadows City Council and the Cook County Board of Commissioners, reaffirms that Old Wilke Road is a Rolling Meadows street upon completion of New Wilke Road.

LEWIS R. Quinlan, of the county highway department, said Old Wilke Road belongs to Rolling Meadows and has letters from attorneys and Rolling Meadows City Council resolutions dating back to 1969 to cement the deal.

"It calls for Rolling Meadows to assume maintenance upon completion of New Wilke Road," Quinlan said. The city took responsibility from the county in 1972, he said.

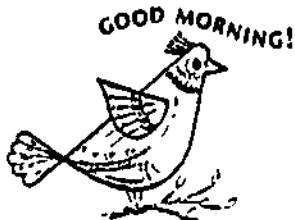

Hanson said village crews do not perform maintenance on Old Wilke

Road in that stretch between Central and Algonquin roads because the road belongs to Rolling Meadows.

James Muldowney, Rolling Meadows engineer, said his men don't cross the center line because that would be outside the city.

No matter who should be doing the work, an inspection of the road shows none is being done. The pothole that ripped Jacobs' tires is not the only one. The edge of the road is crumbling in places with chunks of broken asphalt littering the shoulder.

"You hear about things like this happening," Jacobs said. "But till it happens to you, you don't know. It makes you wonder about the kinds of government we have."

Council votes 8-2

City OKs zoning for Chez Paul

A zoning change to allow a Chez Paul Restaurant at Hicks and Euclid roads was granted by the Rolling Meadows City Council, overriding the wishes of the two aldermen representing that ward.

Ald. Merrill Wuerch, 1st, objected strongly to the rezoning. He did not oppose the restaurant, but sought denial because there is no guarantee it will be built or that remaining land on the site will not be used for another purpose, he said.

Ald. Raymond H. Neukranz, 1st, joined in voting against the zoning change, although Neukranz did not voice his reasons. The other eight aldermen voted for it.

TUESDAY WUERCH said the city has granted zoning changes for other planned projects that have not been built. He referred to a site zoned commercially for a nursing home that was not built.

"We don't know to this day what will be built there," said Wuerch. He noted the restaurant will occupy only about half the proposed site, which totals slightly less than three acres.

Commercial zoning would permit construction of anything from animal pounds to laundries, auto sales and repair services and greenhouses, he said.

Wuerch suggested the council leave the site zoned for manufacturing, but allow a special use variation for the restaurant on part of it.

BUT CARL Hundreiser, architect and spokesman for project planners, said Wuerch's fears were misplaced. Soil conditions on the site, with the exception of the particular location of the restaurant building, are so poor they are unsuitable for anything except a parking lot, he said.

He also said one section of the site rises in a V-shape to the level of Ill. Rte. 53, which also detracts from use.

Hundreiser said he could provide no guarantees, until the zoning was approved. Financial institutions will not commit themselves to mortgages without zoning, he said.

The council considered granting the zoning change with a construction start deadline, which Hundreiser agreed to. But City Atty. Donald M. Rose said that would constitute contract zoning, which is not proper although sometimes practiced in other municipalities.

Would dancing OK open door to go-go girls?

Rolling Meadows, beware. It may begin as a simple fox trot or two-step, but it could lead to the "bump."

Still, it's a risk that has to be taken, City Atty. Donald Rose says, if the city decides to permit social dancing in restaurants with late-hour liquor licenses.

Under current ordinances, dancing is not allowed in establishments holding full liquor licenses. But when the city council discussed Tuesday changing the policy, Ald. Stephen J. Eberhard, 3rd, questioned if allowing some to dance would open the door to visiting go-go girls.

"Once you open the door a little bit, if there are some devious people in the city, they might stretch the law," Rose said. Such persons might be tempted to "bend the rules and see how far they can be pushed," he said. But it's a risk the city has to take if it wants to "open the door," he said.

But Mayor Roland J. Meyer said the city may have one tool on its side to discourage "devious people." Liquor licenses must be renewed each year and may be revoked during the year for failure to comply with the city's liquor codes.

"I'm sure the holders of this type license will show discretion," he said.

CLARENCE RUDOLPH, 32, of 3009 Swallow Ln., Rolling Meadows, is helped onto a stretcher by paramedics after a two-car accident

Wednesday, at Kirchhoff Road and Meadow Drive, Rolling Meadows. Rudolph and Kim Mainson, 20, of Des Plaines, were released from Northwest Community Hospital.

Panel urges zone change for trash-treating plant

A special Rolling Meadows Zoning Commission recommended granting permission for garbage treatment operations on a city owned site in a hearing Wednesday night.

The recommendation will be presented to the city council July 8. The commission urged granting a special use, rather than changing the city's manufacturing zone code, to limit such operations to the 6.7-acre site near Rohlwing Road and Northwest Highway.

Although the Village of Palatine and some of its residents oppose garbage treatment at that location, no one attended the hearing to argue against the zoning change.

Rolling Meadows Mayor Roland J. Meyer said the zoning provision was sought for several reasons, including but not limited to a potential plant to convert garbage to methane gas.

MEYER SAID he feels "chances are slim" that the bio-gas plant designed by the Institute of Gas Technology will be built in Rolling Meadows. He noted, however, the institute may run into problems trying to build a plant on property it owns in Chicago.

The institute unsuccessfully bid for a federal contract to build the experimental plant, listing its Chicago property as its primary location and the city owned site in Rolling Meadows as a secondary choice. Spokesmen have said they may obtain funding for a plant from gas industry sources.

If the institute gets funding, and tries to build the plant in Chicago, it will have to pay for garbage used in the system. But Rolling Meadows could give the institute the garbage, and save $70,000 to $80,000 per year by eliminating costs of trucking it to a landfill, Meyer said.

EVEN IF the plant does not come to Rolling Meadows, the city will benefit from the zoning change said Meyer.

The city's trash compactor could be moved to the more central location, which has less traffic than the present compactor site near Golf Rd. and Apollo Avenue. Vehicles could be stored at the Northwest Highway location overnight or during off seasons, instead of taking needed space at the public works facility on Central Road.

Meyer also noted the northern industrial property has rights to hook into a rail spur. If the city should ever be unable to use landfills, it could ship out refuse by rail, he said.

'Victims of legal quarrel'

Civic units win OK for fund raisers

Rolling Meadows civic groups won permission from the city council this week to proceed with fund raising events that last week were victims of an aldermanic legal quarrel.

The organizations also received two apologies from Mayor Roland J. Meyer, who charged that five aldermen ignored standard council procedure in such disputes. The aldermen he rebuked voted negatively on every issue presented to the council last week, charging that the meeting was convened illegally and a positive vote on any question would indicate they supported illegal action. The same five aldermen this week voted approval for the civic functions.

"Four of the five have served the city a total of almost 40 years," said

Meyer, and should be aware, the city has only one city attorney. "The only way to overrule his opinion is by action of the Circuit Court," Meyer said.

City Atty. Donald Rose's indication, related by Meyer in Rose's absence, that the meeting was legal, "should have been the signal that business should have been conducted last week," said Meyer.

THE MAYOR TWICE apologized to the public for its being "inconvenienced by the negative attitude of part of this council."

The Rev. William Herman of Community Church of Rolling Meadows demanded an explanation from the five aldermen. Ald. Fredrick E. Jacobson, 5th, speaking for the block, repeated his earlier contention that last week's meeting was illegal.

The Men of the Yoke of Community Church was granted permission to hold their yearly Corn Fest Aug. 2, and fees for the event were waived. The council also reversed last week's vote on a request by Rolling Meadows Hockey Club for reimbursement of liquor license fees paid for a booth run during the 20th Anniversary celebration. The club will receive the $50 refund.

The Fourth of July celebration will be held, with all fees except those for a beer booth waived. The council last week denied permits for numerous civic groups participating.

Permission was also granted for the Rolling Meadows Jaycees carnival, which starts today. The carnival will help pay for Fourth of July fireworks.

City's tornado-warning system on fritz

Rolling Meadows is caught in the midst of the tornado season with a malfunctioning tornado-alarm system.

During the tornado that ripped three homes and destroyed a garage near Flicker Lane and Sigwalt Street June 17, only one of the city's three tornado-warning sirens sounded, said City Mgr. James Watson. Repair work is under way, he said.

Ald. Merrill A. Wuerch, 1st, Civil Defense director, said the alarms should be functioning properly within a few weeks. But Mayor Roland J. Meyer suggested that for the interim, police department personnel should be trained to manually activate the alarms if the need for them arises again.

The alarm system has not functioned properly since the city purchased it in December 1970. It was bought under a federal program that would have paid half the cost, but the city has been unable to collect the $15,000 federal share because the alarms have not sounded loud enough to meet federal decibel standards.

April deadline for carnival permits set

Community groups wishing to schedule carnivals in Rolling Meadows after this summer will be required to apply for permits by the second Thursday in April.

The city council approved the annual deadline this week to avoid receiving last-minute applications as it has this summer and in past years. Council members noted most groups begin planning carnivals a year in advance, and must contract with an operator before April or are unable to make arrangements. The deadline should impose no hardship, they said.

Scanlan on police, fire unit

Former Rolling Meadows Ald. Thomas J. Scanlan, who represented the 1st Ward until April's election, was appointed this week to a vacancy on the city's fire and police commission. Scanlan will complete the unexpired term of Rudolf Bialek, who resigned when he was appointed city welfare officer. Scanlan's term expires in 1978.

The council also approved reappointments of City Atty. Donald M. Rose, Public Works Supt. John Hennessey and Health Officer John Schultz, all to terms expiring in 1979.

3 banks OK'd for city funds

Three financial institutions were added to the list of banks approved for deposits of city funds. The new depositories are Plum Grove Bank and St. Paul Federal Savings and Loan, both in Rolling Meadows, and Continental Bank of Chicago.

Already approved were Bank of Rolling Meadows and three Chicago institutions.

Steam cleaner to be bought

Motor pool mechanics in the city's public works garage soon will have a steam cleaner to assist them. The council approved a $1,405 contract with Climax Equipment Co. for the high-pressure washer. The firm was the lowest of three bidders meeting specifications, although a lower bidder did not conform to city standards.

$150,000 OK'd for streets

The council approved $150,000 for a street-maintenance program to begin in late July or early August. Already approved was a $40,000 allocation. The $190,000 program is higher than had been expected last week, when City Engineer James Muldowney said the new allocation should be cut from a proposed $207,000 to $130,000. The program is to resurface sections of streets and realign curbs and gutters to improve drainage.

Repair reports asked

The council directed the public works department to investigate and report on paving, sidewalk repair and weed-mowing requests from two residents.

David White, 4606 Sycamore Ln., reminded the council of a plan to pave a narrow strip along a fence on the west side of Sycamore. The paving is to provide visitor parking for residents where street parking is not available. White also asked the city to cut weeds at the intersection of Magnolia and Algonquin Road, a state parkway.

A Meadow Drive resident noted deteriorating sidewalk in the area near Rolling Meadows Shopping Center, and asked for repairs.

New sign law OK'd by council

A new sign ordinance has been adopted in Rolling Meadows which officials hope will help motorists.

Ald. Thomas J. Waldron, 3rd, urged adoption of the ordinance, although he said some portions may be controversial.

One provision applies to gas-station signs advertising the price of fuel. Service-station owners no longer will be allowed to post signs showing a per-gallon price plus tax, an amount which does not correspond with the per-gallon price shown on pumps. The pump price includes tax, and is a few cents higher than the amount shown on the signs.

"Gas stations will be required to put the pump price (on the signs). There will be no more 'price plus tax.'"

It must be the full price," Waldron said.

The ordinance also requires homeowners to post their street name and house number on their homes. That provision was sought by the fire department as a time-saving assistance.

"The ordinance takes effect July 4. 'I don't know if we'll get any static on it or not,'" Waldron said. A council subcommittee, city employees and volunteer workers devoted extensive research and study to prepare it, he said.

Federal funds held up

Hicks Rd. project faces delay — again

The $3.2 million Hicks Road project will not start this summer because of unexpected delays in federal approval of the project.

The Illinois Dept. of Transportation was notified in April that the Hicks Road project was approved by the U.S. Dept. of Transportation, said James Pitts, programming manager. However, the final letter of approval from the U.S. Dept. of Transportation has not been received and bids cannot be let without it.

Construction on the Hicks Road improvement project between Baldwin and Rand roads was expected to start in July but has been delayed until autumn or later. The next bid letting for state highway projects is Sept. 23, and to meet that date, federal approval must be received by mid-July, Pitts said.

"We still have a good chance of getting started this year if we get approval," Pitts said, adding that the road engineering is completed.

VILLAGE PRES. Wendell E. Jones said the village would ask the state to make temporary repairs before potholes cause damage.

"If they send the money, we will even fix the road," Jones said.

State crews started the patching Wednesday after the village notified state officials of the potholes.

The project has been delayed more than a year because of problems in getting federal approval of an environmental-impact statement. The statement is required because of the proposed realignment of Salt Creek on forest preserve district property.

Proposed improvements include the widening of Hicks Road from two to four lanes between Baldwin and Rand roads, installation of 16-foot median, curbs and gutters, a bridge across the tributary and left-turn bays.

THE PROJECT is being funded under the Federal Aid Urban System with the federal government paying 70 per cent and the state 30 per cent.

The work is part of a three-phase plan for improvements on Hicks Road. Plans call for the widening of more than a six-mile stretch of Hicks from Euclid Avenue in Rolling Meadows to Rand.

Jones gets GOP support in project-review clash

Palatine Village Pres. Wendell E. Jones has the support of Republican trustees in his recent clash with GOP Trustee Bryan P. Coughlin Jr. about review plans for the Plum Grove Hills development.

Coughlin resigned as chairman of the planning, building and zoning committee Monday rather than reschedule the July 21 development review, as Jones, also a Republican suggested. The four GOP trustees Monday supported the idea of an earlier review on the 365-acre development near Harper College. Jones has scheduled the review for July 9.

"The deliberation factor will be the same. The question is the duration factor," Trustee Richard W. Fonte said Wednesday. "It is generally the case that when the village has a very large development like Sellergren or Isenstein, it is handled in a concentrated fashion so we can work on them and get them out of the way. This (the earlier review) is nothing unusual."

TRUSTEE Philip E. Stern Wednesday said he favored getting the matter before the board in "a timely fashion." He indicated it was difficult to assimilate information when no minutes are kept if three or four weeks is allowed to lapse between reviews.

Stern and Fonte said they favored the committee system because it gave time for more deliberation on major projects. Stern said he felt the workload of the committees should be reviewed and the work distributed more evenly between committees.

Coughlin claimed he was the first Republican trustee to break with the "team spirit" established two years ago. Stern and Fonte said they did not consider Coughlin's action a serious break with the Republicans.

Cottony scale real culprit

Palatine residents are killing the wrong bug in their fight to save silver maple trees infested with cottony maple scale.

Some residents are spraying the larvae of ladybugs, the natural enemy of the parasite, instead of the scale itself, Lloyd Wright, Palatine forester, said.

The cottony maple scale resembles a small brown speck when it crawls out of a white sack on the underside of a branch. The white sacks that hold the eggs of the scale are stationary and the scale itself is never white, Wright explained. Ladybug larvae can be distinguished from the scale because it is white and not stationary.

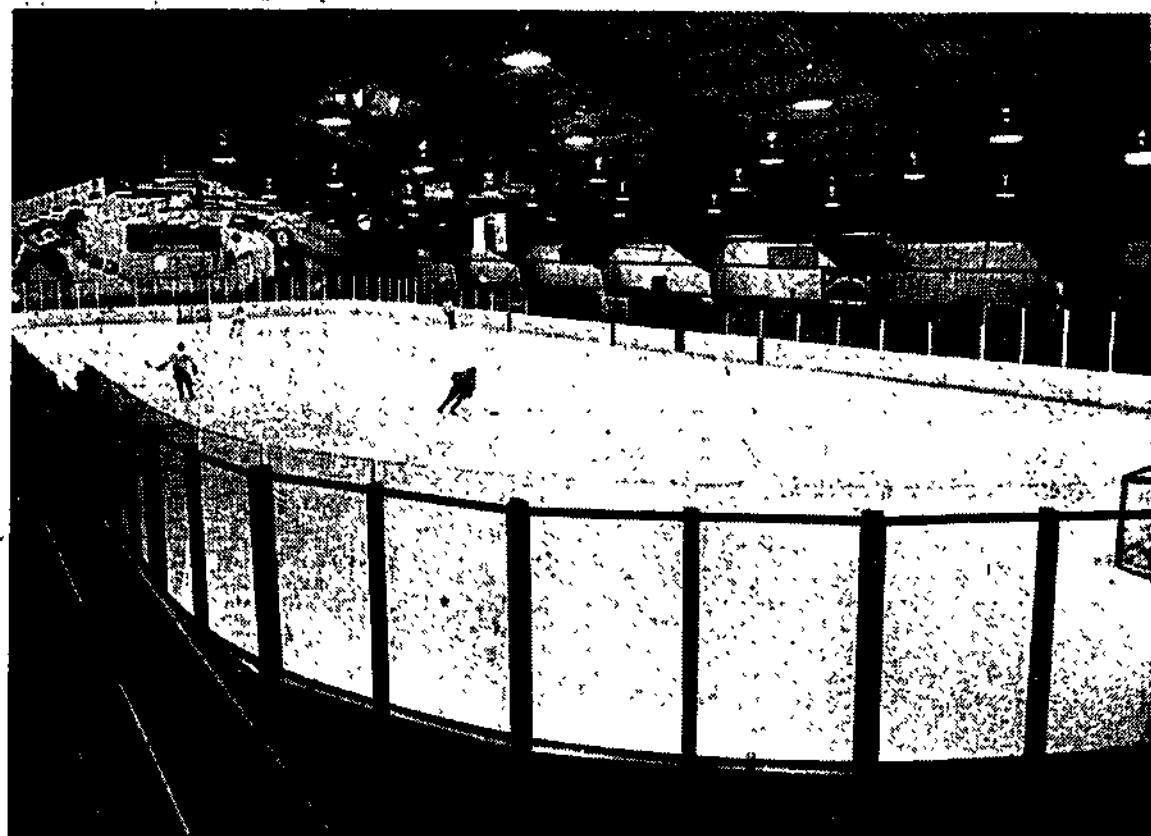

Wright suggests that residents wait until the second week of July to spray for cottony maple scale because by then most of the eggs have hatched.

The ladybugs are not harmful and should be left to feed on the scale and other insects. The ladybugs are left from previous years when the village purchased up to 500,000 ladybugs to kill the scale.

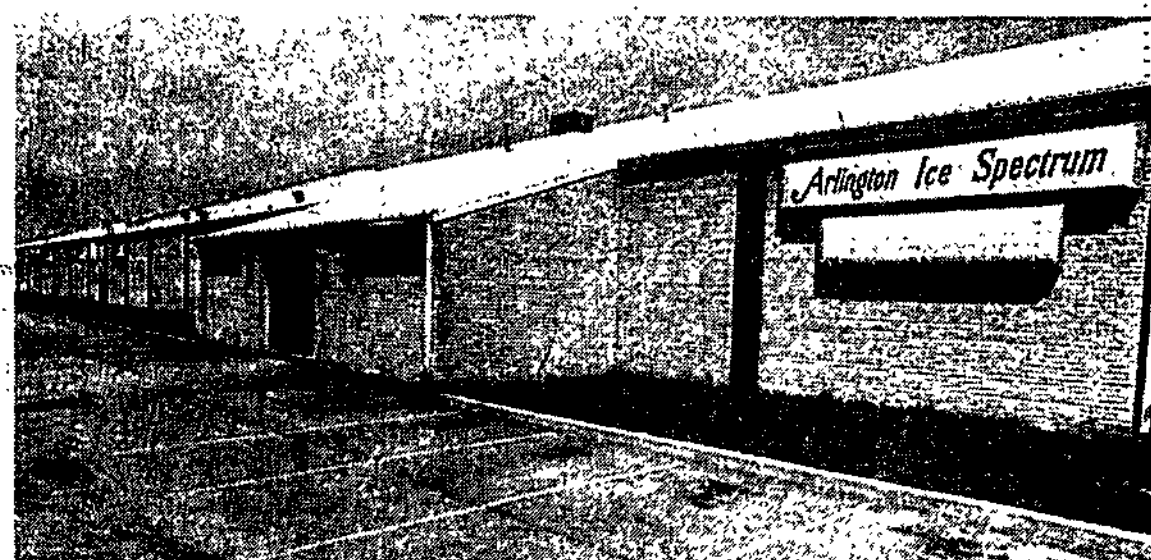

This year the village will be spraying silver maple trees on the parkways of the Winston Park subdivision with Malathion to fight the cottony maple scale. The spraying will start in mid-July. Persons with allergies should contact the health department at 358-7500.

THE ARLINGTON ICE SPECTRUM, 647 Consumer Ave., Palatine, will be owned and operated by the Palatine Park District if residents approve a $695,000 general obligation bond issue Saturday. The bond money also will be used to renovate the rink and provide initial operating funds.

Parks call rink a bargain, but voters hold the answer

by DIANE MERMIGAS

A news analysis

The Palatine Park District is proposing what park officials view as a "bargain" purchase of an indoor ice rink in Saturday's referendum. It is expected to be another link in the parks long chain of development.

The $695,000 general-obligation bond issue offers park district residents the three-year-old Arlington Ice Spectrum, 647 Consumers Ave., Palatine, for a purchase price of $558,000. The bond issue also includes $137,000 for building improvements and equipment repairs. The facility has been appraised at nearly $1 million, park officials said.

The package will cost a park district resident with a house assessed at $10,000 about $3 each year until the 20-year bonds are paid off. The general-obligation bond tax rate will be 3 cents per $100 assessed valuation.

ALL PROPERTY owners will pay taxes to retire the general-obligation bonds even if they do not use the facility. The park board decided not to finance the ice rink with revenue bonds, which would have been retired with user fees, because "figures in-

C&NW train kills Palatine boy, 10

A 10-year-old Palatine boy was killed Wednesday night after he was struck by a Chicago and North Western Ry. passenger train near Washington and Oak streets in Palatine.

Police identified the victim as Patrick McCarthy, son of John McCarthy, 301 N. Fremont St.

Police said the boy apparently was watching the train from a dirt path about 8:25 p.m. when he was struck.

2 Palatine policemen win state group's top award

JACK MCGREGOR

Pair wins honors for saving 5 members of family from fire

by STIRLING MORITA

Wednesday was the first night Palatine policemen Ralph Winkelhake and Jack McGregor ever stepped into an Illinois Police Assn. meeting, and when they did, they got a rousing, standing ovation.

The two received what the IPA considers the policemen's "Congressional Medal of Honor" for saving five members of the Bernard O'Neill family in a house fire last October.

It was the first time that Northwest suburban policemen ever received the IPA award for valor. Only 14 other policemen in the state of Illinois have won the award in the three-year history of the award.

RON NELSON, chairman of the North Shore division of the IPA, said it was a very special recognition for "above and beyond the call of duty."

The fire was Oct. 15, 1974, at 1432 Lake Louise Dr. about 3 a.m. when the two officers responded quickly to a report of smoke coming from the home. McGregor helped two of the O'Neill sons from a roof.

Sgt. Winkelhake and Patrolman McGregor kicked in the front door and saved the O'Neill parents who had collapsed near the door. The policemen were unable to enter the house with the intense heat and smoke to save 7-year-old Kathleen who died of smoke inhalation.

Winkelhake said he and McGregor had not heard they were eligible for the award until the IPA notified them. McGregor received the newly-instituted Mayor's award, and Winkelhake the second departmental highest commendation.

WINKELHAKE, a 7½-year veteran of the force, and McGregor, a 3-year member, acknowledged they would never have accomplished their feats of heroism without help from the alert radio dispatcher.

The sergeant modestly said in response to a question, "What can you say?"

Palatine Police Chief Jerry Bratcher said, "They really did a heckuva job. It's an honor for the department, and a special honor for the two guys."

"It's an opportunity for a police department to make a positive contribution like life-saving."

dicated that the ice rink could not generate sufficient revenue to pay off the bonds," said Fred Hall park district director.

Hall estimated the ice rink will generate at least $170,000 each year to pay for its own operation and maintenance after the initial purchase and improvements are paid for with the general-obligation bond issue.

The park board expects hockey teams and rentals to generate "a substantial amount of the facility's revenues," Hall said.

"We will adjust our schedule to whatever the demand is, but we want to make sure there is just as much prime time for hockey teams each day as there is for residents who just want to come and skate," he said.

Hall has worked out a tentative schedule for hockey, instructional and recreational skating times based on what other area park district-owned ice rinks have done.

At least 10 hours of prime time, after 4 p.m., will be reserved weekly for public recreational skating. The week-day fee for each two-hour session will be $1 for students and $1.50 for adults, with additional 50-cent charge on the weekends. Family season passes, for $40, also will be available to park district residents, Hall said.

ABOUT 20 HOURS each week will be programmed for skating instruction at various levels with fees ranging from $2 per class session for beginners to $5 per class session for advanced skaters.

An estimated 30 hours each week will be available to the Palatine Amateur Hockey Assn. for about $55 per hour. Ice time also will be available to other area hockey leagues, civic organizations and clubs, Hall said.

The ice rink will be open from September to June each year and will close during July and August because "revenues would not be enough to offset operating expenses during the summer months," Hall said.

Carl Davis, co-owner of the Arlington Ice Spectrum, said he and his partner have been losing at least $30,000 each year on the facility.

Davis, a local developer, and James B. Grant, chairman of Austin Federal Savings and Loan Assn., own the spectrum under the partnership name of Spectre-Sports.

Davis said they are "forced to sell the rink" because a law prohibits Grant from financing any of Davis' building projects because they are partners.

Hall assures that the ice rink would be "self sustaining" if it were operated by the park district "because we would more easily draw the public to the facility with programs and special events," he said.

DAVIS SAID the ice spectrum will be closed this year "indefinitely" unless it can be sold. Park officials have said the spectrum "is a recreational asset to the community that should be used by the general public."

The park board believes it is better to have a year-round, indoor ice rink that will eventually operate on its own revenues than to have an outdoor rink that will be dependent upon weather conditions, Hall said.

The park district has the option of purchasing the indoor ice rink, upon voter approval, or construction of an outdoor ice rink at a new park site at Home Street and Oak Avenue in Palatine Township.

Construction of and equipment for the outdoor ice rink would cost about $350,000 and residents would only be able to use the rink four months out of the year, weather permitting, Hall said.

The new five-acre park site, scheduled for completion next summer, is a result of the park district's merger with the Palatine Rural Park District in January. Rural park district funds, formerly paid by unincorporated township residents, will be used to construct the $420,000 project that also includes a swimming pool, bathhouse and four lighted tennis courts.

THE MERGER was another large link in the district's chain of development that increased the district's population to about 43,000 and its assessed valuation to about $175 million.

Before the merger, the park district completed a $1 million recreational complex and swimming pool at Birchwood Park, 435 W. Illinois Ave. The complex was part of a $1.4 million referendum in 1972 that also included the development of eight parks, a bicycle trail, a maintenance garage and lighting for the district's tennis courts.

The district now has an 18-hole golf course financed through a $200,000 general-obligation and a $500,000 revenue-bond issue in 1965, 19 parks, 4 swimming pools, 13 tennis courts and 3 recreational buildings.

The district will have its own indoor ice rink if more than half of the park district residents voting Saturday approve the referendum.

Panel urges zone change for trash-treating plant

A special Rolling Meadows Zoning Commission recommended granting permission for garbage treatment operations on a city owned site in a hearing Wednesday night.

The recommendation will be presented to the city council July 8. The commission urged granting a special use, rather than changing the city's manufacturing zone code, to limit such operations to the 6.7-acre site near Rohlwing Road and Northwest Highway.

Although the Village of Palatine and some of its residents oppose garbage treatment at that location, no one attended the hearing to argue against the zoning change.

Rolling Meadows Mayor Roland J. Meyer said the zoning provision was sought for several reasons, including but not limited to a potential plant to convert garbage to methane gas.

MEYER SAID he feels "chances are slim" that the bio-gas plant designed by the Institute of Gas Technology will be built in Rolling Meadows. He noted, however, the institute may run into problems trying to build a plant on property it owns in Chicago.

The institute unsuccessfully bid for a federal contract to build the experimental plant, listing its Chicago property as its primary location and the city owned site in Rolling Meadows as a secondary choice. Spokesmen have said they may obtain funding for a plant from gas industry sources.

If the institute gets funding, and tries to build the plant in Chicago, it will have to pay for garbage used in the system. But Rolling Meadows could give the institute the garbage, and save $70,000 to $80,000 per year by eliminating costs of trucking it to a landfill, Meyer said.

Question # 10
If my home is flooded does my homeowners policy cover it?
A. Flood is specifically excluded on homeowners policies. The way to cover flood is through the National Flood Insurance Program which is a governmental flood insurance program. If you desire the coverage, or have any questions, give me a call.

Faulty retention basins may be flood cause here

by LYNN ASINOF

Arlington Heights officials will investigate charges that their storm water retention facilities in the southeast part of the village are not functioning properly, and cause serious flooding in southwest Mount Prospect.

David L. Creamer, Mount Prospect public works director, called for the investigation saying retention basins in the area are not storing water as they should during heavy rains.

"I rarely see water in those retention basins," Creamer said of the area that serves apartment buildings and on park property in the Forest View High School area. "I don't know what the problem is, but the intake lines are the same size as the output lines."

Creamer said that without a restriction in the pipes, the water just rushes through the basin into Mount Prospect sewers in the Mount Shire area. "It is so critical that it is blowing the covers off the manholes in the area," he said. THOMAS THORNTON of the Arlington Heights Park District admitted the basin at the Forest View Tennis Club, on Falcon Drive, does empty quickly after a heavy storm, but said the basin was approved by the Metropolitan Sanitary District.

Arlington Heights officials said they would look into the matter, saying they had been unaware of the problem prior to Creamer's comments at a special meeting Tuesday called to discuss boundaries.

Creamer said the problem may extend beyond the retention basins. He said Arlington Heights may have extended the sewer that empties into Mount Prospect's sewers, thus bringing more water into the sewer. "We've had a drastic change in the stormwater input," Creamer said.

THERE ARE two ways to handle the problem, Creamer said. "We either have to put another sewer in from that point over to the retention basin, or we're going to have to crack down on the amount of water coming in, and they're going to have to hold back some of their own water," he said.

Mount Prospect already has plans for a new sewer that would run up the western edge of the village and jog over to the Clearwater Park retention basin at Golf and Busse roads. The project is estimated to cost about $200,000, and was originally proposed as part of the village's $2 million flood control improvements program.

Village annex considered by 'islanders'

by LYNN ASINOF

A small group of homeowners living in a 99-acre "island" of unincorporated land surrounded by Mount Prospect will meet with village officials in early July to discuss possible annexation.

Ken Rhead, 803 S. Busse Rd., said he and other property owners in the area are interested in annexation, but concerned about the cost of joining the village.

The meeting is being scheduled in response to a petition signed by the owners of 16 lots in the southern part of the island, which is bordered by Golf and Busse roads, Lounquist Boulevard and runs east of Meyer Avenue.

Rhead said the group is interested in annexation because it would allow the village to take steps to protect the neighborhood from developers who might divide the large half-and-half-acre lots.

THE MATTER arose when Semar Home Builders petitioned for annexation and zoning to build four new homes on two Lounquist Boulevard lots. The village has granted tentative approval of this request, despite the objections of residents who say it will ruin their neighborhood.

Rhead said the residents want a preliminary meeting because they are concerned that the village will force them to make major improvements to the area, changing the character of the neighborhood and costing substantial amounts of money.

Village Mgr. Robert J. Eppley said these fears are unfounded. "We have no plans to throw big loads of expense onto them to supposedly upgrade them to the rest of the town," Eppley said, noting that residents think they will immediately be asked to install sidewalks, curbs, gutters and streetlights.

Eppley said many areas of the village have been annexed in similar fashion and still do not have sidewalks or other such improvements.

The petition does not include residents from the northern part of the island which runs along Busse Road west of the Mount Prospect Park District golf course. Residents in that area, however, are reportedly being canvassed for similar action.

Trustee Edward B. Rhea Jr. said he is confident that the village will be able to create some protection for the area, so that it won't be destroyed by developers.

Panel to study ways to finance pay increases

The finance committee of the Mount Prospect Village Board tonight will begin looking for ways to finance salary increases recently approved for most village employees.

The village needs about $370,000 to cover the raises, which include an 8 per cent increase for village employees and policemen as well as fringe benefits for policemen. Also included is the board's last offer to the wage committee of the fire department, although negotiations with the fire department still are pending.

Trustee Edward B. Rhea Jr. head of the committee, said he expects "that there will be some concrete proposals made" about new sources for village revenue.

Rhea said the committee is also scheduled to discuss Mayor Robert D. Teichert's proposal for creation of a financial planning commission. The commission would conduct an in-depth study of all property in the village to see how much it contributes financially and how much it costs in services.

This information would be used to develop a long range financial plan for the village, which Teichert said is rapidly reaching the limits of its expansion and growth.

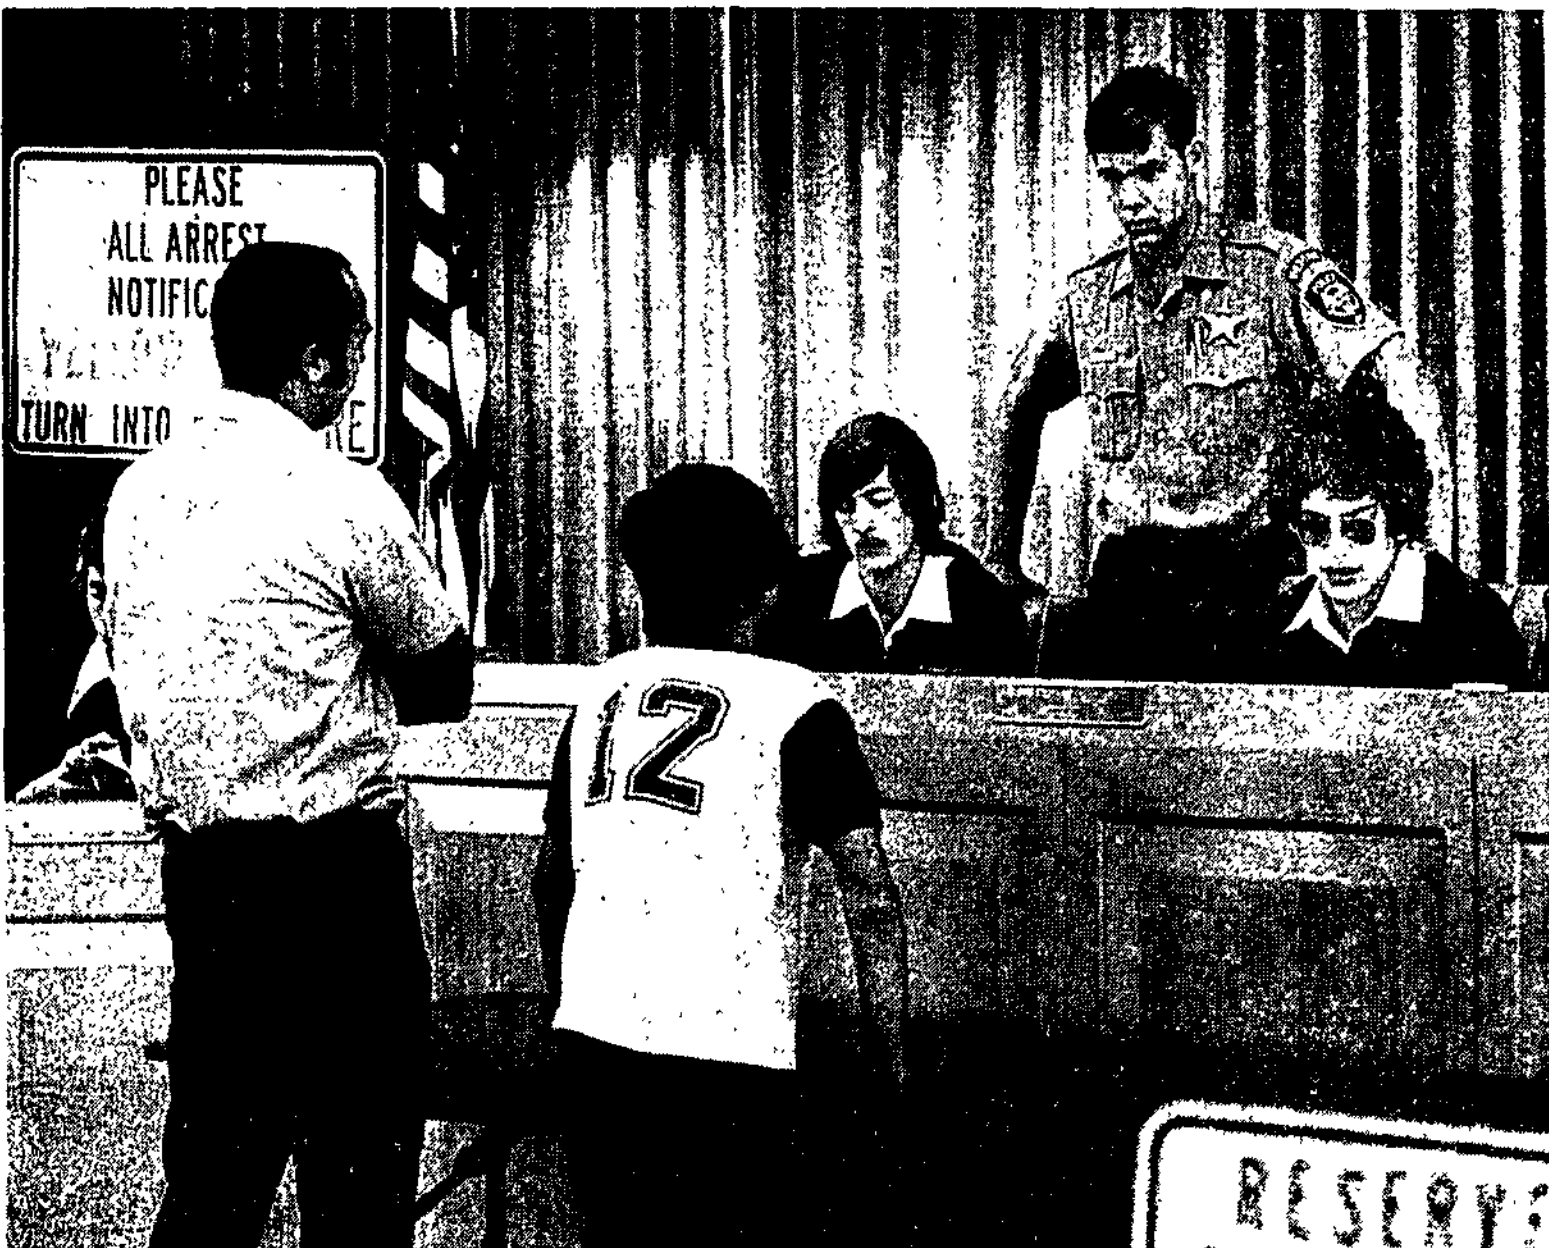

The meeting will begin at 8 p.m. at the Village Hall, 112 E. Northwest Hwy.

Paper drive Saturday

Boy Scout Troop 133 has scheduled a paper drive for Saturday and will pick up papers in the central Mount Prospect area.

Papers will be picked up at the curb in the area surrounded by Mount Prospect Road, Rand Road, Kensington Road, Dale Avenue, Central Road and Northwest Highway. Residents living outside this area can get personal pickup by calling 255-8043 or 255-8083.

Residents also can bring their papers to a container at 400 E. Gregory St. Papers should be in brown bags or tied.

BEFORE THE BENCH. No. 12 is one of 15 cases heard Saturday at the first Mount Prospect Bicycle Court. The boy's father and the judicial panel listen to the youth's version of why he thought he should not have been given a ticket. At the bench are Scott McCamant, first-presiding judge, left; Police Cadet Tom Kopitke; and Mark Vaccarello, presiding judge. Some offenders will be sent to safety school.

15 'defendants' at first session

Bike traffic court 'huge success'

by TOM VON MALDER

The first Bicycle Traffic Court in Mount Prospect is considered a "huge success" by officials, although the effectiveness of the police safety program will not be known for some time.

"The first court was a huge success. It was extremely good," said Patrolman Ernest Dettmar, Officer Friendly. He is in charge of the program.

Fifteen children and their parents attended Saturday's first court session, Dettmar said. The penalties handed out by the court judges — Boy Scout Police Explorer Troop members — ranged from the 200-word safety essay one child must write to attendance at Bicycle Safety School, which will be required of six youths. Another six children must have their bicycles inspected and one child was given a court warning.

The sessions will be on alternate Saturday mornings. Safety rules and maintenance procedures will be stressed during the sessions.

MRS. WILLIAM Kuhn said she believed the bicycle court program was a "good idea." Her nephew, Glen Nelson, 13, of 1107 Robert Dr., had to appear at the first court session because he had been cited for riding his bicycle without his hands on the handlebar.

Mrs. Kuhn said getting the traffic court citations was just laughed at by the neighborhood children. "The 'in thing' was to get a ticket," she said, although she added that Glen was somewhat frightened by his ticket at first. Glen was ordered to go to safety school as a result of his court appearance.

"If they (bicyclists) obey the rules it will be a little easier for them and motorists," Mrs. Kuhn said, explaining her support for the program. "I really wish more parents would cooperate."

DETTMAR said four children did not attend Saturday's court, even though they had been issued citations. The four were given continuances to the July 3 court.

The police department is considering issuing citations to the parents of children who fail to appear in bicycle court.

In addition to Dettmar, Police Cadet Tom Kopitke helps implement the bicycle-safety program. The Boy Scouts who participate in the court sessions are presiding judge Mark Vaccarello, 15, first assistant judge Scott McCamant, 16, second assistant judge Bill Vosburgh, 17, bailiff Glenn Sprengel, 17, and clerk Rick Eggert, 17.

Request to block sewage plant fails

U.S. District Court Judge Thomas R. McMillen denied a motion by Des Plaines Wednesday to block the use of $130.5 million in federal funds for construction of the O'Hare Water Reclamation Plant.

City Corporation Counsel Robert DiLeonardi argued that the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency and the Metropolitan Sanitary District should be prevented from using any of the grant authorized Monday for the plant until after another suit brought by Des Plaines is settled.

"I don't want to see anything done that cannot be recalled by the court later," DiLeonardi said.

HOWEVER, ATTORNEYS for the EPA and MSD argued that the grant authorization and a meeting planned for today by the MSD to accept the grant offer did not constitute any immediate action.

"The government won't be disbursing any funds, and the district will only be acting to advertise for bids for the project," said James B. Murray, an attorney for the MSD.

McMillen denied the injunction request and indicated he did not see a need for immediate action.

The judge also indicated he did not want to do anything that might cause the district to lose the federal funds which represent 75 per cent of the cost of the $182 million plant and a related series of deep tunnels.

THE MSD HAD until June 30 to obtain final approval from the EPA for the project or face the possibility of losing the federal funding for the project this year.

The MSD got the approval, but Des Plaines officials argue the EPA ignored a number of details regarding the environmental impact the plant will have on nearby residential areas in an effort to meet the deadline.

The plant, which will be built on a 104-acre tract at the southeast corner of Oakton Street and Elmhurst Road, will serve Des Plaines, Mount Prospect, Elk Grove Village, Arlington Heights, Wheeling, Buffalo Grove and Rolling Meadows.

Village Atty. Edward Hofert of Elk Grove Village has indicated his community will join with the MSD to prevent any additional delays in construction.

MSD OFFICIALS say the facility will take about 3½ years to construct. The city also expanded its suit against the MSD and the EPA to ask that McMillen review the final environmental impact statement prepared by the EPA on the project.

The new complaint charges the EPA omitted more than 30 separate facts from the final environmental impact statement and that these facts have a bearing on the final approval of the facility.

Included in the complaint is a recommendation by an EPA study team to move the plant to another site. The recommendation was suppressed by EPA officials who later said the recommendation represented only a preliminary view. However, the recommendation was prepared only a week before the agency began preparing the environmental impact statement.

OTHER OMISSIONS from the report include testimony by several city officials, State Sen. David Regner, R-Mount Prospect, and U.S. Rep. Philip M. Crane, R-12th.

McMillen also indicated he will prepare to rule next month on several motions filed with the original suit.

The city contends the MSD must follow its health ordinance for construction and operation of a sewage-treatment plant as a condition for receiving federal funds for the project.

C&NW train kills Palatine boy, 10

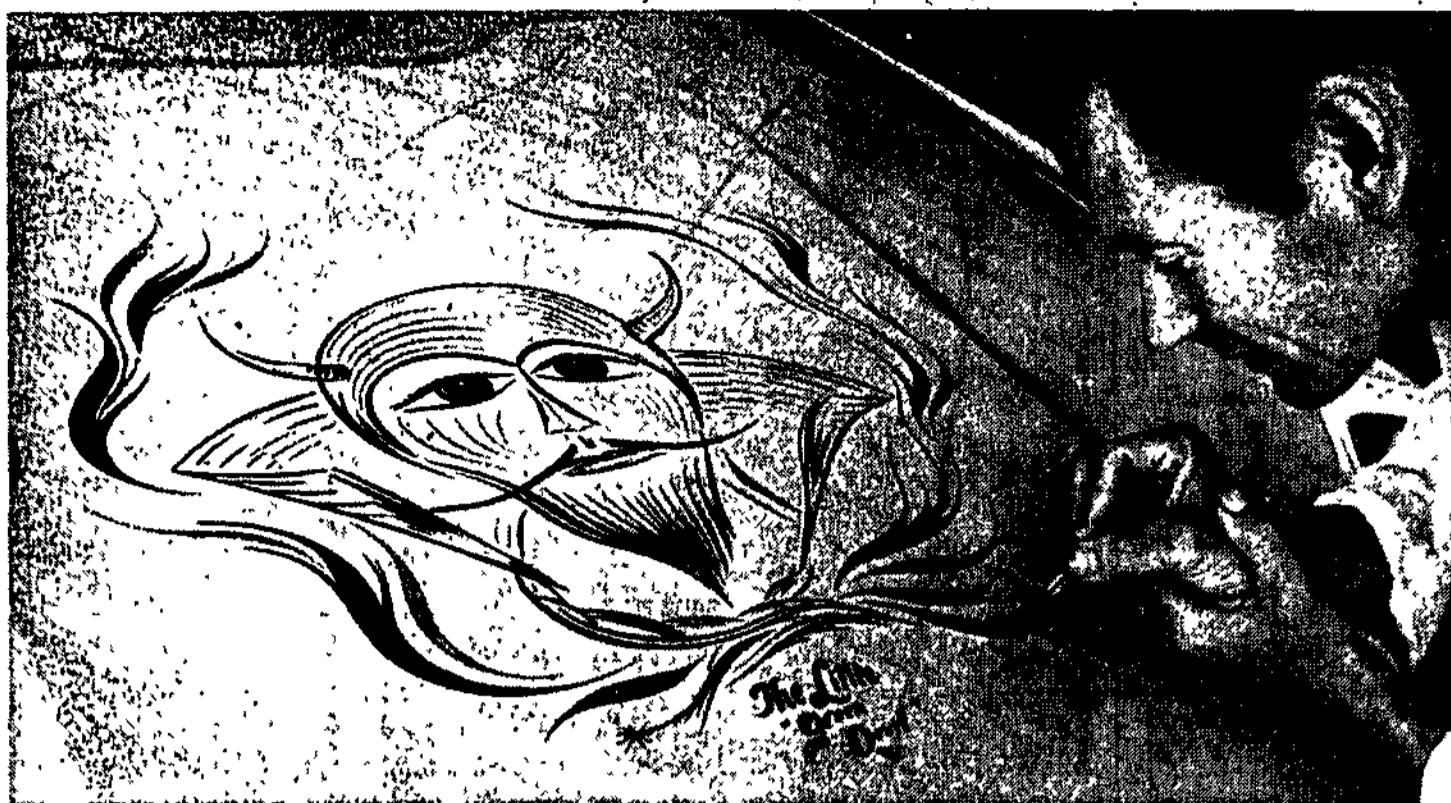

A 10-year-old Palatine boy was killed Wednesday night after he was struck by a Chicago and North Western Ry. passenger train near Washington and Oak streets in Palatine. Police identified the victim as Patrick McCarthy, son of John McCarthy, 301 N. Fremont St.

Police said the boy apparently was watching the train from a dirt path about 8:25 p.m. when he was struck.

Demons, soaring gulls and flaming mountain ranges can all flow from the Hangman's brush onto cars.

The baddest man in town

Sumei art uses the brush to mix and blend colors.

by JOE SWICKARD

The Hangman will give you the ride of your life and paint your wagon with the images of dreams.

Forget foxtails on the aerial or fuzzy dice from the rearview mirror. You're riding in style unmatched if you've got one of The Hangman's painted fantasies on your car.

For the next week or so, he is applying his art at Mark Motors in Arlington Heights.

Crouched next to a sensible Plymouth Duster is The Hangman ("The" to his friends, or the more formal "Thee" if you prefer) stroking and rolling a tapered short handle brush. A landscape of flaming mountains flows almost magically as his hand moves. Just one brush and as many as 23 colors emerge from it.

He gives you his business card that can give you a migraine headache as well. Even without the 3-D calling card with orange polkadots on a gold background, you aren't likely to forget The Hangman.

WHAT KIND of man paints that kind of stuff on the sides of cars?

"You expect to see some retarder with hair down to here in a '60 Volkswagen van. All kinds of dope, a pregnant wife with no bra and an old dog with an ear infection. Right?" he said.

The Hangman knows what people expect to see. What they get is Jim Ballagh, 43-year-old former school teacher now living in Centerville, Iowa. Neatly trimmed and thinning blond hair, comfy suede shoes (with white socks) and a clean white smock.

The Hangman looks more like a laboratory technician than the pinstripping perpetrator he is.

His art is painting fantasy on cars. "It is the next step above and beyond pinstripping. It is sume art — the blending of several colors on one brush at once," he said.

He says there are only three people in the country doing sume; himself and two others he taught.

SUMEI USES the brush instead of a palette for the mixing of the colors. By turning the brush, the colors are exposed and blended on the surface. Because the colors will bleed together, he can get only about 15 strokes before the brush must be remixed.

The Hangman's subjects range from panoramic mountain ranges to highly stylized flames, soaring gulls or freeform designs.

He is working at Mark Motors now because sales manager Rick Durgin saw him in action in Florida. Durgin liked what he saw and invited The Hangman to have a go at the cars in the Arlington Heights agency.

Although Mark Motors also sells Mercedes-Benzes, The Hangman acknowledges his artistry would not quite be what the customer wants on a $10,000 car.

THE WORK on the Dusters led to a custom job for the boyfriend of Durgin's sister. The boyfriend is bringing in more friends and even the 62-year-old woman bookkeeper wants an execution from The Hangman.

"A lot of people don't know exactly

Jim Ballagh, The Hangman, car painter and designer of dreams.

what they want. I don't know what's going to happen either. It just goes," he said.

Just letting it go is a lot of what The Hangman is and believes.

"I was the kid who was being kept after school for drawing in class. I was always in trouble for it. I can't see why they can't recognize a talent — whatever it is: drawing or music or whatever — and let it develop," he said.

Until three years ago he and his wife were employed by a public school system in California. She was the principal and he the teacher letting children learn through their interests. Skills and talents were used as tools to teach other subjects indirectly.

THEY WERE asked to leave and it opened the way for Ballagh to become The Hangman, a name taken from an old Randolph Scott movie.

Travelling the country, he paints cars, sneakers, walls or just about anything that stands still for a minute, and thoroughly enjoys himself.

"I'm a catalyst. I can bring people together and put them at ease. They can enjoy themselves. Take John, a mechanic here. He wanted something on his car but he didn't know what and I didn't either. Who'd ever thought it would be a bunch of fire ants crushing Coors beer cans."

The future may hold another school for he and his wife so some child won't fail because he wants to sing or draw. Jerry Lewis' Muscular Dystrophy telethon will get the proceeds from the auction sale of a van he is going to paint for 24 hours live on television.

The Hangman can realize your dreams in 23 colors from one brush. That's not too bad for a kid who was kept after school for drawing in class.

by JUDY JOBBITT

Teachers have a new motive for going back to school — holding on to their jobs.

Declining enrollment and program changes are sending more teachers back to the classroom to pick up credits toward a new major.

The foreign-language teacher is going back to get credits for teaching European history; the math teacher is headed into computer sciences; the science teacher is entering health education.

While the trend is most noticeable for high school teachers, the number of elementary teachers moving into new subjects also is increasing. They're finding they are more valuable to their school if they can offer themselves as a reading specialist, special-education instructor or learning-center director as well as classroom teacher.

TWO MOTIVES are behind this education trend — the fear of staff cuts because of declining enrollment or finances and the desire to teach subjects recently added to the curriculum.

Teachers say developing new areas of expertise should make them more valuable to their district if cutbacks become a reality.

High school districts 207 and 214 see such cutbacks in the future as they face declining enrollments over the coming years. High School Dist. 211 administrators say declining enrollment is too far off for teachers to be concerned about losing their jobs because of it, but teachers there also are expanding their backgrounds professionally.

"We are seeing teachers coming back for job security," said Michael Thompson, graduate adviser at Northern Illinois University, DeKalb. "People are becoming edgy about their situation. Even though their own situation might not be in jeopardy, they are planning for the future."

HE SAID the trend has developed over the past two years. "At first I thought it was just me seeing things, but it kept up."

He says it is encouraging to see teachers expanding their background because "it makes them a much more interesting teacher."

Edith Gauger of National College of Education, Evanston, said she has received some inquiries from teachers who are looking at the trends in their district and seeing where the opportunities will be in terms of dealing with cutbacks.

She said the major areas elementary teachers are going into are individualized instruction, special education, reading instruction and learning resource center backgrounds.

Northeastern Illinois University, Chicago, also is finding more elementary education teachers are entering fields related to their classroom instruction. Vincent Malek, dean of Northeastern's graduate college, said guidance counseling is another field more teachers are entering. He said teachers can use that knowledge in the classroom now as well as use it in the future if they need to find another teaching job.

TEACHERS ATTENDING DePaul University are looking into business-related courses more than before, said Bernetta Goldsberry, administrative assistant to the liberal arts college dean. "Teachers are going back for degrees in business areas even if they are currently employed as teachers," she said.

When districts cut back, "frills" like music and foreign language, go first, she said. These teachers have limited skills to offer employers outside of teaching so many are preparing themselves in advance to enter the business world in case of staff cuts.

A sampling of teachers who are switching from their original field substantiate the findings of universities.

Norm Horler, a biology teacher at Forest View High School, said he is taking health-education courses to expand his background in biology.

"Since I am teaching biology I have to teach nine weeks of health," he said, referring to the state requirement on health education. "It's an area I've always been interested in. Now that there is a mandate I want to make myself as well qualified as possible."

HE SAID although he doesn't have to worry about staff cuts because of his seniority on staff, he "hopes this will make me more valuable to the district."

Ed Swick, a German and Russian teacher at Prospect High School, has expanded his background in three directions. He has credits to teach English, Russian studies or European history.

"I saw other foreign languages going down and decided to take precautions," he said. "To keep all possibilities open I decided to be prepared to go into the English program." He also expanded his background in Soviet studies and European history.

Norma Schultz of Rolling Meadows High School decided to get credentials to teach business English, which will allow students to receive English credit for the course. Her major is business education. She has taught business English for several years although students couldn't receive English credit for the course. "One reason I went back is because I now will have two strengths to offer the district."

STEVE HERRING of Maine West High School is getting a stronger background in computer science to add to his mathematics major.

Declining enrollment had little to do with his decision to expand his background. "I've always had an interest in computer science," he said. He went back to specialize because "new programs were being started in his field. This year, he offered Maine West students a semester course on computer science in addition to the data-processing course that has been offered the past two years."

But while these teachers say their primary reason for changing majors was an interest in another field or an expanded program, all admit they hope their diverse backgrounds will make them more valuable in case the day of teacher cutbacks comes.

Police see link in armed robberies reported in area

Mount Prospect police said they believe two Old Orchard Country Club busboys were robbed this week by the same gang responsible for similar silckups in the Northwest suburbs during the last six weeks.

"It is very possible this robbery may be connected," said Sgt. Patrick Hallahan, head of the investigative section. "We are investigating that possibility and others."

Three robbers, armed with a gun and two knives, robbed two busboys late Monday in the busboys' residence, at 700 W. Rand Rd. Witnesses said the three fled in a car which may have been driven by a woman.

THE HOLDUP gang of one woman and three men has struck in Elk Grove Village, Palatine, Elmhurst and Wood Dale. It is reportedly headed by the woman, and robs busboys in their homes. Immigration documents and money usually are among the stolen items.

Police said $300 cash, clothing and a $100 tape recorder were taken in the Monday night robbery. The victims were Lorenzo Alva, 19, and Aval Alva, 18.

The three male robbers entered the Alvas' first-floor bedroom about 10 p.m. The robber with the gun ordered the brothers to the floor and demanded money. The robbers spoke only Spanish, police said.

One witness told police he saw three men, matching the robbers' description, with a woman in the Old Orchard Country Club restaurant about four hours before the robbery.

About a month ago, Elk Grove Village Det. Sgt. Ronald Iden said his department learned through interpreters of rumors of other, unreported holdups. The rumors had been circulating through the Mexican community.

Immunization clinic to move

The County Dept. of Public Health immunization clinic will move to the Trinity Lutheran Church, Algonquin and Wolf roads, Des Plaines.

The clinic, formerly at 800 S. Beau Dr., Des Plaines, will be open from 9 a.m. to 11 a.m. the third Thursday of the month beginning July 17. Children up to age 18 may receive free immunizations.

No appointment is necessary. Anyone with a history of allergies or neurological diseases will not be accepted. Signed consent from parent or legal guardian is required for immunization. The child's immunization record also should be brought to the clinic.

2 bound over in burglary, rape cases

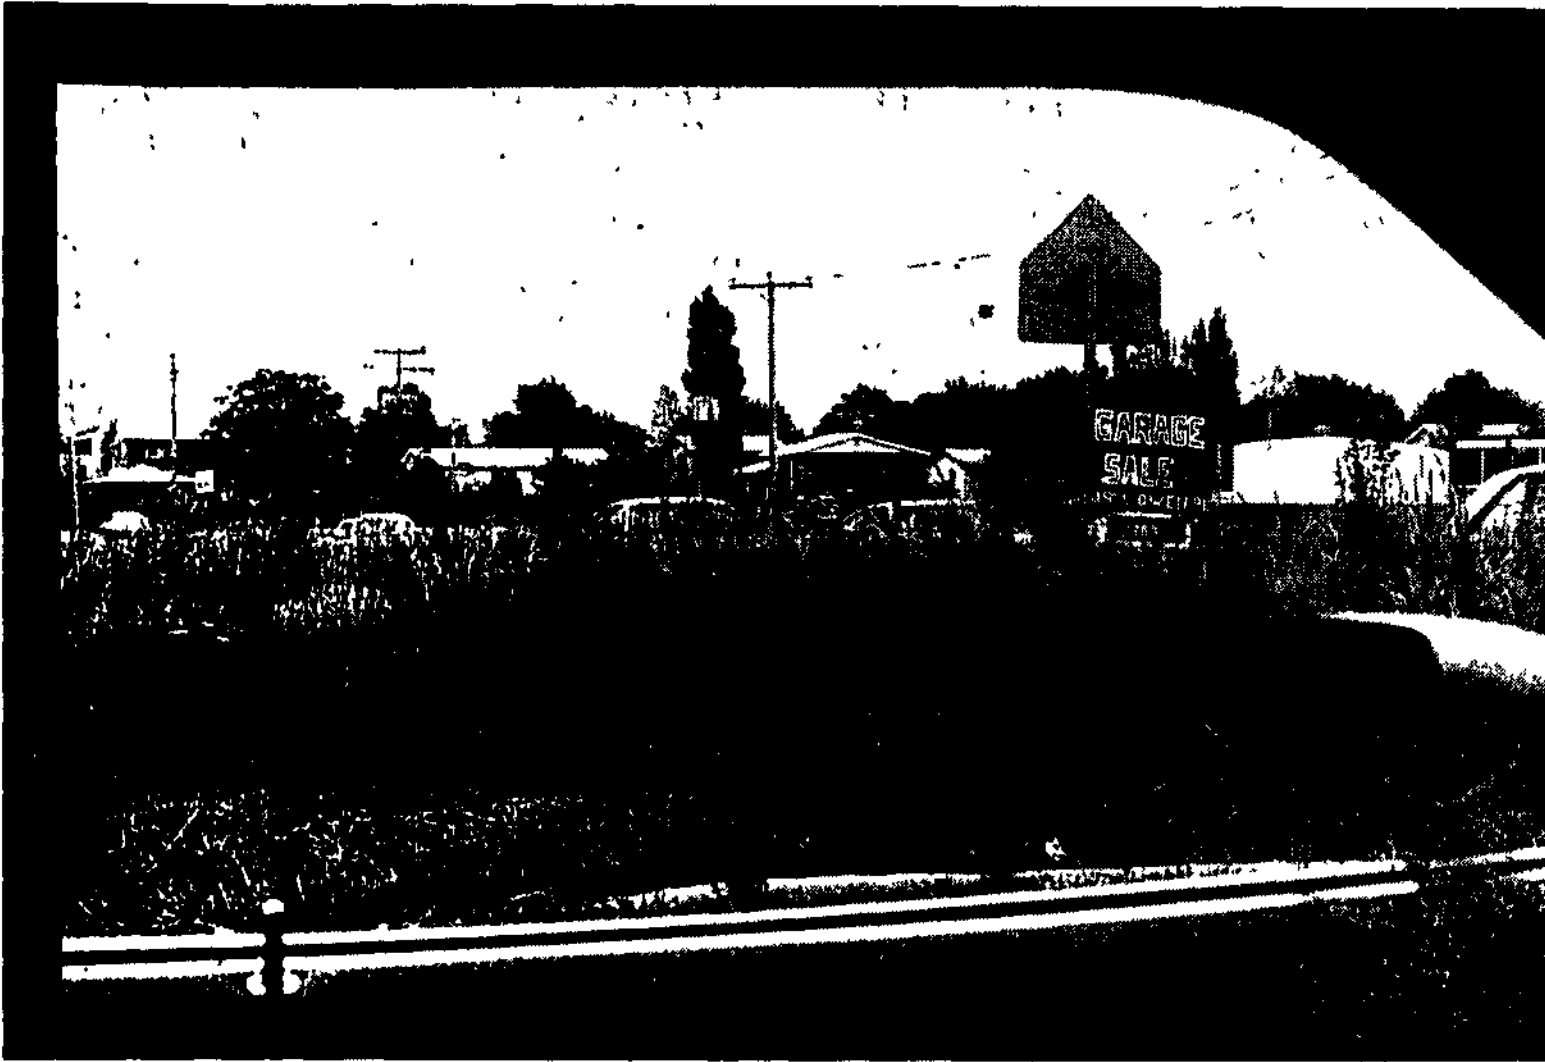

A Mount Prospect man charged with rape and a Des Plaines man charged with burglary and forgery were bound over to the grand jury in separate cases heard Wednesday in the Mount Prospect branch of Circuit Court.

The accused rapist, Charles L. Townsend, 27, of 507 Enterprise, Mount Prospect, was bound over in a case in which he allegedly raped an 18-year-old friend of his wife.

In the other case, Rex A. Austin, 20, of 777 Greenview Ave., Des Plaines, was bound over on burglary and forgery charges. Austin allegedly tried to cash a stolen payroll check April 11 at a currency exchange in the Mount Prospect Plaza.

Both cases were heard by Associate Judge George J. Zimmerman.

ONCOMING TRAFFIC almost disappears behind the weeds, making it hazardous for cars headed south on Wheeling Road to turn onto Euclid Avenue. Residents are complaining about the problem, saying the weeds are making a bad intersection even worse. County officials say the area will be mowed soon.

Towns play 'Who's on first?' over potholes in road

by JOE SWICKARD
Charles Jacobs is getting a first-hand lesson on why taxpayers don't get a chance to turn gray. They tear out their hair in frustration first.

Jacobs, 2407 Oak Ln., Rolling Meadows, was driving along Old Wilke Road, between Algonquin and Central roads, when he had to swerve to the side of the road to avoid an accident. His car went through a deep, jagged-edged pothole that caused the right front tire to blow out. The next day the right rear tire went flat, apparently as a result of the impact.

Potholes deep enough to ruin two tires do not belong on the edge of the pavement, Jacobs figured, and some governmental body should help him replace those tires.

"I WENT TO the county and they told me they had given Old Wilke Road to Rolling Meadows. So I went to Rolling Meadows and they asked me which side of the road it happened on," he said.

The mishap was on the east side and Rolling Meadows officials said that side belonged to Arlington Heights. But Arlington Heights officials said east side or west side, Old Wilke Road is Rolling Meadows' responsibility.

"It has to belong to somebody," Jacobs said. "They each said it belongs to the other one."

He said he feared he was becoming tangled in a classic run-around in trying to collect for his two tires.

JAMES WATSON, Rolling Meadows city manager told The Herald that his city and Arlington Heights have "divided responsibility" for maintaining the roadway because it is the boundary between the two towns.

The west side of the road is in his city and crews stop at the center line when it comes to repairs and patches, Watson said.

Not so, said L. A. Hanson, Arlington Heights village manager.

"That road is Rolling Meadows' responsibility. We've got a copy of a signed agreement between them and the county . . . It was all signed and delivered," Hanson said.

The agreement, dated May 7, 1973,

signed by the Rolling Meadows City Council and the Cook County Board of Commissioners, reaffirms that Old Wilke Road is a Rolling Meadows street upon completion of New Wilke Road.

LEWIS R. Quinlan, of the county highway department, said Old Wilke Road belongs to Rolling Meadows and has letters from attorneys and Rolling Meadows City Council resolutions dating back to 1969 to cement the deal.

"It calls for Rolling Meadows to assume maintenance upon completion of New Wilke Road," Quinlan said. The city took responsibility from the county in 1972, he said.

Hanson said village crews do not perform maintenance on Old Wilke

Road in that stretch between Central and Algonquin roads because the road belongs to Rolling Meadows.

James Muldowney, Rolling Meadows engineer, said his men don't cross the center line because that would be outside the city.

No matter who should be doing the work, an inspection of the road shows none is being done. The pothole that ripped Jacobs' tires is not the only one. The edge of the road is crumbling in places with chunks of broken asphalt littering the shoulder.

"You hear about things like this happening," Jacobs said. "But till it happens to you, you don't know. It makes you wonder about the kinds of governments we have."

No funds to build center

Cultural group ends struggle, votes to disband

The Arlington Heights Cultural Commission voted Wednesday to disband itself, ending a 13-year struggle to build a cultural center in the Northwest suburbs.

The move to "disband gracefully" was made, commissioners said, in recognition of their failure to raise money to build a center for the performing arts on village-owned land at 500 N. Dunton Ave.

"We've done everything we could. We just couldn't build a building," said Comr. Dr. E. Jesse Jacobs.

Chairman Sidney Rosenfeld said he would prepare a "detailed report" of the commissions activities for the village board as well as the recommendation that the present commission dissolve.

The commission had been trying since 1972 to raise funds to build the 1,800-seat multi-purpose center envisioned by theater consultant George C. Izenour, of Yale University. The center would have cost an estimated $3 million.

LAST YEAR the commission selected architect Don M. Hisaka to draw plans for the center and hoped to raise $25,000 to pay him. Hisaka's plans and models would have been used then to raise the rest of the money from individual and corporate donors.

The communitywide solicitation to raise the $25,000 failed. Commissioners blamed inflation and a depressed economy for the lack of success.

The cultural center site was made available to the Arlington Heights Memorial Library earlier this year for their planned expansion. The library's expansion program was set back when a bond issue to finance it was voted down, however the library is expected to hold another referendum later this year.

"The reality has finally hit us," said Comr. Marilyn Marier. "We don't even have the land anymore."

Jacobs said, "I, for one, still believe in the Izenour concept." He said the plans should be saved until the economic picture improves.

Members said if a commission is kept by the village board, its functions should be to foster an interest in the arts. They noted they had been appointed as builders and operators of the center and would remain available if the plans for construction of a center are revived.

Cross-checking auto registrations

Computer to spot sticker violators

The Village of Arlington Heights is beginning a computer check of automobile registrations that will identify residents who have not purchased 1975 village vehicle stickers.

By comparing the names of residents who have cars registered with the Illinois Secretary of State with the list of persons who have purchased an Arlington Heights sticker, village officials will be able to locate cars that do not have a local license.

Kenneth M. Bonder, Arlington Heights finance director, said he estimates 500 to 1,000 of the approximately 32,000 cars in the village do not now have a sticker.

RESIDENTS IDENTIFIED by the cross-reference process will be sent a letter explaining the vehicle sticker requirement, and will have to buy a sticker at the penalty fee of $25, unless they have only recently moved into the village, Bonder said.

The regular cost of the annual sticker, on sale from Dec. 1 to March 1, is $15.

The secretary of state's office supplied a computer print-out of the cars registered in Arlington Heights at no charge. The owners names are alphabetized and were selected by postal zip code.

The names of persons who already have purchased a village sticker were printed on the municipal computer shared by Arlington Heights and three other Northwest suburbs.

This year, the cross check of names will have to be done manually. However, Bonder said by 1976 the entire job will be performed by computer.

"THE ONE PROBLEM we have to watch out for is addresses in unincorporated Arlington Heights," Bonder said. Since the secretary of state's listing was compiled by zip code, it is likely that some persons living in unincorporated Cook County with an Arlington Heights mailing address will turn up.

Bonder said officials plan to double check each address to make sure it is within the village before mailing the notice that an Arlington Heights sticker is required.

"I'm sure that many of the persons who don't have stickers are new in the village," Bonder said.

Persons who have moved to Arlington Heights since the March 1 deadline, or who have bought a new car, do not have to pay the $10 penalty fee.

IN THE PAST, some officials have charged that large numbers of apartment residents fail to buy vehicle stickers every year, and that police enforcement among these apartment residents has been lax.

Bonder said that all Arlington Heights residents, including those living in apartments, who own a car with 1975 Illinois license plates will show up on the state's computer print-out.

The cross check between the village and state lists will go on all summer long. But next year the work will go much faster because of the computer program.

ARLINGTON HEIGHTS firefighters concentrate a stream of water on a fire that gutted an abandoned house Wednesday near Arlington Heights Road and Fairview Lane. No cause for the blaze has been determined. Two Buffalo Grove firetrucks assisted the four Arlington Heights fire units about 3:10 p.m.

Mount Prospect gets water

Retention basin problems may be causing flooding

by LYNN ASINOF

Arlington Heights officials will investigate charges that their storm water retention facilities in the southeast part of the village are not functioning properly, and cause serious flooding in southwest Mount Prospect.

David L. Creamer, Mount Prospect public works director, called for the investigation saying retention basins in the area are not storing water as they should during heavy rains.

"I rarely see water in those retention basins," Creamer said of the area that serves apartment buildings and on park property in the Forest View High School area. "I don't know what the problem is, but the intake lines are the same size as the output lines."

Creamer said that without a restriction in the pipes, the water just rushes through the basin into Mount Prospect sewers in the Mount Shire area. "It is so critical that it is blowing the covers off the manholes in the area," he said.

THOMAS THORNTON of the Arlington Heights Park District admitted the basin at the Forest View Tennis Club, on Falcon Drive, does empty quickly after a heavy storm, but said the basin was approved by the Metropolitan Sanitary District.

Ryan discusses housing on TV today

James T. Ryan, Arlington Heights village president, will appear on a television talk show at 3:30 p.m. today to discuss the subsidized low-income housing development planned next to St. Viator High School.

Salvatore Ferrara, executive director of the Metropolitan Housing Development Corp., which wants to build the low-income housing, also will appear on the show, "Today's Headlines," and broadcast over Channel 26, WCUI.

Viewers will be able to telephone questions and comments to both men by calling the station in Chicago at 663-0553.

The show will last 45 minutes. Ryan and Ferrara are the only two scheduled guests.

"We BECAME interested in the (housing) issue about two weeks ago when word of the court case came over the news wire. We hope to be able to present both sides and also draw some provocative questions and comments," said Marcia Proudfoot, executive producer of "Today's Headlines."

The U.S. Court of Appeals ruled June 10 that the village could not block construction of the proposed development on 15 acres of Viatorian-owned land east of the high school.

The Arlington Heights Village

Board refused in 1971 to rezone the property from single-family to multi-family housing in order to permit construction of the 190 two-story houses proposed in the development known as Lincoln Green.

MHDC subsequently sued the village, charging that the failure to rezone the property was racially discriminatory. The allegation was rejected by the U.S. District Court in February 1974. The appeals court, however, overturned the lower court.

On June 18, the village board voted unanimously to appeal the latest court ruling by first asking for a rehearing before the U.S. Court of Appeals, and, if necessary, petitioning the U.S. Supreme Court to hear the case.

Demons, soaring gulls and flaming mountain ranges can all flow from the Hangman's brush onto cars.

The baddest man in town

Sumei art uses the brush to mix and blend colors.

by JOE SWICKARD
The Hangman will give you the ride of your life and paint your wagon with the images of dreams.
Forget foxtails on the aerial or fuzzy dice from the rearview mirror. You're riding in style unmatched if you've got one of The Hangman's painted fantasies on your car.

For the next week or so, he is applying his art at Mark Motors in Arlington Heights.
Crouched next to a sensible Plymouth Duster is The Hangman ("The" to his friends, or the more formal "Thee" if you prefer) stroking and rolling a tapered short handle brush. A landscape of flaming mountains flows almost magically as his hand moves. Just one brush and as many as 23 colors emerge from it.

He gives you a migraine headache that can give you a migraine headache as well. Even without the 3-D calling card with orange polka dots on a gold background, you aren't likely to forget The Hangman.

WHAT KIND of man paints that kind of stuff on the sides of cars?
"You expect to see some retardos with hair down to here in a '60 Volkswagen van. All kinds of dope, a pregnant wife with no bra and an old dog with an ear infection. Right?" he said.

The Hangman knows what people expect to see. What they get is Jim Ballagh, 43-year-old former school teacher now living in Centerville, Iowa. Neatly trimmed and thinning blond hair, comely suede shoes (with white socks) and a clean white smock. The Hangman looks more like a laboratory technician than the pinstripping perpetrator he is.

His art is painting fantasy on cars. "It is the next step above and beyond pinstripping. It is sumei art — the blending of several colors on one brush at once," he said.

He says there are only three people in the country doing sumei; himself and two others he taught.

SUMEI USES the brush instead of a palette for the mixing of the colors. By turning the brush, the colors are exposed and blended on the surface. Because the colors will bleed together, he can get only about 15 strokes before the brush must be remixed.

The Hangman's subjects range from panoramic mountain ranges to highly stylized flames, soaring gulls or freeform designs.

He is working at Mark Motors now because sales manager Rick Durgin saw him in action in Florida. Durgin liked what he saw and invited The Hangman to have a go at the cars in the Arlington Heights agency.

Although Mark Motors also sells Mercedes-Benzes, The Hangman acknowledges his artistry would not quite be what the customer wants on a $10,000 car.

THE WORK on the Dusters led to a custom job for the boyfriend of Durgin's sister. The boyfriend is bringing in more friends and even the 62-year-old woman bookkeeper wants an execution from The Hangman.

"A lot of people don't know exactly

Jim Ballagh, The Hangman, car painter and designer of dreams.

what they want. I don't know what's going to happen either. It just goes," he said.

Just letting it go is a lot of what The Hangman is and believes.

"I was the kid who was being kept after school for drawing in class. I was always in trouble for it. I can't see why they can't recognize a talent — whatever it is: drawing or music or whatever — and let it develop," he said.

Until three years ago he and his wife were employed by a public school system in California. She was the principal and he the teacher letting children learn through their interests. Skills and talents were used as tools to teach other subjects indirectly.

THEY WERE asked to leave and it opened the way for Ballagh to become The Hangman, a name taken from an old Randolph Scott movie.

Traveling the country, he paints cars, sneakers, walls or just about anything that stands still for a minute, and thoroughly enjoys himself.

"I'm a catalyst. I can bring people together and put them at ease. They can enjoy themselves. Take John, a mechanic here. He wanted something on his car but he didn't know what and I didn't either. Who'd ever thought it would be a bunch of fire ants crushing Coors beer cans."

The future may hold another school for he and his wife so some child won't fail because he wants to sing or draw. Jerry Lewis' Muscular Dystrophy telethon will get the proceeds from the auction sale of a van he is going to paint for 24 hours live on television.

The Hangman can realize your dreams in 28 colors from one brush. That's not too bad for a kid who was kept after school for drawing in class.

by JUDY JOBBITT

Teachers have a new motive for going back to school — holding on to their jobs.

Declining enrollment and program changes are sending more teachers back to the classroom to pick up credits toward a new major.

The foreign-language teacher is going back to get credits for teaching European history; the math teacher is headed into computer sciences; the science teacher is entering health education.

While the trend is most noticeable for high school teachers, the number of elementary teachers moving into new subjects also is increasing. They're finding they are more valuable to their school if they can offer themselves as a reading specialist, special-education instructor or learning-center director as well as classroom teacher.

TWO MOTIVES are behind this education trend — the fear of staff cuts because of declining enrollment or finances and the desire to teach subjects recently added to the curriculum.

Teachers say developing new areas of expertise should make them more valuable to their district if cutbacks become a reality.

High school districts 207 and 214 see such cutbacks in the future as they face declining enrollments over the coming years. High School Dist. 211 administrators say declining enrollment is too far off for teachers to be concerned about losing their jobs because of it, but teachers there also are expanding their backgrounds professionally.

"We are seeing teachers coming back for job security," said Michael Thompson, graduate adviser at Northern Illinois University, DeKalb. "People are becoming edgy about their situation. Even though their own situation might not be in jeopardy, they are planning for the future."

HE SAID the trend has developed over the past two years. "At first I thought it was just me seeing things, but it kept up."

He says it is encouraging to see teachers expanding their background because "it makes them a much more interesting teacher."

Edith Gauger of National College of Education, Evanston, said she has received some inquiries from teachers who are looking at the trends in their district and seeing where the opportunities will be in terms of dealing with cutbacks.

She said the major areas elementary teachers are going into are individualized instruction, special education, reading instruction and learning resource center backgrounds.

Northeastern Illinois University, Chicago, also is finding more elementary education teachers are entering fields related to their classroom instruction. Vincent Malek, dean of Northeastern's graduate college, said guidance counseling is another field more teachers are entering. He said teachers can use that knowledge in the classroom now as well as use it in the future if they need to find another teaching job.

TEACHERS ATTENDING DePaul University are looking into business-related courses more than before, said Bernetta Goldsberry, administrative assistant to the liberal arts college dean. "Teachers are going back for degrees in business areas even if they are currently employed as teachers," she said.

When districts cut back, "frills" like music and foreign language, go first, she said. These teachers have limited skills to offer employers outside of teaching so many are preparing themselves in advance to enter the business world in case of staff cuts.

A sampling of teachers who are switching from their original field substantiate the findings of universities.

Norm Horler, a biology teacher at Forest View High School, said he is taking health-education courses to expand his background in biology.

"Since I am teaching biology I have to teach nine weeks of health," he said, referring to the state requirement on health education. "It's an area I've always been interested in. Now that there is a mandate I want to make myself as well qualified as possible."

HE SAID although he doesn't have to worry about staff cuts because of his seniority on staff, he "hopes this will make me more valuable to the district."

Ed Swick, a German and Russian teacher at Prospect High School, has expanded his background in three directions. He has credits to teach English, Russian studies or European history.

"I saw other foreign languages going down and decided to take precautions," he said. "To keep all possibilities open I decided to be prepared to go into the English program." He also expanded his background in Soviet studies and European history.

Norma Schultz of Rolling Meadows High School decided to get credentials to teach business English, which will allow students to receive English credit for the course. Her major is business education. She has taught business English for several years although students couldn't receive English credit for the course. "One reason I went back is because I now will have two strengths to offer the district."

STEVE HERRING of Maine West High School is getting a stronger background in computer science to add to his mathematics major.

Declining enrollment had little to do with his decision to expand his background. "I've always had an interest in computer science," he said. He went back to specialize because new programs were being started in his field. This year, he offered Maine West students a semester course on computer science in addition to the data-processing course that has been offered the past two years.

But while these teachers say their primary reason for changing majors was an interest in another field or an expanded program, all admit they hope their diverse backgrounds will make them more valuable in case the day of teacher cutbacks comes.

Retention basin problems may be causing flooding

Creamer said the problem may extend beyond the retention basins. He said Arlington Heights may have extended the sewer that empties into Mount Prospect's sewers, thus bringing more water into the sewer. "We've had a drastic change in the stormwater input," Creamer said.

THERE ARE two ways to handle the problem, Creamer said. "We either have to put another sewer in from that point over to the retention basin, or we're going to have to crack down on the amount of water coming in, and they're going to have to hold back some of their own water," he said.

Mount Prospect already has plans for a new sewer that would run up the western edge of the village and jog over to the Clearwater Park retention basin at Golf and Busse roads. The project is estimated to cost about $200,000, and was originally proposed as part of the village's $2 million flood control improvements program.
